U.S. JUDGE HULEN FOUND FATALLY SHOT, DIES AS HE IS OPERATED ON Rushed to Hospital After Being Discovered With Head Wound Where He Practiced Shooting.

United States District Judge Rubey M. Hulen died of a gunshot wound in the head yesterday about four hours after he was found in the back yard of his home at 16 Southmoor drive, Clayton, with a pistol nearby.

Judge Hulen died at Barnes Hospital at 1:50 p.m., as he underwent brain surgery, after being transferred from St. Louis County Hospital, where he had been given emergency treatment.

A gardener found him where the judge occasionally practiced markmanship with a revolver.

Funeral services for Judge Hulen will be at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the Lupton undertaking establishment, 7233 Delmar boulevard, University City. The body will be cremated.

Dr. Frank R. Bradley, director of Barnes Hospital, said surgery was necessary to control a brain hemorrhage. The cause of death, he said, was brain damage. The bullet had entered the head near the right temple, Dr. Bradley said, and ranged upward emerging from the top of the skull. It had severed the right lateral sinus.

Found By Gardener.

Judge Hulen was found wounded by his gardener, Ivory Robertson, 1719 Belle Glade avenue, who told Clayton Police Sgt. Joseph Kelly that the judge was lying in the grass on his back with his .32-caliber revolver near his left foot.

Mrs. Hulen told Kelly her husband had planned to go to Barnes Hospital today for a complete physical checkup. He had been suffering from high blood pressure and insomnia, his physicians told the Post-Dispatch. He was 62 years old.

He had arranged for a friend of the family to stay with Mrs. Hulen while he was at the hospital, Kelly was told, and because of this he mentioned to his wife at breakfast that he would remove the revolver which he kept in a dresser drawer in his room to a hiding place in the basement for safekeeping during his hospital stay.

Mrs. Hulen told the officer that the judge had the revolver in his pocket at breakfast.

Heard a Shot.

Robertson said he saw the judge walk to a place in the yard, about 50 yards southwest of the house near a wood pile, where he customarily practiced shooting at squirrels and rabbits. When Robertson heard a shot, he thought nothing of it, he told Kelly.

The gardener, a Negro, estimated it was about 20 minutes after he head the shot before he found the judge lying on the ground. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Mrs. Hulen was accompanied by Forrest Hemker, an attorney, and Mrs. George Stemmler, wife of a former city counselor, at the hospital during the operation. The Hemkers and Stemmlers are close friends of the Hulens. United States District Judge George H. Moore and his wife also were there with Mrs. Hulen.

Judge Hulen presided at the lengthy trial of T. Lamar Caudle and Matthew J. Connelly, both former officials in the Truman Administration, who were convicted of conspiring to defraud the Government last June 14.

Was to Sentence Them July 19.

He had set July 19 as the date for sentencing them and for hearing defense motions for a new trial.

Effect of his death on those proceedings was uncertain yesterday. Judge Moore declined

AIRLINER MAKES FORCED LANDING HERE, 51 ABOARD

An American Airlines DC-7 plane bound for Tulsa, Okla., made an emergency landing at Lambert-St. Louis Field yesterday afternoon after mechanical difficulties stopped one of its four engines and caused another to smoke.

The plane carried 46 passengers and a crew of five.

Crash equipment and fire-fighting apparatus were called out at Lambert field after the pilot reported trouble in the left outboard engine while passing over Perryville, Mo., and requested permission to land at the nearest field.

A spokesman for American said the right outboard engine began to smoke and throw a spray of oil as the plane approached Lambert field.

He said the cause of both failures will not be known until a complete mechanical inspection is made.

The flight originated in New York and stopped at Washington, D. C., en route to Tulsa, and from there was due to proceed to San Francisco.

Passengers were transferred to other American flights to continue their journey.

PRESIDENT SPENDS FULL DAY RELAXING WITH HIS FAMILY

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 7 (AP)—President Eisenhower relaxed with his family—grandchildren and all—on this sunny Saturday, his political plans quite possibly decided though still top secret.

Reporters tried anew to crack the silence barrier but Press Secretary James C. Hagerty gave out exactly nothing on the question: Does the President still plan to run again?

The impression was practically unanimous hereabouts that the answer is yes and that Mr. Eisenhower may say it publicly before leaving his Gettysburg farm, where he is recuperating from his June 9 intestinal operation.

Hagerty disclosed that Mr. Eisenhower knew of the newspaper speculation to this effect.

"What did he say?" a reporter asked.

"It was a personal conversation between him and myself," Hagerty replied.

The President is expected to remain at the farm at least another week before returning to Washington.

PALESTINE CLASH REPORTED

FLORENCE, Italy, July 7 (AP)—The skulls of the Medicis are back with their other bones—after eight years apart. Scientists decided to study 23 skulls of the famous family that ruled medieval Florence, and tney opened the huge granite coffins in the Church of San Lorenzo. Skull measurements proved nothing much of scientific value.

RHODES FACING FIGHT TO RETAIN HIS SCHOOL POST

G. H. Fletcher, Another Candidate, Considered by Some on Board.

School Building Commissioner V. Harry Rhodes will face serious opposition from some Board of Education members in his attempt to win reappointment for another four-year term, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Rhodes's present term in his $15,000-a-year job is expiring. Board members who will vote on his reappointment Tuesday night have been giving consideration to another candidate, George H. Fletcher, an engineer.

Fletcher, who operates an engineering business bearing his name from his residence at 3504 Evergreen lane, Lemay, has been seeking the commissioner's position aggressively. He has visited almost every board member to set forth his qualifications.

Rhodes has been a controversial figure in the school system ever since he was first appointed in 1948 to succeed the late Joseph Sullivan as commissioner. He was reappointed in 1952. Both times there was substantial opposition on the board. There are about 1000 employes in his department, which has a budget for 1956-57 of almost $5,500,000.

Faction Critical.

Members of the board's so-called "blue ribbon" faction, which is now in a minority, have been most critical of Rhodes. He has generally been defended by the majority "old guard" group. However, some of the "old guard" members reportedly have been critical of Rhodes recently.

"Blue ribbon" members have attacked the commissioner recently for hiring more employes than were called for in his budget and for requesting additional money with which to pay them. They also have questioned whether some school jobs he has proposed to undertake with his own workmen were not larger than permitted by state law.

Fletcher, 43 years old, was graduated from Missouri School of Mines at Rolla in 1934 and worked for several engineering and contracting firms in this area before establishing his own business.

For more than two years at the end of World War II, he said, he was in charge of the disposal of plants and other industrial property in eastern Missouri and southern Illinois for the War Assets Administration.

Has Built Schools.

In that position, he estimated, he supervised more than 1000 employes, including members of most craft unions and office workers. As an engineer, Fletcher said, "I have built almost every type of building, including schools."

Zoo Is Offered Surprise Gift Of Rare Giraffe-Like Okapi

An okapi, a rare giraffe-like animal from Equatorial Africa, has been offered to the St. Louis Zoo as a surprise gift from the government of the Belgian Congo, zoo officials announced yesterday.

The animal will be shipped here next October in company with three other okapis which are being donated to zoos in Chicago, New York and Washington.

Zoo Director George P. Vierheller, elated by the gift, recalled that he tried to acquire an okapi or two in 1948, but failed because of cost and transportation difficulties. There are now only two okapis in United States zoos, he said.

The okapi has a shorter neck than the giraffe and a shorter history, too, having had the good fortune to escape discovery by civilized man until 1900.

The relative novelty of the animal may have influenced compilers of Webster's International Dictionary to depart from their usual non-committal approach to definitions. They term the okapi "a peculiar mammal."

C.A.B. MAN PUTS RESPONSIBILITY BEFORE CRASH ON TWA'S PILOT

Testifies Trans World Ship Was to Look Out for United Craft After Changing Elevation.

LAS VEGAS, Nev., July 7 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board's chief inspector indicated today that the primary flight responsibility before the Grand Canyon air crash June 30 rested with the pilot of a Trans-World Airliner.

The big TWA Super-Constellation carrying 70 person collided with a United Air Lines DC-7 carrying 58 high over the canyon. The two planes crashed within a mile of each other, killing all 128 in commercial aviation's worst disaster. Both planes were eastbound from Los Angeles and took off only three minutes apart.

William K. Andrews, director of CAB's safety investigation division, who said, "it was a definite collision," told a House Commerce subcommittee:

"TWA was advised that United Air Lines was traffic. There is no indication that United Air Lines was advised TWA was traffic."

By this, Andrews meant that the TWA pilot had been informed that the U.A.L. plane was flying at 21,000 feet before being granted permission to change his elevation from 19,000 feet to "1000 feet on top" of thunderclouds.

Clouds at 20,000 Feet.

The top of the thunderclouds was estimated at about 20,000 feet, which also put TWA in the 21,000-foot range.

Later Oscar Bakke, deputy director of the CAB's Bureau of Safety Regulations, contradicted Andrews's statement that TWA had primary responsibility for looking out for the United airliner in climbing from 19,000 to 21,000 feet.

"Outside controlled areas there are no instructions that are pertinent or binding," Bakke said. "Both pilots were on their own."

He said that the United pilot was "burdened" to look out for other airplanes despite his IFI (instrument flight rules) clearance if he were flying above the cloudy weather.

Bakke said further that "nowhere in the regulations is positive separation (of planes) provided for off airways."

This prompted Chairman Harris to ask, "What would be wrong with requiring air carriers to follow government airways on all routes?"

"Lack of flexibility," Bakke replied. "Greater flexibility permits carriers to select the best weather. A pilot should have the discretion to fly the route which he thinks best."

'Getting Into Jet Age.'

Harris then commented:

"I think the board and everyone else is going to have to consider that this transition period is getting out ahead of us. We are getting into the jet age. If we don't have control over them (jets), we're going to have a much more serious condition."

Andrews, first witness at the subcommittee hearing presided over by Representative Oren Harris (Dem.), Arkansas, said also:

"United was on IFR (instrument flight rules) control as it crossed the airways. The TWA captain was free to go up and down as he saw fit because he was on VFR (visual flight rules)."

Pressed by Congressmen, Andrews agreed that the only safety factor under the circumstances was "the sight of the pilot given the VFR clearance."

By this, Andrews said, he meant that it was the TWA pilot's responsibility to be on the lookout for and avoid the United plane.

"TWA had full responsibility for maintaining separation," Andrews told the subcommittee.

Pilots 'on Their Own.'

(The United Press said the first session of the hearing also brought out this testimony:

(1—The two planes were flying outside of Civil Aeronautics Administration traffic control, with the pilots more or less "on their own".

(2—There is no regulation providing that the planes over "uncontrolled territory", had to report in to the CAA or their companies or that their companies had to interchange information on their positions.

(3—The planes apparently were flying at the same altitude, 21,000 feet, only three minutes apart in flying time and about 40 miles apart when they were last heard from after leaving Los Angeles.

(Representative Carl Hinshaw, (Rep.), California, stated before the inquiry started that the committee wanted to determine "why the first plane was delayed in departure . . . with that delay, the TWA plane took off only three minutes before the scheduled departure of the faster VAL plane.")

The subcommittee flew here yesterday to conduct a thorough inquiry into the disaster.

Andrews, who heads the CAB's investigation at the scene, about 135 airline miles from Las Vegas, came here to testify. He said no witnesses had been found who saw the crash—

EISENHOWER, TOP AID PERSUADED COOPER TO ENTER RACE FOR SENATE

Sherman Adams Laid Groundwork to Convince Kentuckian — President's Phone Plea Clinched It.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1956, Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, July 7 — President Eisenhower has intervened personally to persuade John Sherman Cooper, at present ambassador to India, to run for the Senate in Kentucky, on the plea that the Cooper candidacy is essential to strengthen the Eisenhower ticket in November.

This action by the President is the surest confirmation thus far that his second major illness has in no way altered his announced intention to seek a second term. Cooper, in Washington in connection with hearings on the foreign aid bill, sent a wire to the Republican state convention in Kentucky today, saying he would be a candidate. He was promptly nominated to run for the second Senate seat in that state, made vacant by the death of Alben W. Barkley.

One June 2, he told Kentucky Republicans that he believed his assignment in India was of supreme importance and that he therefore must decline to run. In his wire today he said he had changed his mind because the President had personally asked him to make the race.

Power of Adams Disclosed.

Behind this development is an extraordinary sequence of events, which shows among other things the remarkable power being exercised by Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams. Aside from those who have occupied the presidential chair, perhaps no figure in American history has exercised such authority from the White House.

With the President still convalescing, the degree of authority which Adams wields makes the role of Col. Edward M. House under Woodrow Wilson and Harry Hopkins under Franklin D. Roosevelt look pale.

Early yesterday morning Adams telephoned Cooper and said he wanted to see him at once in his office. Shortly after 8 o'clock Cooper went to the White House. In his direct, almost blunt New England manner, Adams got down to the point.

It was imperative that Cooper run since if he were on the ticket along with Thruston Ballard Morton, former representative from Kentucky and former assistant secretary of state in charge of liaison with Congress, running for the other Senate place, and with Mr. Eisenhower, the Republicans were almost sure to pick up two seats now held by Democrats.

Might Decide Control.

The control of the Senate might well turn on this. The Democrats now have 49 seats, the Republicans 47.

That argument had been made before by Republicans high and low, and Cooper had consistently said no. In his 17 months in India he has formed a friendly working relationship with Prime Minister Nehru and he holds the strong conviction that it is vital to America to win and retain the good will of neutral India.

A reason for his presence here was the scheduled visit of Nehru to Washington for conferences with Mr. Eisenhower. Nehru was to have arrived today but the visit was "postponed" while Mr. Eisenhower was still in Walter Reed hospital, on the ground that the President's convalescence would not have progressed far enough for hours of frank talk on the problems that have troubled the Indo-American relationship.

Cooper told Adams he did not believe he should change his mind, since he felt he still had a contribution to make toward bettering relations between the greatest power in the West and the chief neutral power.

Unfair to President.

Adams then argued that it was manifestly unfair to expect the President to run if members of the team were themselves reluctant to go out on the firing line.

Still Cooper, a man of quiet and deep convictions, said that he thought his duty lay in returning to New Delhi for at least another year. If he were not to return it would be interpreted in India as meaning that domestic political considerations had been put ahead of Indian relations.

He also pointed out how long and hard he had worked to help bring about the Nehru visit, his disappointment when it did not come off, and his obligation to try to arrange another conference between the Prime Minister and the President.

With this Adams telephoned the President at Gettysburg. He asked him if he would speak to Cooper and the President requested that the Ambassador be put on the wire.

What a President says under such circumstances is, of course confidential. But there is little

SUITS FOR NEW PENALTIES AND INJUNCTION DRAFTED BY STATE IN GAS STRIKE

Enters Senate Race

JOHN SHERMAN COOPER, United States Ambassador to India, talking on the telephone at his residence in Washington, D.C., yesterday, after accepting the nomination of the Kentucky State Republican Committee for the unexpired term of the late Alben W. Barkley.

ACTIONS ALREADY FILED ASK FOR $35,000 FROM 3 UNIONS, LEADERS

Attorney for Workers Says He Will Start Court Test Tomorrow of King - Thompson Law's Validity.

Additional penalty suits and an injunction proceeding against striking Laclede Gas workers are being prepared by Attorney General John M. Dalton for filing this week, the Post-Dispatch was told last night.

Suits seeking financial penalties totaling $35,000 from three local unions of gas workers and five union officers were filed here yesterday by Assistant Attorney General Robert Welborn. Exact time for filing the additional suits has not been fixed, although there were indications the action would take place Tuesday, if the strike is still in progress.

Under the King-Thompson Act a fine of $10,000 may be sought against a union for each day that it strikes against a public utility after state seizure, and a $1000 fine (total) can be sought from a union officer supporting the strike. The penalties must be recovered through civil suits.

Meetings Resumed.

Representatives of the strikers and the company were conferring again with federal mediators in separate sessions beginning shortly before 9 o'clock last night. There was no indication from any quarter as to how long the talks might continue.

A gas line in a valve box at the northeast corner of Manchester avenue and Benton terrace was cut last night at about 7:30 o'clock. A witness notified police, and the union sent two men promptly to close the valve. The hiss of escaping gas could be heard for about 100 yards.

The witness said two men drove up to the box and one unlocked it and reached in, and then they drove off. The union repair men broke the lock to get to the valve.

Bricks were thrown through two windows of the home of a non-striking Laclede employe, Max W. Paffrath, at 7314 Cheshire lane, Affton, last night, when no one was at home. A neighbor reported the incident to St. Louis county police.

Each Union Sued for $10,000.

Penalties of $10,000 each, for failure to return to work last Friday were sought against Locals 6, 194 and 109 AFL-CIO Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers. Individuals named in yesterday's action are international union representatives Joseph Appelbaum and William Wynn and the presidents of the three local unions, Howard Carson, Kenneth Finerty and William McLaughlin. A penalty of $1000 is sought from each officer.

The main issue is over the method of handling "riser" connections on gas lines, through which gas is piped to heating plant and appliances beyond the meter. The company contends that the work should be done by fewer men than the union proposes to use.

An attorney for the union, Morris J. Levin, said he planned to file suit in circuit court tomorrow contesting validity of the seizure and constitutionality of the King-Thompson Act.

Welborn said the gas workers cannot be forced to return to their jobs, through injunction, or other court action.

"No one can be ordered into involuntary servitude," Welborn observed.

Union leaders defying an injunction could be cited for contempt of court, and the statute provides loss of job seniority for rank and file members.

Heavier Picketing Voted.

At a meeting yesterday at a union hall at 6141 Etzel avenue, Wellston, the strikers gave their negotiating committee a vote of confidence and approved a motion to conduct heavier picketing at Laclede installations. Picketing since the start of the walkout, a week ago, has been by small groups on a round-the-clock basis at 27 installations.

Appelbaum and the other union officers named in the penalty suits, were served with copies of the petitions during the mass meeting. Appelbaum, outlining the six proposals made by the union for solving the controversial "riser connection" issue, termed company efforts to turn that work over to private contractors "dastardly." He described the company's attitude toward union demands as arrogant.

The union officer said the strike was the first official walkout since 1935, "a fine record for the gas workers." Apple-

ARMY PANTIES NOT SCANTIES, BRITISH GIRLS COMPLAIN

LONDON, July 7 (AP) — Dame Irene Ward served notice in the House of Commons today she is going to uphold vigorously efforts of British army girls to escape wearing government issue panties.

Panties is the government word — the girls call them "baggy bloomers" and say they were designed for World War I.

Dame Irene, a Conservative member of Parliament, said she would bring up the matter in the House of Commons Wednesday by asking Defense Minister Sir Walter Monckton to give the Army lassies a pantie allowance.

"With that money," said Dame Irene, "they can buy their own and not have to wear those horrors presently supplied by the Women's Royal Army Corps."

A WRAC girl, interviewed at a London service club, said: "Those khaki bloomers are so long that they would show beneath our skirts—if we wore them. Not one girl in 50 wears them. We buy our own."

PARAPLEGIC VET BEGS VANDALS NOT TO DESTROY HOUSE

PASSAIC, N.J., July 7 (AP) —A paraplegic veteran today pleaded with vandals to stop wrecking his special house being constructed on city-donated land. Richard J. O'Brien Jr., who was paralyzed from the waist down in the Korean war, asked police for special guards for the house.

O'Brien noted that the city's gift of some unused park property for his house was resented by some people who said "there will be no park property left soon."

The house is being equipped with special devices to aid the paralyzed veteran. In recent weeks, O'Brien said, vandals ripped down every piece of insulation installed by the contractor, broke windows, ripped out valuable electrical equipment, and stole materials.

DUKE OF EDINBURGH INVENTS ELECTRIFIED TABLE CLOTH

LONDON, July 7 (UP)—The Duke of Edinburgh has invented an electrified table cloth, a London newspaper reported today.

The Evening Standard said it will enable Queen Elizabeth to place electric candelabra onto the table cloth of the royal yacht Britannia and have them light up without unsightly wires.

The paper said the 58-foot table cloth has "hundreds of yards of wire sandwiched between layers of felt and latex." Each of the candelabra has two small pins in its base which stick into the wired tablecloth.

PUT BABY IN ANY CHURCH, MOTHER ASKS KIDNAPER

Ministers, Priests, Rabbis Agree to Keep Houses of Worship Open 24 Hours a Day.

WESTBURY, N.Y., July 7 (UP)—The mother of kidnaped 5-week-old Peter Weinberger appealed to the abductor today to leave the child in any church or synagogue in the New York City area. Religious authorities agreed to keep every house of worship open around the clock to receive the child.

The appeal was made and acted on as police sealed off a 16-block area around the Weinberger home on Long Island and adopted a tight secrecy policy while awaiting possible word from the abductor.

Peter was kidnaped Wednesday for a $2000 ransom. A telephone caller later increased the ransom to $5000 and the family said it was willing to pay "any amount" for the return of the child.

The Weinberger family disclosed today another call had been received yesterday afternoon from the same person who increased the ransom. The call was made after the family announced to the press they would pay the higher sum.

Gives No Identification.

It was learned, however, that the caller had not yet identified himself in a way to make the family certain he was the kidnaper. A reliable source said there were definite means for the abductor to identify himself to the Weinbergers by telephone.

Meanwhile hopes of some police officials dimmed on the third day after Peter was taken from his carriage in the family patio. There were fears the boy would not be found alive, but police still worked on the theory he was all right.

Two men picked up for questioning last night failed to give any useful information, police said, and were released this afternoon.

In her latest appeal for the return of her child, Mrs. Betty Weinberger asked that all places of worship be available as a point where the baby could be left by the kidnaper. Leaders of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths immediately announced their houses of worship would remain open 24 hours a day.

Mrs. Weinberger appealed

Radio Station Faced With Hard Problem in Soft Drink Offer

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 7 (UP) —More than 1000 requests to make good on a July Fourth promise by disk jockeys had been received by Radio Station KRUX here today.

The disk jockeys had promised a soft drink to everyone in Arizona if no traffic deaths were recorded on the state's highways during the Fourth. No one was killed, and the station was in the position of having to buy soda pop for the state's 1,040,000 residents, at a cost of $50,000.

"We're ready to live up to our end of this bargain," said David Bartell, chairman of the board of Bartell radio stations, which own KRUX.

The offer was an ad lib by one of the disk jockeys, who figured he had a safe promise to make, because Arizona regularly recorded traffic deaths on holidays.

The station received a telegram from a soft-drink manufacturer offering to "help out." It was signed "best regards and sympathy."

The offer provided that the population, to collect the soft drinks, had to request the drinks by card or letter.

CHIANG ASSURED BY EISENHOWER OF UNWAVERING SUPPORT BY U.S.

Nixon Delivers Letter Praising Nationalist Leader's Progress — Warm Welcome for Vice President.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

TAIPEI, Formosa, Sunday, July 8—President Eisenhower assured Generallisimo Chiang Kai-shek of unwavering United States support of Nationalist China in a personal letter delivered last night by Vice President Richard M. Nixon, shortly after the latter's arrival here on a good will visit.

The President told the Nationalist leader to have "no misapprehension" about United States "steadfastness" on this score.

"International communism alters its tactics from time to time, but we have as yet no evidence of any change in its objectives," Mr. Eisenhower said. "The American people and government realize this.

"Likewise, let there be no misapprehension about our own steadfastness in continuing to support the Republic of China."

Sending a "warm personal greeting" to Chiang, Mr. Eisenhower said he had asked Nixon to make a special trip here to convey his admiration for the Nationalists' "unyielding stand" against communism.

Encouraged by Progress.

He praised the Generalissimo's "leadership and courage" as an "inspiration" to the Chinese people and to "free men everywhere who have stood firm against the Communist tyranny."

"I am encouraged to hear of the progress which has been made in improving the security and well-being of the people of Taiwan (Formosa) despite the danger and difficulties confronting you," Mr. Eisenhower said. "I am sure that you share my own confidence that the close co-operation which has so long characterized our relations will continue. No problems are too great for solution when a will to work together exists."

Mr. Eisenhower's letter to Chiang was received at the United States embassy before Nixon's plane landed at Taipei's Pine Hill airfield from Saigon last night. It was delivered when the Vice President and Mrs. Nixon reached Tsaoshan (Grass Mountain), about a half hour's drive from Taipei, where they spent the night in a guest house near the Chiang residence.

Waited Up for Guest.

The 69-year-old Generalissimo waited up for Nixon. Both were smiling broadly when they posed for pictures before retiring.

They were scheduled to confer this morning following breakfast at the Chiang home. The Nixons, who already have visited Manila and Saigon on their Asian good will tour, are scheduled to leave for Bangkok at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon after a 15-hour stay here.

President Eisenhower's letter was expected to relieve at least some of the doubts and suspicions that have existed here regarding the future course of United States policy on China. Extra uneasiness was generated in Taipei by the statement in Robert Donovan's book, "Eisenhower: The Inside Story," that the President had strongly resisted being maneuvered into a rigid position on Red China.

The President's letter to Chiang also followed a recent jibe by Chinese Communist Premier Chou En-lai that the Nationalists could not depend on the United States as an ally. Chou taunted the Nationalists on this point while offering to negotiate with the "Taiwan authorities" for Peiping's "peaceful liberation" of the Nationalist territory.

Press Concerned.

The Nationalists quickly rejected the Chinese Communist proposal. Meanwhile, the Nationalist press has continued to reflect concern about United States policy. In an editorial published yesterday before Nixon's arrival, the United Daily News here commented:

"First of all we want to know just what is the basic Far Eastern policy of the United States. We have been perplexed by talk about 'flexibility' and even the displaying of an understanding attitude toward the so-called neutralists.

"Mr. Nixon's Manila speech and recent statements of Secretary Dulles did clarify the American stand somewhat. But their words have yet to be borne out by deeds."

Nixon got an extremely cordial welcome when he landed here. The welcomers included Chinese and United States officials as well as non-American members of the Taipei diplomatic colony. Groups of Chinese lined the streets to catch a glimpse of Nixon's car as it took the Vice President to Tsaoshan.

Among the Chinese welcomers at the airfield were Vice President Chen Cheng, Premier O. K. Yui, Foreign Minister George K. C. Yeh and C. K. Yen, Governor of Taiwan. The United States officials were headed by Ambassador Karl L. Rankin.

Named Subcommittee Counsel.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (UP) — Chairman James C. Davis (Dem.), Georgia, today announced appointment of William Gerber, Memphis attorney, as counsel of the House District subcommittee investigating juvenile delinquency in Washington. Gerber, 57 years old, is a former Memphis city attorney and assistant district attorney of Shelby county, Tenn.

PUBLIC SEASHORE DWINDLING, PLEA TO SAVE IT MADE

WASHINGTON, July 7—The National Parks Service reported today that "one of the nation's greatest recreation resources" was disappearing at an alarming rate, and said if public-minded citizens and their Government did not do something soon a "priceless heritage" could be lost.

A recently completed survey of Atlantic and Gulf coasts from Calais, Me., to Brownsville, Tex., disclosed that in this 3700 mile stretch of coastline only 240 miles were now in federal and state hands for public recreational purposes.

Most of the rest, the survey showed, is either already developed by private owners, or is undeveloped seashore dwindling fast "under pressures of a booming market" for ocean frontage.

"The number of persons seeking to acquire seashore property is skyrocketing and so is the price," the report said.

The survey cited a 30-mile strip of undeveloped seashore that could have been bought for $260,000 in 1935. Now only nine miles remain undeveloped and could be expected to sell, the survey estimated, for about $110,000 a mile. This would mean an increase in valuation of about 1100 per cent in 20 years. The location of this property was not named.

SYRIAN PARLIAMENT OK'S PALESTINE REFUGEE DRAFT

DAMASCUS, July 7 (AP)—The Syrian Parliament today passed legislation subjecting all fit Palestinian refugees in Syria to Syrian military conscription.

This means all Palestinians in Syria between 18 and 26 years of age will have to serve a two-year term in the Syrian army, an official source explained.

The legislation, passed at the government's request, gave the 100,000 Palestinians who took refuge in this country in the 1948 Arab-Israeli war equal rights with Syrians in work, employment and commerce. It did not, however, grant them political rights or change their nationality.

SUDAN GETS NEW PREMIER

KHARTOUM, Sudan, July 7 (AP)—Abdulla Khalil, secretary general of the UMMA party, became the new premier of the Sudan today. He succeeds Ismail El Azhari, who resigned after Parliament censured him Wednesday.

A 16-member coalition cabinet was sworn in before the Sudanese sovereign commission. The five-man commission is head of state until permanent constitutional forms are adopted.

TRAVELERS HEAR TALK IN TIBET OF 'OPEN REBELLION'

KALIMPONG, India, July 7 (AP)—Travelers reaching India in considerable numbers are bringing fresh reports of spreading Tibetan resistance against the Red Chinese regime there.

These latest reports say "open rebellion" is now being preached in nearly all important towns throughout Tibet despite apparent opposition by the Dalai Lama, Tibet's nominal ruler.

One report said the Mimang (Tibetan resistance party), was preparing to establish its own provisional government in opposition to the Chinese.

A Tibetan source said the Chinese Reds now have more than 150,000 troops inside Tibet with 300,000 more ready for deployment in areas of eastern Tibet where guerrilla forces have been reported operating. Chinese bombers are still conducting daily missions against "resistance centers."

KANSAS CITY POWER NORMAL AFTER SEIZURE ENDS STRIKE

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 7 (UP)—Employes of the Kansas City Power and Light Co. in both Missouri and Kansas returned to their jobs today. Operation was reported normal.

No new negotiating sessions have been scheduled. Earlier, officials of the striking union agreed to honor the King-Thompson act, which was invoked by Gov. Phil M. Donnelly yesterday. The seizure order pertained only to Missouri properties of the company. Kansas does not have a law equivalent to the King-Thompson Act.

The seizure order was served on the company and three union locals last night by Daniel C. Rogers, chairman of the Missouri State Mediation Board.

William H. James, business agent for the striking International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local No. 1464, said, "We are honoring the seizure order under protest."

DUTCH CLAIM DISCRIMINATION BY U.S. ON NEW AIR ROUTES

THE HAGUE, July 7 (UP)—The Dutch government today accused the United States of a "serious form of discrimination" in failing to grant the Dutch KLM airlines the right to operate new United States routes.

A statement signed by Traffic and Waterways Minister J. Algera, Foreign Affairs Minister Johan W. Beyen and Minister Without Portfolio Josef Luns said:

"America's reluctance in granting the Dutch company new routes in the United States while giving permission to other European countries to operate such new routes can hardly be seen otherwise than as a serious form of discrimination."

BRITAIN ACCEPTS TURKISH BALK IN CYPRUS DISPUTE

Lloyd Also Indicates England Is Standing Firm—Stresses Isle's Importance.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

LONDON, July 8—Britain is accepting Turkey's refusal to permit a compromise settlement on the Cyprus dispute. This was made clear today in a speech by Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd at Barry, Wales.

It was also obvious from what Lloyd said that the British were standing firm on their own account.

The Greek Cypriots, who make up four-fifths of the island's population, have been agitating for union with Greece.

The British recently worked out a formula that would have granted ultimate self-determination while safeguarding the rights of the Turkish minority and the British military position. The plan was firmly rejected by Turkey. It would now appear that Britain has no hope or intention of getting the Turkish government to change its mind.

Goes Out of Way.

Lloyd obviously went out of his way to bring the subject into the end of a speech he was making on the export industries.

"The importance of Cyprus should not be underrated," he said. "Upon our effective use of the defense facilities in that island depends our capacity to discharge our treaty obligations to all the countries of the Middle East with whom we have treaty relations.

"Cyprus is not just a matter of concern to Great Britain. It is also an island strategically vital to our ally Turkey. It is to Turkey an offshore island, only 40 miles away from her coast and covering her southern ports. We have to take account of Turkey's position.

"It is sometimes suggested that a NATO base on Greek soil should suffice for us. That cannot be so. Much more than NATO is involved.

Oil Supplies at Stake.

"Not only is Turkey concerned, but, as the Prime Minister pointed out at Norwich on June 1, our country's industrial life and that of western Europe depends today, and will depend for many years to come, on oil supplies from the Middle East.

"If those resources were to be in peril, we should have to defend them. The facilities we have in Cyprus are part of that defense. We cannot therefore accept any doubt about their availability.

"We shall continue to strive for a settlement. Any solution which may be put forward to the Cyprus problem must take account of the facts which I have just stated."

The British government had been expected to make a more formal statement than this on Cyprus since top members of the government have been discussing the subject all week. The presumption now is that the cabinet's position will be put forward in the House of Commons next week.

U.S. SELLS $19,000,000 PLANT FOR $3,000,000

GARY, Ind., July 7 (UP)—The Gary armor plate plant, which cost the Government $19,000,000 to build in 1942, was sold to a Kansas City firm for a little over $3,000,000 it was revealed last night.

The American Auto Parts Co. bought the plant, which occupies 57 acres. It was previously used by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co.

A Government spokesman said the plant had been on a standby status since 1945. He said that most of the equipment in the 18 buildings it comprises is obsolete. The Kansas City firm, the highest of three bidders, said it plans to use the buildings for warehouses.

SENATE GROUP TO HEAR TWINING ON SOVIET VISIT

General Will Be Asked if He and Wilson Are at Odds Over Relative Air Power.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (UP) — The Senate Armed Services Committee will ask Gen. Nathan F. Twining on Tuesday to say whether he and Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson are at odds over relative air power of the United States and Russia.

The Air Force Chief of Staff, just back from eight "profitable" days in Moscow, will also be questioned closely behind closed doors on whether what he saw in Russia has altered his previous worried views on Red air strength.

Chairman Stuart Symington (Dem.), Missouri, of the Armed Services Air Power subcommittee, charged earlier, after hearing Wilson, Twining and other witnesses, that there were "direct conflicts" between Wilson's optimistic claims for American air strength and that of Air Force leaders. "One side or the other," Symington asserted, "is misleading the public."

After an 80-minute conference with President Eisenhower Thursday Twining told reporters he did not think there was "any conflict" although "there may be some difference of judgment on what's what."

Wilson takes the same view and thus far is refusing to spend an extra $800,000,000 voted by Congress to strengthen the bomber fleet.

Since his return from Moscow Twining has given only piecemeal evaluations which, veteran observers say, has left the issue still cloudy. He has said America still is "out in front" in the air. This agrees with Wilson's claims. He has said leadership in the air "certainly" would be lost if Americans "don't keep working." He said this is what worries his generals.

No fomenter of controversy, Twining is nevertheless caught in a crossfire of claims and counter-claims by Democrats and Republicans, Defense Department officials and Air Force commanders. He quite evidently did not consider his Gettysburg (Pa.) press conference Thursday —sitting between Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty and Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles—the proper forum for a specific rundown on Soviet air power.

But Air Force informants familiar with his Moscow expedition said he found no basis for changing his earlier views on the gravity of Russia's challenge. This is what he will be asked to spell out Tuesday. Nor did he become discouraged over America's ability to stay ahead if it will pay the price.

Although he has refused to make public any detailed evaluation, there was this exchange in the press conference Thursday:

Reporter: "Did this trip confirm your earlier judgment that the Russians are rapidly catching up with us in air power?"

Twining: "That is what I have said before I went over on the trip, and I would still say it."

He went on to say that Air Force programs are "satisfactory—at this time"; that "qualitatively we are out in front" of Russia. But he said leadership could be lost "if we go to sleep and don't keep working" because the Russians "are on the move."

Twining has consistently taken that position, Air Force officers said.

Twining already has given House military experts a top secret report on his inspection of Russia's growing airpower.

Twining testified yesterday at an unannounced meeting of a House Defense Appropriations subcommittee. The session was so secret no record was made of the testimony.

Fight to Restore Aid Cuts On House Floor Abandoned

Leaders Believe Administration's Cause Will Be Served Better in Senate—Rule Against Showdown Now.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, July 7 — Leaders vetoed plans today for a fight in the House of Representatives to restore sharp foreign aid cuts voted by the House Appropriations Committee.

Bipartisan strategists decided instead that the Administration's interests would be better served by looking to the Senate to repair the damage. The aim was to avoid a probable defeat on the House floor that would stiffen opposition and lessen the chances of eventually producing an acceptable bill.

As a consequence, Representative John J. Rooney (Dem.), New York, abandoned plans to press for House approval of an amendment to add at least $221,500,000 to the $3,655,920,000 proposed by the House Appropriations Committee for the measure.

$300,000 For Study.

In another development, the Senate Rules Committee approved a $300,000 allotment to the Foreign Relations Committee for "exhaustive studies" of the entire concept, scope and effectiveness of foreign aid.

The House is scheduled to act next week on two bills to carry the program forward. The first measure, representing a compromise between bills previously passed by the House and Senate, authorizes continuation of the program and sets a ceiling of $4,014,000,000 on new appropriations.

The second appropriates funds for the program. In reporting it to the House yesterday, the Appropriations Committee allowed only $3,655,920,000.

President Eisenhower originally requested $4,900,000,000 but later voiced satisfaction with a $4,517,000,000 ceiling approved by the Senate in passing the authorization bill.

Representative Rooney had the backing of Democratic and Republican leaders yesterday in an unsuccessful move in the Appropriations Committee to add $221,500,000 of military aid funds to the appropriation bill.

He was beaten by a vote of 24 to 22. Until today's strategy decision by the leaders, he had intended to carry the fight to the floor.

"I do not think the American public wants military aid cut to the extent that the Appropriations Committee has cut it," he told reporters.

"I would rather take the judgment of the Joint Chiefs of Staff than people who have been opposed to every single bit of foreign aid since its inception."

Opposition Mentioned.

He referred to the opposition of certain Appropriations Committee members but declined to identify them. Representative Otto E. Passman (Dem.), Louisiana, is chairman of the subcommittee that wrote the bill. He has long been regarded as an enemy of foreign aid.

Both Passman and Representative Clarence Cannon (Dem.), Missouri, chairman of the full committee, were understood to have voted to sustain the cuts.

The decision against taking the issue to the floor was based on a belief that a showdown now would do more harm than good. The appropriation bill ultimately will go to a Senate-House conference committee for adjustment of differences between the two chambers. Prospects of final agreement on a higher figure might be seriously impaired if Administration forces sustained a decisive defeat on the issue in the House.

The foreign-aid study approved today by the Senate Rules Committee grew out of Democratic demands for a reappraisal in the light of changing world conditions. It was on the condition that such a study would be made that Senator Walter F. George (Dem.), Georgia, led the Senate fight for passage of an authorization bill acceptable to the Administration.

George's Approach

The Administration preferred an inquiry by a joint committee of Congressional, Administration and outside authority. The Senate, however, rejected that proposal and approved the approach favored by George, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and other Democrats.

The House Foreign Affairs and Appropriations Committees are planning separate investigations. All three groups expect to produce findings and recommendations early next year.

JORDAN WANTS BRITISH HELP IF IT IS ATTACKED

Otherwise London Faces Abrogation of Mutual Defense Treaty, Gen. Abu Nuwar Says.

AMMAN, Jordan, July 7.—Jordan has warned Britain it must come to the Arab country's defense in case of an Israeli attack or face abrogation of the mutual defense treaty between the two countries.

The Jordanian army chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Ali Abu Nuwar, said today he handed this warning to the British ambassador, Sir Charles Duke, three days ago. It was at that time that the Jordanians declared they feared the Israelis were massing in the Jerusalem area in preparation for attack on the neighboring Arab kingdom and rushed the bulk of the Arab Legion to the front lines.

Gen. Abu Nuwar affirmed that Iraqi and Syrian troops had advanced to the Israeli frontier in force in response to a Jordanian request for joint Arab aid. He said the main strength of Egypt's army, with its Communist-supplied weapons, already was in strong defensive positions along the border and therefore Egypt did not need to order a forward movement of its forces.

The Jordanian army chief said he had pledged today that he would pull his troops back from the Jerusalem sector if he received first-hand assurances from the United Nations truce supervision organization that there was no excess of Israeli forces on the other side of the line.

The pledge was made to Maj. Gen. E.L.M. Burns, United Nations truce chief, who made a quick trip to Amman from his headquarters in Jerusalem for a conference with the 33-year-old Jordanian general.

Burns reported to Abu Nuwar that his truce organization had no evidence of any special Israeli troop buildup in the Jerusalem sector.

The Jordanian army chief said Burns conceded that none of his truce observers had been able so far to make an on-the-spot inspection of the area to verify the absence of excess Israeli forces.

HENNINGS CALLS HEARINGS HERE ON DELINQUENCY MOST USEFUL

Thanks St. Louisans at End of Testimony — Transcript to Become Part of Senate Record.

The Senate subcommittee's hearings on juvenile delinquency here were "the most productive, helpful and intelligent" of all yet held, United States Senator Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (Dem.) of Missouri said yesterday at the end of two days of testimony.

Hennings expressed gratitude at the response of St. Louisans to the hearings as the subcommittee adjourned here and staff members prepared to return to Washington.

"I am most grateful at the response of people of the community who gave the time and trouble to come and present us with their best thoughts on the problem of juvenile delinquency", the Senator said.

'Study of Transcript.'

He announced transcript of the hearing would be made a permanent part of the record of the Senate and would be studied when new legislation dealing with delinquency problems is being considered.

About 20 bills on various subjects have been introduced in the Senate as the result of previous hearings, Hennings said. Some apply nation-wide and others are restricted to the District of Columbia. One of the bills dealing with pornography has become law, Hennings said.

"Some witnesses have told us that we can solve the delinquency problem by controling comic books. Others say we can do it by controling television, or that we can do it with more playgrounds. There really is no easy answer to the problem and the wide variety of opinions expressed here emphasizes that."

Among final witnesses heard yesterday at the one-man hearings conducted by Hennings in United States District Judge Roy W. Harper's courtroom was Joseph H. Causino, executive director of the South Side Y.M.C.A., and a leader in the organization of brotherhood clubs for boys.

Juvenile Officer.

Causino said he thought it would be a good idea to place a juvenile officer in each of St. Louis's 12 police districts. By handling minor cases of delinquency on the spot, he said, the officer would be able to give the offender a lecture instead of a juvenile court record.

The work of the Y.M.C.A.'s brotherhood movement, which started after a sudden 37 per cent increase in juvenile delinquency in 1941, was reviewed by Causino. He told how the movement contributed to a 7 per cent decrease in delinquency the following year.

The federal Government contributed a great deal to curtailing delinquency during the depression, Causino said, with the National Youth Administration and Civilian Conservation Corps programs.

Clement Mihanovich, professor of sociology at St. Louis University, said he thought it was a "piddling" matter to worry about whether juvenile delinquency is worse now than at some other time. The problem has always been with us, he said, and should be controlled by a state or community agency.

Hero Worshipers.

The important part parents play in holding down delinquency was stressed by Mihanovich. He pointed out that children are hero worshipers and would worship their parents if good examples were set for them.

Ralph Young, director of Carver House, said leisure time activities cannot correct broken homes from which come the largest percentage of juvenile delinquents. He said teenagers resent adult apathy and lack of parental guidance.

Sidney Zagri, community action director of the Teamsters Union, Local 688, urged that school playgrounds be left open after 5 p.m. as a place where athletic games can be played until dark. He said the "get tough" policy of the police department would not solve the problem.

Teen-Age Facilities.

Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd recommended that the Federal Government provide for supervised recreational facilities for teen-agers when financing neighborhood housing projects. He said recreational facilities were provided for small children at most housing projects "but nothing is done to channel teen-age energy."

From his experience as circuit attorney, Dowd attributed the causes of juvenile delinquency to "the unsupervised use of automobiles, lack of respect for the rights of others, lack of parental control, lack of morality and religion in homes and lack of respect for law enforcement."

"I have met parents who take time out from their own pleasures only after their sons have been arrested," he said. "These children, seeing no morality in their family life, conclude that this behavior is normal and morally acceptable."

Dowd suggested expansion of psychiatric and child guidance centers here as permanent preventive measures against delinquency.

Psychiatrists Testify.

Dr. Margaret C. L. Gildea, assistant professor of clinical psychiatry at Washington University, urged an increase in the number of persons on school staffs who have psychiatric training, as a means of giving closer attention to "problem" children.

Her husband, Dr. Edwin F. Gildea, professor of psychiatry at Washington University, testified that some children who are "dumped" into hospital wards remain eight or 10 months after they are well "because we simply can't locate their parents, and there is no place to send them."

Remarking that a number of these children can find no place in a school and are jobless, Dr. Gildea said an answer to the problem might be the new Metropolitan Youth Commission, which, he said, should establish a major program of activities for young persons.

Juergen de Riel, executive secretary of the St. Louis chapter of the Big Brother Organization, was sharply critical of funds available in the state program of aid to dependent children, which, he said, "are kept down to a starvation 55 per cent of a minimum budget."

Edwin B. Meissner, president of the St. Louis Crime Commission and president and general manager of St. Louis Car Co., testified that in his opinion four factors influenced the lives of children: "The home, the school, the church and community influences."

'Happy, Secure Home'.

"A happy and secure home life is a child's first requirement," he said. "Children become emotionally upset when deprived of parental love and understanding. In schools, better trained teachers assisted by psychologists would do much to save our youth. The church, when correctly understood by the parents, could play a major role in curbing delinquency.

"Community influence is an important factor and St. Louis is finally doing its part toward improving living conditions and housing, thus giving our people and our youth a better precept and example."

Irving Fawcett, a special coordinator in the St. Louis Board of Education's division of pupil welfare and adjustment, advocated establishment of a permanent juvenile court judgeship presided over by persons with special training.

Superintendent of Instruction Philip J. Hickey of the Board of Education told the subcommittee it was found last year that 75 per cent of both parents of high school pupils held jobs, indicating a lack of home supervising of the children.

Another board official, Clement A. Powers, director of the pupil welfare and adjustment division, described the board's program for aiding students who have adjustment problems, saying that last year 191 children were given guidance by various agencies in the city which work in the field.

Father Poepperling Heard.

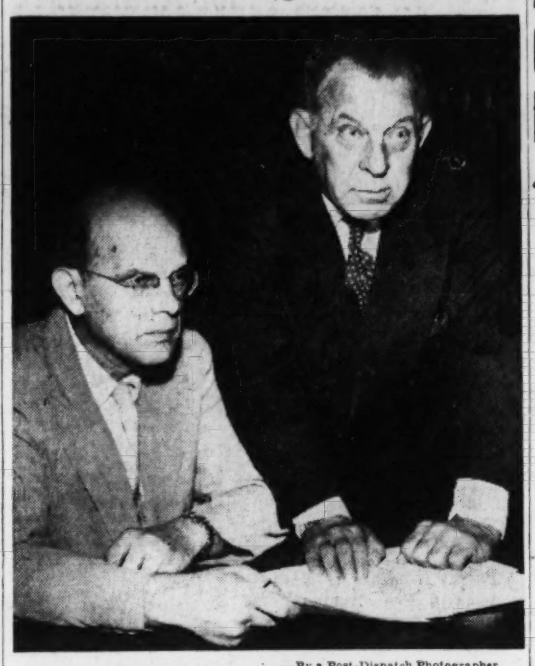

The Rev. William C. Poepperling, pastor of Holy Guardian Angels Catholic Church, told the subcommittee the city was going in the wrong direction in its playground program. He said more play areas equipped for baseball and other "contact athletic" contests, are needed for teen-agers.

Capt. C. R. Oliver of the Missouri highway patrol at Kirkwood, who testified concerning an increase in automobile theft and careless driving on the part of young persons, said the attitude of teen-agers showed "complete lack of respect for parents and the courts."

"It is very seldom we find a juvenile delinquent where the father has taken time to be companion to his son," he said.

Miss Grace Gorman, chief probation officer of the St. Louis juvenile court, told the subcommittee she did not favor establishment of supervised drag racing and added that she thought the minimum age limit for a driver's license should be increased from 16 to 18 years.

NEW PROTESTS ON MENDLE SENT BY G.O.P. CHIEFS

'Unilateral Appointment Doesn't Fulfill Promises' for Unity, County Leader Says.

Additional requests for reconsideration of the appointment of Maurice E. Mendle as chairman of the Missouri Citizens-for-Eisenhower committee were sent to officials of the national organization yesterday, as the latest row within the state Republican ranks continued.

The new protests were sent by Norman C. Parker, chairman of the St. Louis County Republican Committee; Mrs. Dorothy L. Leland, former co-chairman of the Missouri Citizens-for-Eisenhower and a member of the advisory council of the national group, and by Lawrence K. Roos, former chairman of the St. Louis Citizens-for-Eisenhower committee.

Parker said efforts have been made for months to unite the Republican party in Missouri, and that great progress had been achieved at the recent G.O.P. state convention in St. Louis.

Wages Careful Review.

"Unilateral appointment such as Mendle's does not fulfill the promises we have all made to work together in consultation with each other," he said in a telegram. "We believe when you carefully review all factors you will concur in our conclusion and reconsider the appointment."

In her telegram, Mrs. Leland said she and Mrs. Martin Lammert, another national advisory committee member, are "greatly distressed by the furor" over the Mendle appointment.

"Certainly there are outstanding men without controversial background who can appeal to Republican leadership and to non-partisans and Democrats as well," she declared.

"Our opinion is that outstanding work here has been nullified by the dissension this appointment has caused. We will not fall in line without its withdrawal and a fresh start."

Not Up to Standards.

Roos, chairman of the St. committee, also recommended review and withdrawal of the Mendle appointment because "it does not measure up" to standards for state party harmony.

The telegrams were sent to Brig. Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick, (ret.), chairman of the National Citizens-for-Eisenhower Organization; Gen. Lucius D. Clay' a member of the group; National G.O.P. Chairman Leonard Hall, and Sherman Adams, presidential assistant. Copies also were sent to Representatives Thomas B. Curtis of Webster Groves and Dewey Short of Galena, Missouri Republican members of Congress.

The selection of Mendle was first opposed by Elroy W. Bromwich, newly-elected G.O.P. national committeeman for Missouri, and his supporters. They charged the appointment was dictated by Barak T. Mattingly, controversial state party factional leader.

LACLEDE GAS CO. SAYS INSTALLING 'RISER' IS SIMPLE

Present System Costly to It, Utility Asserts —Union Cites Safety Factor.

The installation of "riser" connections in gas lines, chief issue in the stubborn week-old strike of 2200 Laclede Gas Co. employes, is a simple operation which can be completed in less than 30 minutes, a company spokesman said yesterday.

Laclede wants to turn the work over to private contractors, while continuing to make the final inspections. The AFL-CIO Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, representing the strikers, insists that company employes make the connections, as in the past. Long negotiation sessions with United States conciliators have failed to settle the issue.

The "riser" connection is simply a T-joint which is installed in the gas line on the customers' side of the meter. One line runs from the T-joint to the furnace and another line goes from the Tee to the kitchen range, water heater and any other gas appliance in the house.

Reason for Name.

Allen H. Burgess, operating vice president of Laclede, said the connection was dubbed "riser" back in the days when only manufactured gas was sold in St. Louis.

"The connection had to be made just above the meter in those days," Burgess said, "because a single pipe could not carry enough manufactured gas for both the heating plant and range. But the connection can be made at any point with natural gas because it contains about 1060 British Thermal Units per cubic foot compared to 535 BTUs in manufactured gas."

The "riser" connection was so named because it was made in the pipe rising from the meter. The name, which apparently is used only in St. Louis, no longer applies because where natural gas is used the connection can be made in a horizontal line some distance from the meter.

The installation of the "riser" is made after Laclede gas workers have hooked up the meter to the gas line coming into a house from the street and the contractor has completed laying lines from heating and appliance units to the point where the T-connection will be made.

The gas company then is called to make the "riser" connection. The contractor comes in next and tests the flow of gas to the units. Then a gas company crew makes a final inspection. After that the householder may begin using gas.

Calls It 30-Minute Job.

Burgess said the contractor could make the connection in less than 30 minutes at a cost in material of about 50 cents.

"It ties up one or two of our employes and costs Laclede about $7 an installation for driving time, work and material to make the connection," Burgess said. "Besides, the householder is inconvenienced by delays."

Laclede officials have estimated it costs the company about $1,000,000 annually to make the "riser" connections.

Burgess said plumbers have been permitted to install the T-connection for installation of pipes to heaters, ranges and other appliances for some time.

William Wynn, international representative of the striking unionists, told the Post-Dispatch the union took the position its members should continue making the connections because the work has always belonged to them.

Cites Safety Factor.

"The safety of the St. Louis public is also involved," he said. "Under the company's proposal any Tom, Dick or Harry could hook into a fuel line. If the job is botched and the householder happens to turn on the gas before Laclede makes its inspection, the results can be serious."

Wynn said the union feared loss of the "riser" installation work was the beginning of a company policy of discontinuing other jobs now performed by employes. This would lead to a cutback in employment, he declared.

Burgess countered with the argument that Laclede had no intention of "laying off a solitary soul."

"We had planned to hire an additional 25 men just before the strike started," he said. "The budget for next year calls for 100 to 125 additional men. We are hooking up an average of 10,000 new customers a year and there is a backlog of about 100,000 prospective gas heating customers in St. Louis and the county."

GLENDALE AGAIN DEFEATS BOND ISSUE PROPOSAL

A bond issue proposal for acquiring and developing a city park and constructing a swimming pool failed for the second time in less than two months in a special election yesterday in Glendale.

Complete but unofficial returns showed the vote on a $142,000 proposal for acquisition and improvement of a nine-acre park site was 987 in favor and 1388 against. The vote on a second yroposal for a $68,000 bond issue to construct a swimming pool was 975 in favor and 1413 against. A two-thirds majority vote was necessary for approval of each.

Mayor Joseph S. Pitts said he would recommend to the Board of Aldermen that the proposal not be submitted again "for the time being." A similar $200,000 bond proposal failed by 232 votes at an election last May 22 although a 10-cent tax levy to maintain the proposed park was approved by voters at that election.

TAX INQUIRY JURY DUE FOR RECALL BEFORE JULY 19

Grand Jurors to Decide Which of Panel's Investigations Are Worth Pursuing.

The federal grand jury, which has been in recess since last April 4, will be recalled prior to July 19 to determine which of its investigations into tax scandals in the Truman Administration are worth pursuing, the Post-Dispatch was told last night.

Wyllys Newcomb, special United States Attorney who presented the cases of T. Lamar Caudle and Matthew J. Connelly, officials of the Truman Administration, to the grand jury which indicted them, is expected to return here soon, it was learned.

July 19 is the date set by United States District Judge Rubey M. Hulen for sentencing Connelly and Caudle on their conviction of conspiring to defraud the Government. It is also the date the court set for hearing defense motions for a new trial, and Newcomb had planned to be here for that. What effect Hulen's death yesterday may have on the sentencing was uncertain.

Since the conviction of Caudle, former head of the tax division in the Department of Justice, and Connelly, former appointments secretary to President Truman, on June 14, Newcomb has been resting at his home in New York. He declined to comment on the jury's plans.

From other sources it was learned that when the jury meets, it will "pick up the pieces" of its suspended investigation to determine which of about 20 income tax evasion cases, originating in St. Louis, are worth pursuing. The jury's term of service ends July 23.

This latest development in the lengthy tax scandal inquiry came after the jury foreman, Leo M. Zilliken, in letters to United States District Judge George H. Moore complained of inactivity and demanded to know of Judge Moore and United States Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. the future of the jury's investigation.

Zilliken's letter with an accompanying one from Judge Moore was sent to Brownell, who answered, saying, he would determine "right away" from Newcomb and Warren Olney III, head of the Justice Department's criminal division, whether there was any additional evidence to present to the grand jury.

No further word has been received by Judge Moore from the Attorney General.

Hague Mayor Accused, Quits.

THE HAGUE, July 7 (AP)—Dr. F. M. A. Schokking, mayor of The Hague, resigned today after a newspaper Haagsch Dagblad alleged that he ordered the arrest of a Jewish family in the Nazi occupation in 1942. Louis Beel, Minister of the Interior, told Parliament an investigation committee had found no reason to disqualify Schokking, but he resigned anyway.

FBI LISTS RULES FOR PARENTS OF KIDNAP VICTIMS

WASHINGTON, July 7 (UP)—Six rules for parents to follow if their child is kidnaped were laid down today by J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

He said if the rules are followed immediately they provide the best method for the safe return of a kidnap victim. He said parents should: (1) Call the FBI. (2) "Maintain absolute secrecy" about the abduction except to investigating officers. (3) Not handle ransom notes from the kidnaper. Hand them over at once to investigators. (4) Not touch or disturb anything at the scene of the crime. Clues invisible to the naked eye might be destroyed. (5) Be calm. Try to maintain a normal routine around office and home. (6) Place full confidence in investigators and provide them with full details on the victim including "personal habits, characteristics and peculiarities."

Hoover assured the families of kidnap victims that "when kidnapings occur, the first concern of the FBI and other law-enforcement agencies is always the safe return of the victim."

Parents Near Collapse.

The Weinbergers were near collapse. Detectives were assigned to around-the-clock duty in the Weinberger home and police were stationed outside. Other police closed off the entire area extending two blocks in each direction from the Weinberger house. Every person entering or leaving the area was questioned and residents were asked to report any suspicious recent events they could recall.

The Long Island Daily Press offered a $5000 reward to the person or persons whose information leads to the return, alive, of Peter to his parents.

Hopes for Peter's early return were high last night after the telephone caller representing himself as the kidnaper told the father, Morris Weinberger, that Peter was "alive and well."

Police became increasingly secretive as they followed up every tip. It was known that attempts were being made to make personal contact with all callers posing as the kidnaper. Nassau county detective chief Stuyvesant Pinnell said "stand-ins" were being used for Weinberger and his wife.

John McDonald, press secretary for the 1600-man Nassau county police force, said no ransom had been paid and none had been left where the kidnaper might find it.

One of the two men questioned in the case was picked up about 8 o'clock last night. He was described as a cripple, about 35 years old. He was reported to have been seen near the Weinberger home Thursday morning.

The second man was taken into custody around midnight. Police gave no description of him.

Many mysterious telephone calls had been received at the Weinberger home, by police, by telecaster John K. M. McCaffery, and by newspapers. Two calls to a New York City newspaper early today said the baby was "well and fine" and was being fed. The same woman made both calls.

Peter was taken Wednesday while his father and 2-year-old brother were out riding. His mother had gone into the house to get a fresh diaper for him. When she returned, the baby was gone.

Monastery Robbed of $800.

MOLFETTA, Italy, June 7 (AP)—Police today were investigating the theft of 500,000 lire (about $800) from a monastery near Molfetta. Officers said the money was taken while the monks were at prayer.

STATE DRAFTING FURTHER SUITS IN GAS STRIKE

baum and the other leaders were instructed by the meeting "to take any steps necessary to obtain a fair settlement."

Following the mass meeting, the union negotiating committee resumed its efforts to settle the dispute at a session with company negotiators and United States conciliators.

Union's Sixth Proposal.

The union's sixth offer on the riser connection, made Friday night, was as follows: "In consideration of reaching an agreement on all the other issues and demands, the parties will submit to a tri-partite public hearing panel all their evidence bearing upon the issue, and the public hearing panel shall—after due consideration of the matter—issue its findings and conclusions to the parties and widely publicize them. . . .

"The findings and report of the panel shall not be binding on either the company or the union. Following issuance of the panel's report, the company and the union shall negotiate and attempt to reach agreement on the basis of the report. If they cannot agree, the matter shall be resolved under the grievance machinery of the contract."

Company representatives, who have not changed their original proposal that the riser issue be submitted to binding arbitration, rejected the union offer because it did not provide for immediate arbitration.

Other Issues.

Other issues to be resolved before a new contract can be signed include a general wage increase and fringe benefits. The union has dropped demands that the company continue to sell house heating equipment, for double pay for Sunday work and for deletion of a no-strike clause from the contract.

The company reported that gas service had been interrupted west of Ballas road, including the Barrett Brae subdivision, Lindeman and Manchester roads, Edmundson Terrace and Woodson Terrace, in St. Louis county.

Daniel C. Rogers, chairman of the State Board of Mediation, who is technically in charge of the Laclede Co. under the Governor's seizure, was in Kansas City yesterday on similar duty. Rogers is in charge of the Kansas City Power & Light Co., whose 2000 employes returned to work yesterday under state seizure following a one-day strike.

A determination of the constitutionality of the King-Thompson law may be obtained through two actions now pending in circuit court here.

One is a suit, similar to that filed yesterday, seeking penalties of $30,000 from the streetcar and bus operators' union for a three-day strike last fall. The second is a suit by the union against Gov. Donnelly and Rogers to restrain the state officials from enforcing seizure of the Public Service Co.

After a Wisconsin court voided a similar law in 1951, on the ground that federal jurisdiction applied, J. E. Taylor, then Missouri Attorney General, held that Missouri's law was void. In ensuing litigation, the Missouri Supreme Court upheld the right of the Board of Mediation to compensation, but declined to rule on the controversial seizure powers and penalty provisions.

Charles A. Lee of St. Louis, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, said yesterday the union officials who called the strike were "most unwise and irresponsible," and showed "an utter disregard for the welfare of the citizens of the greater St. Louis area."

He said the strike "has shown the necessity for keeping, and even strengthening, the King-Thompson law or a similar measure," and that "it should be amended if necessary, so that strikes will not occur in public utilities."

Even though "strikes are out of place in a public utility," Lee added, "the general public should be interested in seeing that the working conditions in the utility are on a high level and thereby become a model for business-labor relations in the area."

C.A.B. MAN PUTS RESPONSIBILITY ON TWA'S PILOT

either from the air or the ground.

He said the clouds apparently lowered to only 2000 feet above the canyon at the time and "we have found no witnesses who saw it from the ground."

'No Congestion in Area.'

Andrews said he understood there were several other flights in the area within a half hour of the time of apparent collision. But he added, "there was no congestion in the area at the time."

He said that while the cloud tops were generally about 20,000 feet over northern Arizona last Saturday some other pilots reported columns up to 22,000 feet.

Investigators at the crash scene have found evidence that the giant transports collided. The evidence consisted of paint marks from one plane being found on fragments of the other.

Andrews said a Weather Bureau expert was assembling a complete report in an attempt to reconstruct accurately the weather conditions at the time.

The CAB investigator reviewed the preliminary report made by the Civil Aeronautics Administration. This report indicated that both planes left the California border and CAA control jurisdiction at about the same time.

TWA, which had left Los Angeles at 10:01 a.m. for Kansas City, Mo., reported over Lake Mojave at 10:55 a.m., elevation estimated at 21,000 feet. United, which had left Los Angeles at 10:04 for Chicago, reported over Needles at the same elevation at 10:58.

Both planes gave an estimated time of arrival over the Painted Desert, Ariz., check point of 11:31 a.m. They never reported.

Asked if it were customary for two large airlines to fly at the same altitude, Andrews replied that he did not think it was unusual, "because one was on visual and the other on instrument flying rules."

The House subcommittee planned to call other CAB and CAA witnesses, including radio controlmen along the routes of the ill-fated airliners. Part of the session, including Andrews's testimony, was opened to reporters, but Chairman Harris indicated the hearings would go into executive session later.

Other subcommittee members in attendance include Robert Hale of Maine, Republican, and Morgan Moulder of Missouri, John Bell Williams of Mississippi, Torbert MacDonald of Massachusetts, Olin Teague of Texas, John J. Flynt of Georgia and Walter Rogers of Texas, all Democrats.

Work of searching the wreckage of the DC-7 continued in the gorge today.

Swiss mountaineers, flown to the canyon yesterday, worked on a new technique they hope will make it possible to lower a man by rope into crevices containing parts of the shattered plane.

Described as a type of "Tyrolean transfer" the technique consists of winding turns of rope around large rocks on the dangerous ledge as an anchor for a rope lowered into the crevices.

No additional bodies were flown from the U.A.L. wreck scene today. A total of 13 have been brought out so far. Sixteen bags of remains were flown from the TWA site earlier.

One of Crash Victims Carried $636,352 in Insurance.

CHICAGO, July 7 (AP)—Insurance policies totaling $636,352 were carried by one of the victims in the plane crash over the Grand Canyon last Saturday.

Albert E. Widdifield, vice president in charge of advertising for the Sunbeam Corp., carried the policies. They were found yesterday by examiners for the state treasurer's office at the Riverside Safe Deposit Co.

The policies indicated that $500,000 of the amount was flight insurance carried by Sunbeam.

Body of St. Louis Victim of TWA Crash is Identified.

The body of Neal A. Power, 4040 Juniata street, was one of five recovered from the TWA plane that crashed June 30 which were identified yesterday at Grand Canyon Village, Ariz.

Power, 22 years old, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Power. He was a sophomore at St. Louis University and was returning from a two-week cruise in the Pacific as a member of the Naval Reserve.

OPPONENT CHARGES DALTON IS TRYING TO 'BUY' ELECTION

A charge that supporters of Attorney General John M. Dalton, seeking the Democratic nomination to succeed himself, are attempting to "purchase the nomination in the August primary," was made yesterday by Jim Hayes of Cartuthersville, Dalton's sole opponent for the nomination.

He spoke at a picnic of members of the Independent Shoeworkers' Union from International Shoe Co. at Farmers' Park, Halls Ferry road near Chambers road, St. Louis county.

5 Killed in Italian Rock Slide.

APRICA, Italy, July 7 (AP)—A great rock slide roared down on workmen standing outside a tunnel high in the Italian Alps today, killing five and injuring four.

TWO HURT IN AUTO CRASH, ONE DRIVER DOESN'T STOP

Two persons were injured last night when the automobile in which they were riding overturned after being struck from behind by a car that did not stop. Both vehicles were being driven west in Olive Street road half a mile west of Lindbergh boulevard, Creve Coeur.

Mrs. Arnold H. Fink, 48 years old, Mason road, St. Louis county, and a daughter, Shirley, 18, were taken to St. Louis County Hospital for treatment. Mrs. Fink's husband and a son, Lester, were uninjured.

Creve Coeur Police Capt. Joseph Murphy, who was passing by as the Finks' car was struck, radioed for assistance. A few moments later police arrested the driver of a car who said he was Victor J. Ulrich, a salesman living on Old Ballas road, Creve Coeur. Police quoted Ulrich as saying Fink's car had passed his on the right side. Ulrich denied any knowledge of the collision, police said, but admitted having "three or four drinks" earlier in the day.

STEEL WALKOUT IS WEEK OLD, NO ACCORD IN SIGHT

Layoffs Certain to Soar, U.S. Is Expected to Call Both Sides Together.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 7 (AP) — The nation-wide steel strike ended its first week today with no sign of a solution.

Ninety per cent of basic steel production in the nation had been halted; 650,000 United Steelworkers were idle. Their walkout spread it- effects to other industries where nearly 50,000 more workers were laid off "for the duration."

The total of idle workers was certain to climb swiftly next week as business generally returned to a more normal course after the July Fourth holiday week—a widely-used vacation period.

Contract talks remained stalled on dead center on the deadlock existing when the union struck last Saturday at midnight. Even the entry of the Federal Mediation Service, for brief separate talks with union and industry leaders, brought no hint of progress toward resumed negotiations.

Both sides said they were willing to "bargain" but indicated no present plan for any new offer or request on contract terms. Each side plainly was waiting for the other to move first.

The consensus in this steel capital appeared to be that the Federal Government would have to call the negotiators together. Such a meeting probably would be in Washington.

Men and management plainly were preparing for a long shutdown—if it should develop that way.

Non-Union Pennsy Workers' Pay is Cut 10 Pct.

PHILADELPHIA, July 7 (UP) —Non-union employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad, from President James M. Symes down, have been forced to take a 10 per cent pay cut as a result of the steel strike, it was disclosed today.

The pay cut, effective July 1, was believed to have been ordered in part to hold down layoffs. The railroad has laid off 18,000 workers so far. The steel industry accounts for some 30 per cent of the Pennsylvania's business.

Those affected by the pay reduction will be given two extra days off each month as compensation.

CURTIS PRAISES VITAL ROLE OF WOMEN IN GOVERNMENT

So far as the United States government and its policies are concerned, "there never was a time when the women of America had more to be proud of and more to be thankful for than at present," Representative Thomas B. Curtis (Rep.), of St. Louis county, said here yesterday.

He spoke at a meeting of the Second Congressional District Women's Club, at Heman Park, University City.

Women assured President Eisenhower's election in 1952, Curtis said, and "this year it is certain that the women of this country again will support the President and the Republican party . . . on the record of its actual accomplishment."

Truman Autograph Session

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

FORMER PRESIDENT HARRY S. TRUMAN writing an autograph for ENGINEER CLIFTON CRUM, whose back he is using, at Union Station yesterday. MRS. TRUMAN is at right.

Award to British Movie.
LUXEMBOURG, July 7 (UP) —The international Catholic Office of Cinema today gave its annual film award to the British movie "The Prisoner," starring Alec Guinness.

TRUMAN FAVORS 'WOODSHED' CURE FOR DELINQUENCY

The old-fashioned "woodshed" disciplinary treatment was advocated here yesterday by former President Harry S. Truman as a preventive of juvenile delinquency.

The former President, stopping at Union Station with Mrs. Truman on way to their home at Idependence after a European tour, placed primary blame for the youth problem on neglectful parents. He also took a dim view of so-called progressive methods of child rearing.

"I believe in the woodshed treatment," Truman remarked. "That's the best there is.

"I got plenty of it when I was a boy. I don't know if it did any good but I've never been in jail."

"Mama and papa are more to blame than the kids for all those modern juvenile problems. Parents should stay home and raise their children and spend less time in taverns. They should instill discipline and moral principles in them."

NAVY RECRUITING PLAQUE

The St. Louis Navy Recruiting Station has received a bronze plaque for exceeding the assigned quota of enlistments last month, it was announced yesterday.

A total of 432 men were enlisted last month. The assigned quota for June was 337.

HOUSE VOTES $378,000,000 IN SPECIAL AID TO SCHOOLS

WASHINGTON, July 7 (UP) —The House passed today and sent to the Senate a bill to provide $378,000,000 in federal aid to help provide more schools in areas where federal activities have taxed local facilities.

The two-year program was adopted by a voice vote. There was no opposition.

The measure was passed after an unsuccessful effort by Representative Cleveland M. Bailey (Dem.), West Virginia, to resurrect the $1,500,000,000 five-year general aid to education bill which was beaten earlier this week in a wrangle over school segregation.

Representative Melvin Price (Dem.), Illinois, presiding officer at the time, ruled that Bailey's amendment was out of order.

The bill passed today would authorize extension until June 30, 1958, of federal aid for construction of schools burdened by federal activities such as military installations.

NEW CONTEMPT CHARGE THREAT AGAINST MILLER

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP) —Playwright Arthur Miller, newly married to actress Marilyn Monroe and out of trouble with the State Department, today was threatened once more with the possibility of prosecution for contempt of Congress.

Miller, in a letter to the House Committee on Un-American activities, refused for a second time to identify fellow writers he said he saw in 1939-40 at meetings he understood to be Communist. The committee said after his first refusal that Miller could purge himself of contempt by supplying the names later.

The committee may act on the matter next week, about the time Miller and his bride fly to England. The State Department granted him a six-month passport yesterday, after withholding one until he filed information including an affidavit regarding any connections he may have had with the Communist party.

Miller has said he made "errors" in associations in the past but was never under Communist party discipline.

How to Choose Hearing Glasses

Stop, look and listen carefully before you buy any eyeglass hearing aid. Consider these important questions.

Are Bows Slender and Normal Looking?
New Maico Hearing Glasses are slender and attractive. They look like normal glasses. They don't press against head or push out your ears. The unusual balance places no weight on your nose or ears.

Can You Interchange to Either Ear?
With Maico Hearing Glasses you can change to the other ear when you want to. No need to buy two aids.

Can You Get Choice of Colors, Frames?
Select from slender brown, grey or black bows. Use your own frames, or select the newest, modern style at your own opthomologist, optometrist or optician.

Can They Be Fitted to Your Comfort?
Maico bows are slender and flexible, easily shaped to fit you comfortably. Not we, but the optical man of your choice will adjust the HEARING GLASSES for the final fitting.

Are They Powerful Enough for You?
Maico's Hearing Glasses are twice as powerful as most others; four transistors, not two or three . . . yet they're lighter, more comfortable.

STRIKE FOLLOWS DISCHARGE OF WORKER ASLEEP ON JOB

WEST HARTFORD, Conn., July 7 (UP)—Workers at Pratt & Whitney Co. went on a wildcat strike in protest against the firing of a worker accused of sleeping on the job.

A United Auto Workers spokesman said the penalty was too severe.

"If they fired everybody they ever found asleep on the night shift," he said, "there'd soon be nobody working nights."

NEW EFFORT TO END A. O. SMITH DISPUTE

Strikers' Lawyer Asks Officer of International to Help Settle It.

A new effort to settle the labor dispute at the A. O. Smith Corp. at Granite City, which has kept the auto body plant shut down since June 16, was announced yesterday.

Edward D. Groshong, attorney for the striking faction of Local 575, Boilermakers' Union, told a mass meeting of union members that he had contacted Joseph Grant, an international vice president of the union in Granite City, and asked him to intervene in the dispute in an effort to help settle it and get the men back to work.

He said he expects to get together with Grant over the weekend and arrange further negotiation sessions with the management.

"There is feeling on the part of both the management and union that this thing has gone too far," Groshong said.

The 600 union members attending the mass meeting, however, voted not to return to work until 19 men fired by the company are rehired and all of the strikers are guaranteed restoration of their full seniority rights.

JAPAN VOTE TO TEST HATOYAMA STRENGTH

Opposition Socialists Seek to Capture 11 Additional Seats in Upper House.

TOKYO (Sunday), July 8 (AP) —Millions of Japanese vote today in national upper house elections—a test of strength between Prime Minister Hatoyama's conservatives and the opposition Socialists.

More than half of 51,492,077 registered men and women voters were expected to mark ballots at 42,540 polling places.

At stake were 127 of the 250 seats in the House of Councilors. The body was expected to remain strongly conservative despite predictions of some Socialist gains.

Upper house actions can be overridden by a two-thrids vote of the more powerful lower chamber except on constitutional amendments, where both houses are equal.

The voting was expected to indicate how fast Hatoyama can push rearmament by rewriting Japan's occupation-born, anit-army Constitution, a conservative goal observers feel will take several years to realize.

A comparatively quiet campaign ended last night with the Socialists asking voters to give them 11 additional seats needed to break the conservatives' two-thirds majority in the upper house, the margin needed to approve constitutional amendments.

Hatoyama's Liberal-Democratic party went into the election with only 122 members in the 250-seat upper house, but it had two-thirds control on the basis of support from 50 splinter party members and independents who vote conservative. Forty-three of these were in the "Ryokufukai," or Green Wind Society, a major third party expected to lose strength to both Liberal-Democrats and Socialists.

The last House of Councilors had 68 Socialists, backed by one Communist, two Farmer Laborites and one independent. There were six vacancits.

Japan's biggest newspaper, Asahi, said its latest nation-wide poll showed a gain in popularity for the Socialists. Others felt they might gain a few seats, but not the 11 they hoped for.

Local issues dominated the campaign for 75 seats elected by local district. In electioneering for 52 vacancies filled by the nation at large, Liberal-Democrats made their major campaign pitch at last May's Socialist-led fist-fighting in the upper house. They labeled the Socialists "the party of violence and fighting" and showed movies throughout Japan of the disorder.

In the campaign's final days, Socialists made their No. 1 issue the Okinawa question, promising voters a firmer stand in demanding return of the United States-occupied island to Japan.

EISENHOWER'S PLEA PERSUADED COOPER TO RUN

doubt that he re-enforced Adams's argument that since he was running for re-election despite his illness, he must have the support of the best and ablest men in the party who believe in the same things the President believes in. With this Cooper gave in and indicated that his reply to the Kentucky state convention would be favorable.

Shortly afterward at Gettysburg White House Secretary Hagerty told reporters he had had the talk with the President at which Mr. Eisenhower had discussed politics. He said he also had heard the President discuss politics with Sherman Adams by telephone. Thus knowledge of the Cooper phone conversation and its implications is believed to have inspired the grin with which Hagerty accompanied his announcement that the President had for the first time since his operation discussed politics.

Since he was appointed ambassador to India by Mr. Eisenhower, Cooper felt that only the President had the right to say that another office was more important. Yet in spite of the personal intervention of Mr. Eisenhower it was with the deepest reluctance that he finally said yes to insistent Republicans in his own state.

Served Two Periods.

He has twice run for short Senate terms, serving from 1946 to '48 and from 1952 to '54. He was defeated for re-election by Barkley, who died of a heart attack in May. Four years of the unexpired term remain.

Republicans believe their chances in Kentucky are enhanced by a split in the Democratic party. Democratic Governor A. B. (Happy) Chandler is feuding with Senator Earl Clement. They were unable to agree on who should run for the Barkley seat and Clement finally put over his man, former Gov. Lawrence W. Wetherby.

Chandler is opposed to Adlai Stevenson who has the support of other Kentucky Democratic leaders. The governor has said that, with Stevenson at the head of the ticket, Kentucky would go for Eisenhower. It ended up in the Stevenson column four years ago by a margin of only 700 votes.

This entered into the consideration of Adams and his close political collaborator, Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall. Certainly Cooper, widely known and very popular throughout the state, will strengthen the ticket. But his own conscience will not soon be quieted by the argument of political necessity and party loyalty put up to him by Republicans of every degree, ending finally with the President himself.

MAYOR TO DEDICATE LIGHTS AT TWO PARKS THIS WEEK

New lights for athletic fields in Fairgrounds and Carondelet parks will be dedicated tomorrow and Tuesday by Mayor Raymond R. Tucker. Baseball games between North and South Side teams will mark the events.

The lights in Fairgrounds Park will go into use tomorrow night at Diamond No. 1 following a parade of about 40 neighborhood organizations, beginning at Grand boulevard and Kossuth avenue, at 7 p.m.

A $65,000 lighting system for baseball, soccer and softball fields in Carondelet Park will be dedicated at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday. A junior baseball game will be played at 6 p.m. and the Carondelet Sunday Morning Athletic Club's No. 1 team will meet the Kutis North Side team following the dedication.

GROUP TO RECRUIT BLOOD DONORS ORGANIZED HERE

An organization to recruit blood donors has been formed here by 125 men and women who have donated a gallon or more of blood through the American Red Cross, it was announced yesterday.

Rey Eilers, a patent attorney, who served as acting chairman of the new group at a meeting last week, said that 2000 donors who have given a gallon or more since the Red Cross blood center opened in St. Louis in 1948 were polled concerning their interest in a permanent recruiting organization.

Many donors expressed interest in such a group, he said, although not all could take an active part in it. Eilers and other donors were guests last Tuesday at Grant's farm in St. Louis county.

CUSTOMER SHOT IN DISPUTE OVER RESTAURANT SERVICE

McGhee McCain, 2431 Division street, was shot in the abdomen yesterday by the proprietor of a restaurant at 3210 Franklin avenue in an altercation over the quality of food and service provided him.

McCain, 38-year-old Negro, entered the restaurant at 3 a.m., police reported, and ordered a meal. After being served by Bing Lee, operator of the restaurant, McCain protested against the food and the service. In the ensuing argument, McCain threw a glass of water at Lee, police were told.

Lee picked up a .38-caliber revolver from beneath a counter and fired one shot at McCain, police said. Taken to Homer G. Phillips Hospital, McCain was reported in serious condition.

JUDGE HULEN DIES OF WOUND AS HE IS OPERATED ON to speculate about the matter. Both Judge Moore and the other remaining district judge, Roy W. Harper, have disqualified themselves in the Connelly-Caudle case, Judge Moore because he initiated the grand jury investigation of tax scandals in the Truman Administration and Judge Harper because he was a witness before the grand jury in the inquiry.

United States Attorney Harry Richards said he did not believe Judge Hulen's death would have any effect on the case. He said Chief Justice Archibald K. Gardner of the United States Court of Appeals probably would appoint a federal judge from another district to hear motions and pass sentence.

Both Richards and Jacob M. Lashly, counsel for Connelly during the trial, agreed that a postponement of sentencing and hearing motions would have to be granted to give another judge an opportunity to read the record of the case.

Warren Olney III, head of the criminal division of the Department of Justice, said in Washington that the jury verdict convicting Caudle and Connelly was conclusive, in his opinion. The disposition of the case requires only the assignment of another judge to complete the judicial process, he said.

Judge Hulen was born at Hallsville, Mo., a son of John W. and Lucy H. Pollard Hulen. As a boy he came to St. Louis and lived with an older brother. He attended public schools here and sold newspapers at the corner of Finney and Taylor avenues until 1907, when he returned to live with his parents in Kansas City.

He received his law degree from the Kansas City School of Law in 1914, but could not start practicing until the following year when he became of age. He started practice in Centralia, Mo. Five years later he was elected prosecuting attorney of Boone county on the Democratic ticket and moved to Columbia, the county seat.

During World War I, he served as a second lieutenant and later as commander of Company A, 353rd Infantry Regiment, Eighty-ninth Division, for 18 months. He was wounded at St. Mihiel.

When he returned from France, he entered private practice and in 1933 the United States Comptroller of the Currency employed him as counsel for the receivers of the old Grand National Bank and the Cherokee National Bank here.

The Missouri Supreme Court appointed him a member of the advisory committee to revise the code of Civil Practice and make it agree with newly adopted federal rules.

He was appointed to the district court bench in 1943 by the late President Roosevelt.

An exacting jurist, Judge Hulen was proud of his record of opinions and decisions, very few of which were ever reversed by higher courts. He was known among lawyers and judges as an authority on admiralty law and was sent to New York and to Southern California to preside over cases involving shipping suits.

Judge Hulen presided over a lengthy suit beginning in 1948 in which eastern railroads were suing southwestern lines for a larger share of the rates charged the Government on war freight shipments. The case lasted for two years.

In 1950, he ruled in favor of admission of Negroes to all the city's outdoor swimming pools. In his ruling he cited the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution and said, "No rule or regulation shall be made applicable to members of the Negro race that is not equally applicable to members of all other races using open-air pools."

Surviving him besides his wife, the former Anna English, is a sister, Mrs. Helen Eby, who made her home with Judge and Mrs. Hulen.

VICTOR RIESEL TO RECEIVE $20,000 INSURANCE IN CASH

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 7—Victor Riesel, labor columnist who was blinded in an acid attack, will receive a $20,000 cash payment and $400 a month for five years under an insurance policy on which he has paid only $340.80 in premiums.

Robert S. Schoonmaker Jr., secretary of the Berkshire Life Insurance Company's accident and sickness department, said that Riesel had taken out his policy in 1953 and had paid three premiums before he was attacked by an unknown assailant on April 5. Acid was thrown into his face as he left a radio station after having completed a broadcast.

Schoonmaker said that in such cases the company presumed the injuries to be totally disabling and paid full benefits.

LIVELY FIGHT IN PROSPECT FOR CIRCUIT ATTORNEY

Eagleton and Stanard, if Nominated, Will Match Youth Against Experience.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Men with limited experience in local politics are likely to be the opposing candidates next November for election as St. Louis's new circuit attorney, if the Aug. 7 primary contests for the Democratic and Republican nominations for the office are decided the way the politicians believe they will be.

The front-running primary candidates are Thomas F. Eagleton, Democrat, and William K. Stanard II, Republican, both of whom are seeking elective public office for the first time. The job they want is the most important city office at stake in this year's elections.

Each is lining up formidable organization support, and if they win their party nominations, politicians expect a lively general election campaign in which youth versus experience and policies of running the circuit attorney's office will be major issues.

Eagleton 26 Years Old.

Eagleton, who at 26 years of age is one of the youngest candidates to seek this office in many years, has had limited courtroom experience as an attorney. Stanard, who is 40, has had considerable experience in criminal law, both as a court-appointed attorney for defendants and as a special assistant United States Attorney.

In addition, the two have sharply conflicting views of the primary job of the circuit attorney, with Eagleton stressing the importance of administrative duties and Stanard emphasizing legal aspects and trial experience.

The decision of Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd not to run for re-election, after a stormy tenure marked by frequent tiffs with judges, grand jurors and bar groups, attracted a large field of candidates for his job.

Eleven lawyers filed in the primary contests, eight for the Democratic nomination and three for the Republican. Recently two of the Democrats dropped out, leaving six persons in that race for the nomination.

Actively contesting Eagleton for the Democratic nomination in the jockeying for ward organization suport are Joseph L. Walsh, a former assistant circuit attorney and now a special assistant Missouri attorney general, and Donald T. McClanahan, who is on Dowd's staff as an assistant circuit attorney.

McClanahan joined Dowd's staff in January, 1953, after an unsuccessful attempt to unseat Republican Representative Thomas B. Curtis in the 1952 congressional election. So far, the only ward leader who has announced for him is Fred J. Schmidt Jr., committeeman of McClanahan's home ward, the Thirteenth.

Dowd States Position.

Dowd denied reports in party circles that he was going to back McClanahan actively as his successor.

"I told Don, and I told several of the other candidates, that I was going to vote for Don, but that would be the extent of my interest," Dowd said.

Eagleton, the son of Mark D. Eagleton, former president of the St. Louis Police Board, already has lined up the formal indorsements of such Democratic ward leaders as State Senator James M. Webbe, Seventh ward; Magistrate Anton Sestric, Eighth; Henry E. Luaders, Ninth, and Constable Louis G. (Midge) Berra, Twenty-fourth.

The Eagleton supporters also have commitments from many other ward groups, and expect to have at least 20 of the 28 organizations by the primary election. Eagleton said his count now shows 18 wards for him.

Reports in Democratic circles that his father was "buying up" ward organizations for him by making heavy contributions to their campaign funds were termed "ridiculous" by the young candidate. "There is not a word of truth in it," he said.

Crowe Heads Campaign.

Eagleton's campaign manager is former City Counselor James E. Crowe, which shows that even the most bitter political wounds can be healed. Crowe was one of Mayor Raymond R. Tucker's stanchest supporters when Tucker defeated the elder Eagleton in the 1953 mayoral primary, and Crowe was one of the defendants named in a defamation suit brought by Mark Eagleton during that fight. The suit was later dismissed.

Walsh seems to be in the best position to challenge Tom Eagleton for the Democratic nomination, having obtained the backing of several north side ward leaders, and is in a position to pick up others.

On the Republican side, Stanard's chief opponent for the nomination is Maurice S. Karner, a young attorney, who has been active in party work and has been an unsuccessful candidate for magistrate and state representative.

Stanard has the backing of his home ward, the Twenty-fifth, and of a number of south side party organizations which control large blocs of G.O.P. primary votes. Anticipating that Eagleton will be the Democratic nominee, many Republicans are pushing Stanard's candidacy because they feel he would be their strongest candidate against Eagleton.

Won Honors as Student.

Eagleton, a personable man who was a cum laude student at Amherst (Mass.) College, Oxford University in England and at Harvard Law School, said he feels the primary job of the circuit attorney is administrative. He contends the office will be successful if the circuit attorney employs competent legal assistants and sets up an efficient administrative organization. He said he has gained that experience as assistant general counsel of Anheuser-Busch, Inc., and as an assistant to the president on administrative matters.

Standard, who served 18 months as a special assistant United States attorney in the prosecution of labor racketeers and other defendants in federal court here, said he believes the circuit attorney should be qualified to prosecute cases. If elected, he said he would set up a qualified staff and personally handle as many important courtroom cases as possible.

Other candidates for the Democratic nomination are Francis L. Kane, James H. Connor Jr., and John W. Barry. The two who dropped out of this primary race are Richard L. Daly and Henry W. Simpson.

The third candidate for the G.O.P. nomination is Charles A. Grassmuck Jr.

SOUTH CAROLINA DEMOCRATS ACT TO UNIFY DIXIE

Resolve to Shun Any Third-Party Movement and to Work for States' Rights.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, S.C., July 7 — Leaders of the South Carolina Democratic party, which has been accused of fomenting a Southern bolt from this year's Democratic presidential nominee, resolved yesterday to shun any third-party movement and to "work within the framework of the national Democratic party" in the interest of states' rights.

At an organizational meeting of South Carolina's national convention delegates, the leaders also made it plain they would have no truck with Republicans, as happened four years ago, and they heard Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. charge, "The Republican party has done more harm to the South in the past three years than the Democrats in 20 years."

Head of Delegation.

Gov. Timmerman, whose appeal for Southern unity during and after the Democratic national convention had been branded by Senator Kerr Scott of North Carolina as "sugar-coating" for the formation of a Dixiecrat party, was named chairman of the state's 20-vote delegation to the convention at Chicago next month.

Furthermore the delegation decided to nominate the governor as South Carolina's "favorite son" candidate for President.

Although this was aimed at gaining bargaining power, its effect will be to deprive Adlai E. Stevenson of a half-dozen or more first-ballot votes.

Stevenson is known to be favored by several party figures as the "least objectionable" of the possible nominees.

Significant Actions.

The delegation's actions today were significant because South Carolina led the States' Rights party movement which caused four Southern states to leave the Democratic party in 1948; James F. Byrnes, Governor in 1952, was a leader among Democrats for Gen. Eisenhower four years ago; and this year the South Carolina party and its present Governor have taken the initiative in banding Southerners together for joint action at the Democratic national convention.

Gov. Timmerman and the others pointed out yesterday that this unity drive is aimed at helping to select the "right" presidential and vice presidential nominees and presenting the strongest possible position for the South's view that the Democratic national party should not go overboard on school integration or civil rights platform planks.

Several party figures confided that Stevenson may ultimately get South Carolina's convention votes "by the process of elimination."

PICKETING ENDS, MOST GOLF CLUB EMPLOYES RETURN

Most service employes at Algonquin Golf Club, 340 North Berry road, Glendale, returned to work yesterday when pickets were withdrawn after the club management agreed to negotiate with five union locals that sought recognition.

Christopher Murphy, club manager, said only a few employes holding union membership failed to report for work. Forty-eight had remained away from their jobs after the picketing began last Tuesday.

The five locals are affiliated with the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders Unions. Murphy said he thought negotiations for a contract would begin in about a week.

U.S. CHECKS BASQUE AGENT'S WINDFALL

Missing Lecturer-Refugee Received $1,023,004 in Six Years.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 7—The Internal Revenue Service, interested in the mysterious, six-year $1,023,004 windfall of the missing Dr. Jesus De Galindez, has begun an investigation of his finances, it was learned tonight.

Galindez, one of the most controversial international figures in recent years, was believed to be a $300-a-month Columbia university lecturer before his disappearance March 12 in New York.

A Spanish refugee who fought with Basque units on the Communist side in the country's civil war, he sought asylum in the Dominican Republic in 1937 and became a permanent resident alien in the United States in 1951.

Thesis On Trujillo.

His avowed hatred for Generalissimo Raphael L. Trujillo, Dominican strong man, resulted in his thesis, "The Era of Trujillo," which earned for him a Ph. D. degree in absentia at Columbia June 5.

Last Sunday, it was revealed that Galindez was a registered agent and propagandist of the Basque government-in-exile and had collected fabulous sums since 1949 to aid Basque refugees.

Galindez listed no names of "contributors" in his reports as a foreign agent to the Department of Justice and the principal recipient of the money, he declared, was Jose A. De La Aguirre, president of the exiled government. Aguirre subsequently said in Paris that he believed contributions to his government approximated $500,000.

Used All Over World.

"This money," Aguirre explained, "was not necessarily sent to the Basque government here. It was used to help Basque organizations around the world, especially in America. That would explain the difference (between the $1,023,004 collected and the $500,000 received by Aguirre."

Among Galindez's possessions, now in the custody of the New York public administrator, are $26,600 in United States and South American stocks, $5635 in cash and 92 boxes of personal effects.

Meanwhile, the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the university lecturer continues unabated. His friends have charged that he was assassinated by agents of Trujillo. The Dominican leader has termed the charge absurd. Another acquaintance of Galindez conjectures that the missing man may be in South America or Europe.

SAVES 100,350 PENNIES

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 7 (AP)—Harold C. Hasley has a lot of cents. One hundred thousand, three hundred and fifty to be exact.

Hasley, father of three children, began saving pennies in 1945. Recently he brought 20 bags to the bank to start a checking account. Not a single copper penny was found in the bags. The coins were all zinc ones.

2 PRIESTS FREED BY RED CHINESE APPEAR WELL

They Say 3 of 11 Other Americans Left Behind in Prison Are Sick.

HONG KONG, July 7 (UP)—Two American Roman Catholic priests who spent three years in Communist Chinese jails arrived here from Shanghai today in apparent good health. They said three of the 11 Americans they left behind are ill.

The arrival of the two Jesuits, John W. Clifford and Thomas L. Phillips, both of San Francisco, coincided with a report in the Hong Kong News that the Peiping regime will soon release three more American priests.

Father Clifford and Father Phillips returned to this British colony aboard the German ship Hamburg. They underwent physical examinations and then met with newsmen. Both appeared a little nervous but in good health.

Tortured to Confess.

They said the Communists never had specified charges against them but tried to torture them into "confessing" they had committed crimes against the government.

They were arrested June 15, 1953, and released last June 15.

Father Clifford said that although their treatment improved after the 1954 Geneva conference, the Communists now are more bitter against Catholics than in 1953.

Five days after his release, he said, five Chinese claiming to be "patriotic Catholics" visited him. They said all arrested priests were criminals.

He said a few days after his arrest, the Communists demanded the tell them what crimes he had committed.

"I told them I absolutely had committed no crimes and that 'you actually are the criminals'," he said. "They got excited. I was questioned five or six times."

He said he underwent one of his worst physical and mental tortures when the Communists put him in a four-by-five foot cell at the notorious ward road prison in Shanghai.

"I had a maniac for a neighbor who was raising a constant row," he said. "I think the Communist tactics were intended to wear me down by not letting me get enough sleep. The maniac at times stopped yelling from weariness, but the guards pounded on the door to arouse me. The solitary confinement lasted 25 days."

Father Phillips, former rector of Shanghai College, was interned for two and one-half years previously by the Japanese during World War II.

Questioned 150 Times.

He said he was questioned about 150 times and "as far as I could make out the charges were imperialism and being imperialist."

"The interrogations were merely to obtain some excuse to accuse me because they knew they had no grounds for arresting me," he said.

The six priests still in Red Chinese prisons are Jesuits Charles McCarthy of San Francisco, and John Houle, of Glendale, Calif.; Franciscans Fulgence Gross, of Omaha, Nebr.; Bishop Ambose Pinger, of Lindsay, Nebr., and John P. Wagner, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; and Joseph P. McCormick, of New York, of the Maryknoll order.

Fathers Phillips and Clifford said Bishop Pinger has high blood pressure and chronic backaches, Father Houle is suffering from spinal trouble from sitting on cell floors and Father Wagner has asthma.

The Hong Kong News said the Peiping regime is planning to release Father Gross, Bishop Pinger and Father Wagner. Theer was no other confirmation of this report.

Five other Americans still in Red Chinese prisons are Lutheran missionary Paul McKnison Jr., of Baltimore, Md.; business man Robert McCann, of Altadena, Pa.; importer Hugh F. Redmond, of Yonkers, N. Y.; and United States Army civilian tmployes John T. Downey, of New Britain, Conn., and Richard Fecteau, of Lynn, Mass.

The two priests said they had never met Downey, Fecteau or McCann but that the others were in good health.

Fathers Clifford and Phillips planned to return to the United States in a few weeks.

LAST-MINUTE OFFER AVERTS GRANITE CITY STEEL STRIKE

A last-minute proposal by Granite City Steel Co. averted a strike under consideration yesterday at membership meetings of the AFL-CIO United Steelworkers of America representing 3600 production workers. The union's negotiating committee, however, was empowered at its discretion to terminate the contract should negotiations break down.

An initial meeting of workers on one shift was about to receive a recommendation of the nine-member negotiating committee to give a required 48-hour notice of termination of a contract extension when the company proposal, dealing with incentive plans, was telephoned to Lloyd McBride, chairman of the committee and an international representative of the union. The recommendation then was changed.

The contract extension was approved eight days ago, when the union went on strike nationally at major steel plants elsewhere. Major economi issues are to be settled on the national level. Negotiators in Granite City have been dealing with local plant problems but ran into difficulties during consideration of an incentive plan.

GRAND JURY TO HEAR JUVENILE OFFENDERS

Youths Agree to Give Views on Causes of Crime Among Young.

Testimony of teen-agers will be heard this week by the Circuit Court grand jury in its investigation into the causes of juvenile delinquency, Circuit Attorney Edward L. Dowd said yesterday.

He said several youthful offenders who have been arrested by police have agreed to appear before the jury to offer their opinions on the causes of juvenile crime.

Others scheduled to testify before members of the grand jury are adults and teen-age leaders of youth, religious and welfare organizations.

Dowd said the current investigation will continue for two weeks.

Meanwhile, it was learned last night that James E. Stephens, 17 years old, who was indicted Friday in the June 26 assault on a 13-year-old girl in O'Fallon Park, had been committed to Missouri Hills, the city's correctional institution for boys, in 1954.

Stephens, who lives in the 1100 block of North Eighth street, was given community probation Sept. 2, 1954.

In St. Clair county, the county board of supervisors at Belleville yesterday authorized open hearings to determine the extent of teen-age crime and juvenile delinquency in the county's unincorporated areas.

Wetzel G. Harris, board chairman, was directed to appoint a special committee to conduct the hearings. Those asked to review conditions and make recommendations for improvement will include police officers and clergymen.

GEN. GIBSON TO ADDRESS GROUND OBSERVER CORPS

The meeting, to which Mayor Raymond R. Tucker and the mayors of all county municipalities have been invited, will honor the 1000 volunteer observers associated with the Ground Observer Corps Filter Center in Brentwood. Gen. Gibson will discuss the nation's air defense system.

STEVENSON CLAIMS IOWA, NEBRASKA

Aids Say He Has Most of Former's 24 Votes, 8 of Latters' 12.

DES MOINES, July 7 (AP)—Supporters of Adlai Stevenson for the Democratic presidential nomination said here tonight they expect the former Illinois governor will go into the party's national convention with most of Iowa's 24 votes.

Stevenson flew into Des Moines from Omaha after a 500-mile tour of drouth areas in four midwest states. At Omaha Stevenson forces claimed eight of Nebraska's 12 votes in the national convention.

Stevenson attended a buffet dinner with members of the Iowa national convention delegation and other party leaders. About 100 prominent Democrats were present.

R. W. Baxter of Burlington, chairman of the Iowa Stevenson for President Committee, recalled that Stevenson forces claimed 16 Iowa votes after the recent state delegate convention. He said he feels now that "we will have some in addition to that," but he mentioned no specific figure.

Hy Raskin, executive director of the Stevenson campaign committee, said after Stevenson lunched at Omaha with members of the unpledged Nebraska delegation that Stevenson can probably count on eight of Nebraska's 12 votes in the national convention.

Raskin, who has been contacting delegates in the western half of the United States, said his tour convinced him that the claim of Stevenson forces that he now is assured of 500 first ballot votes is "quite conservative."

Before his meeting with delegates, Stevenson summed up his impressions of his farm tour in a statement which called "'prosperity' . . . a mockery when so many farmers are going broke."

Livestock farmers, he said, are "the orphans of the Eisenhower-Benson farm program."

"It seems to me possible to deal with livestock so that high fixed costs will not eat up all the profits," he said. "Effective feed grain controls, help to school lunches and hungry people, and sensible supports could make a vast difference."

Denver Delegates Are 50-50 for Stevenson, Harriman.

DENVER, July 7 (AP)—Denver Democrats picked eight delegates, each with one-half vote, to the Democratic national convention today and divided the group between supporters of Adlai Stevenson and Averell Harriman.

The delegates were the first selected by Colorado Democrats, who hold 20 convention votes.

Connecticut Convention Adds 20 Stevenson Votes.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 7 (AP) — Connecticut Democrats today picked a delegation for the national convention that will add 20 votes to the Adlai Stevenson camp. The delegation will cast its votes as a unit for the candidate favored by a majority of the 40 delegates chosen by the state convention.

The delegates are headed by Gov. Abraham Ribicoff, an avowed Stevenson booster. There is no known opposition to Stevenson in the delegation, and it is clear that a majority now favors him.

The Democrats nominated Representative Thomas J. Dodd to run for Senator in November against the Republican incumbent, Senator Prescott Bush.

Dodd, the only Connecticut Democrat in Congress now, was one of the principal prosecutors at the Nuernberg war trials.

GIRL, 12, UNAWED BY PISTOL, ROUTS 3 HOLDUP MEN

CHICAGO, July 7 (UP) — A 12-year-old girl exhibited more courage than three robers yesterday when she foiled a holdup attempt of her father's store by attempting to wrest a pistol from one of the men and then running for help.

Roberta Ehrlich, a seventh grader, explained her daring action by saying, "I just got real angry."

The robbery attempt started when three men, one of them carrying a pistol, entered the Cadillac Home Supply Co. store, which is managed by her father, Benjamin Ehrlich, 45.

When Ehrlich and Gene Perry, 45, a purchasing agent for the store, balked against the holdup attempt, the gun-toting leader of the three men began to beat Ehrlich with the revolver. Another started to beat Perry.

The girl heard the scuffling from an adjoining room and came out. She grabbed the barrel end of the revolver from the leader and attempted to wrest it from him. The man pushed her out of the office door.

She shouted to her father that she would get help, and raced away.

The three men, unnerved, fled in two cars.

Later the girl told police, "I saw the man hitting my daddy with the gun and his jaw was all bleeding. I just got real angry."

TWO PEDESTRIANS WOUNDED, SIX MEN IN TRUCK ARRESTED

Fred Raymond, 24 years old, 1020 Atchison place, and John Washington, 19, 4227 Easton avenue, were wounded early yesterday by bullets fired by a young man shooting at pedestrians on Franklin avenue and Delmar boulevard from an open truck.

Raymond was shot in the right leg while walking in the 1600 block of Franklin. Washington was shot in the right hip and forearm at Sixteenth street and Delmar. Both men, Negroes, were taken to City Hospital.

Shortly after the shooting of Washington, police stopped a truck on Seventh street, between Carr and Cole streets, and arrested six young men riding in it. A foreign-made pistol, with six discharged shells, was found in the street near the truck. The occupants of the truck, all Negroes, denied knowledge of the shootings, but were booked suspected of assault with intent to kill. Police said shots also were fired at a woman in the 1400 block of Franklin.

DWYER APPOINTED CHAIRMAN OF BLAIR CITY CAMPAIGN

City Treasurer John J. Dwyer, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, has been named chairman of the St. Louis campaign committee backing Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr. of Jefferson City for the Democratic nomination for Governor, it was announced yesterday.

Powell B. McHaney, head of the St. Louis-St. Louis county Citizens-for-Blair Committee, also announced that Joseph Oxenhandler would be finance chairman for Blair's city campaign group; Dillon J. Ross, president of the Jefferson Bank & Trust Co., will be treasurer, and Henry W. Simpson, who announced his withdrawal as a candidate for circuit attorney, will head the veterans' group.

The St. Louis County Blair-for-Governor Committee announced that Blair would make a major campaign speech at a $5-a-plate dinner sponsored by the committee, at Hotel Chase July 18.

APPLICATIONS SOUGHT FOR JUBILEE SHOW

Actors, Singers and Dancers Asked to Write to Producer-Director.

Actors, singers and dancers who wish parts in "Heartland U.S.A.," a musical show to be presented nightly Sept. 1 through 30 as a highlight of the Mid-American Jubilee on the St. Louis riverfront, were asked to apply yesterday by James Vincent Russo, the show's producer and director.

Photographs and summaries of the backgrounds of applicants should be mailed to Mid-America Jubilee Spectacle Show Office, 1501 Locust street, St. Louis 3.

With a cast of 350, the production will tell the story of the development of the mid-continent area.

Rehearsals will be held in August. Augmenting the cast will be bands and choruses of civic groups, drill teams, square dancers and groups performing folk dances of various nationalities.

The stage for the show will be erected opposite the Old Cathedral. For each day of the exposition a special event has been scheduled at 2:30 p.m. with about 50,000 persons expected to take part in the course of the Jubilee.

Additional groups may be scheduled if their spokesmen will cal or write George Dewey Lorey, director of special events, at the Jubilee office, at the Locust street address. CHestnut 1-6838.

At July Fourth Reception in Moscow

DAG HAMMARSKJOLD, Secretary-General of the United Nations, sips drink as he listens to NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV, Communist party chief, at July Fourth reception in the United States Embassy in Moscow. He is president of the White Supply Co. Both are 71 years old and live at 7 South Moorland place, Glendale.

RIVER DES PERES WEEDS GROWING INTO A PROBLEM

Crews of the Metropolitan Sewer District have been waging a losing fight to keep down the lush growth of weeds along the open storm water drainage channel of the River Des Peres in south St. Louis, officials said yesterday.

Some of the weeds on the sides of the river banks near Morganford road have reached a height of seven feet. The park division keeps the grass cut on the higher levels, which is that part of River Des Peres park lying between Carondelet boulevard and the channel, but the sewer district has responsibility for maintaining the channel area.

The city recently began enforcing a new ordinance which requires property owners to cut weeds on notification by the city, and directs the Park Division to cut them when property owners do not. The owners are billed for this work.

Ralph Mueller, assistant sewer commissioner for the district, said weed-cutting crews have been working strenuously to keep down the growth on 18 miles of banks along the nine-mile channel. Rainy weather, however, tipped the scales in favor of weed-growing and against weed-cutting.

BERKELEY CHARTER GROUP TO SOLICIT SUGGESTIONS

A public hearing at which suggestions will be sought for a home-rule charter for Berkeley, will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the Caroline elementary school, 6038 Caroline avenue, by the Berkeley Charter Commission.

Suggestions and information concerning the functions of present departments have been obtained in a series of meetings with city officials since the commission's election last April 3. Actual writing of the charter is expected to start soon after Wednesday's meeting, a commission spokesman said.

Louis A. Perrin, aircraft engineer, 8904 Kathlyn drive, and David G Lupo, attorney, 8530 Midwood avenue, have been chosen members of the commission to fill vacancies left by the resignation of two former members. They were selected by the commission from the list of unsuccessful candidates in the April election.

UNITED FUND DRIVE OPENS OCT. 9, EARLIER THAN IN '55

The second annual United Fund campaign will begin Oct. 9, twelve days earlier than last year, Charles P. Whitehead, general chairman, announced yesterday. It will end Oct. 30.

Whitehead said the campaign was moved forward so that it could be concluded well before the Christmas holiday season and tie in better with national publicity concerning the work of United Funds.

Goal of the campaign has not yet been set. Financial needs of 114 agencies now comprising the Fund are being studied by budget committees and recommendations will be made within the next few weeks, Whitehead said.

5 ST. LOUIS BRIDGE PLAYERS WIN DENVER CHAMPIONSHIPS

The team-of-four championship was won by Mr. and Mrs. John E. Simon of the Park Plaza Hotel, Leo B. Weiner of 4501 Maryland avenue, Mrs. Philip Sttinberg of 7905 Cornell avenue, University City, and Mrs. Charles M. Newbill of El Paso, Tex., a former St. Louisan.

Milton W. Bierbaum, 7072 Emma avenue, Jennings, and Paul Katt of Denver, who formerly lived in Belleville, won the men's pair championship.

Westinghouse Laundromat gives you a whole new way to wash! Westinghouse removed the center post entirely . . . put smooth agitator vanes at the outside of the washbasket. SENATOR FEELS ANY BID TO DROP NIXON WILL FAIL

Goldwater Says He Has Detected No Organized Drive Against Vice President.

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP)—Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona predicted to day the Republican national convention delegates will defeat any effort that might develop to dump Vice President Richard M. Nixon from the ticket.

Goldwater, former chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, said in an interview that although he had heard rumors of revived opposition to Nixon he has not detected any organized move against the Vice President.

"There may be some Republicans who want to replace Nixon on the ticket, but I don't think the delegates to the convention would stand for it," Goldwater said. "The Vice President is mighty popular with the workers of the Republican party. I think his popularity with them is almost as great as that of President Eisenhower himself."

Republican Senators Frank Carlson of Kansas and Gordon Elliott of Colorado reported in separate interviews they had heard some talk of replacing Nixon after Mr. Eisenhower's second illness. Both said, however, that they had discounted it. Both predicted Nixon's nomination.

Some dump-Nixon sentiment developed after Mr. Eisenhower's Sept. 24 heart attack. It died out after Nixon said last spring he wants to run again and President Eisenhower welcomed him to the ticket.

Similar talk has been current in some Republican circles since Mr. Eisenhower was stricken with ileitis and underwent an operation a month ago.

A few Republicans went so far as to suggest privately that Nixon was dispatched on a Far Eastern trip at a time when anybody working against him might be the most active.

But a Republican official who was consulted about the trip in advance said he was certain there was no thought of removing Nixon from the scene. This official, who asked not to be quoted by name, said he can find no substantial Republican opposition to Nixon.

Democrats obviously are going to make Nixon a top target in their general election campaign. They don't like him because they say he implied in the 1954 election drive their party was soft on Communism.

Beyond that, however, the Democrats see in Nixon a target they can fire at with the hope some of their shots will reach home to the President.

With suggestions like that of Senator Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma, that Mr. Eisenhower is "ailing, frustrated," the Democrats are promoting the idea that the vice presidential spot on the G.O.P. ticket is an issue of unusual importance this year.

ST. LOUIS U. GIRL CHEMIST GIVEN $400 SCHOLARSHIP

Miss Birute Ona Miniatas, a graduate student at St. Louis University, has received a part-scholarship of $400 from the National Catholic Educational Association, it was announced yesterday.

Miss Miniatas

The scholarship, contributed annually, will allow Miss Miniatas to continue her studies in chemistry. A native of Lithuania, she came to the United States in 1949, first attending the Chicago College of Laboratory Technology.

Miss Miniatas has received two additional scholarships while in this country. The first was to Webster College, where she was graduated magna cum laude. She received the other to do graduate work at St. Louis University. Miss Miniatas lives at Webster College, where she is a part-time instructor.

DIAL TELEPHONE OPERATIONS START IN SAPPINGTON AREA

Operation of a new dial telephone system in the Sappington area was begun today. All telephones operating through a new central office building, on Gravois road west of Sappington road, have a "Victor 3" prefix.

Single and two-party line subscribers in the new exchange will be able to dial long distance calls directly to all points in the metropolitan area and to many cities in the United States.

Construction of the new office building began 15 months ago. Its cost with new equipment and facilities was about $1,000,000, a Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. spokesman said.

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS DRIVE TO GO ON THROUGH SUMMER

Contributions totaling $18,864 have been received by the St. Louis chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society in a campaign to raise $30,000, Frank E. Brennan, general chairman, announced yesterday. Donations represent 63 per cent of the goal.

The drive will continue through the summer, Brennan said. Money raised will be used to begin a program of aid to multiple sclerosis patients in this area and to support a national research program to find the cause and cure of the disease.

CAMBODIA TO GET SOVIET INDUSTRY, ECONOMIC AID

Prince Signs Accord in Moscow—Says Hope of His People Rests With Russia.

MOSCOW, July 7 (AP)—Prince Norodom Sihanouk concluded an agreement with the Soviet Union today for economic and industrial aid to his Indochinese kingdom of Cambodia. He declared the hope of his people "rests in the Soviet Union for the realization of our desires for peace and prosperity."

A communique signed in the Kremlin announced that Prime Minister Bulganin, Communist party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev and Foreign Minister Dmitri Shepilov had accepted an invitation to visit Cambodia at a date to be set later.

The communique said also the Russians had agreed to build, equip and staff a hospital in Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital. Under the aid agreement the Russians will supply industrial equipment to Cambodia and send technicians to instruct the Cambodians in its use.

(The New York Herald Tribune-Post Dispatch news service said the communique praised the Soviet Union for "offering technical and economic assistance without any mercenary conditions." It added that the communique stated this offer had been made in order to allow Cambodia "to develop her economy and continue to defend the policy of neutrality.")

Both countries had previously agreed to establish diplomatic relations.

Former King and Premier.

The Prince is a former king of Cambodia. He resigned as premier last March 30 but remains the country's foremost political leader. Formerly one of the Associated States of Indochina under French rule, Cambodia has been drifting toward closer relationships with the Communist bloc, first in Peiping and now in Moscow.

At the Kremlin communique signing ceremonies, Sihanouk pledged his country to live in friendship and brotherhood with the Soviet Union. Later at a news conference he added:

"The people of the Soviet Union have shown us astonishing hospitality. This for us is proof the Soviet people sincerely desire there be a true understanding among people. It is also proof the Soviet people love peace.

"As for the leaders of the Soviet government I have been privileged to meet, I am able to see their dynamism, clairvoyance, realism, charming simplicity of manner and remarkable comprehension of international relations and understanding of the aspirations of the Asian peoples."

Aid From U.S.

Cambodia, a country of about 4,000,000 population covering 70,000 square miles, has been receiving United States economic and military aid. For the 1956 fiscal year this amounted to about $50,000,000.

When Sihanouk resigned his premiership he charged the United States made it impossible for him to conduct a neutralist foreign policy. When United States Secretary of State John Foster Dulles made his Southeast Asia tour last spring he stopped in Saigon, capital of South Viet Nam, but made no visit to Phnom Penh.

Sihanouk visited Peiping last winter. He told reporters in New Delhi en route to Moscow that the Chinese Reds had granted Cambodia almost $22,500,000 in economic aid. Sihanouk stopped in Warsaw and also has Prague on his itinerary.

EX-U.S. RED LEADER IN PEIPING

LONDON, July 7 (UP)—Irving Potash, a former Communist party official in the United States, arrived today in the Chinese Communist capital of Peiping, a Peiping radio broadcast reported.

The Russian-born Potash left the United States to live in Poland in March 1955, rather than face further prosecution under the Smith Act.

Meeting at Summit

A Year Later, Seen as Liability to West

A New American Policy Has Not Been Formed, to Meet the 'Relaxation' Following Geneva.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

WASHINGTON, July 7.

ONE year ago the heads of state of Great Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union were preparing to meet in Geneva, Switzerland, for the most momentous—and the most intensively publicized—conference since the end of World War II. An American President would for the first time in peace sit down across the conference table from the masters of the Communist half of the world.

Never before had such a battery of press, radio, television and newsreel specialists gathered to record a single event. The outward and visible evidence of the goodwill generated at Geneva was projected to the farthest corners of the earth.

BUT THE DEBATE has gone on ever since as to what this vastly publicized meeting really signified. It has been dismissed as an ad man's dream of glory generating a false and therefore a dangerous sense of harmony. Certainly in the campaign this fall the Republicans will pull out all the stops on the theme of an Eisenhower peace linked to Republican prosperity.

As was quickly proved when the Foreign Ministers met in October under instructions from the heads of state, not one of the outstanding differences between East and West had been resolved. The Communists and the Western powers were just as far apart as they had ever been on German reunification and disarmament. Although they had some advance word of it, the Western powers did not even bring up at the summit the proposed Communist arms deal with Egypt and in retrospect with war threatening in the Middle East this may seem to have been the most glaring failure of the Geneva meeting.

On two points, however, there is wide agreement that the conference did produce positive results. First, President Eisenhower convinced world opinion that the United States wanted peace, counteracting a widely held view of this country as warmonger triggering the hydrogen bomb. Neutral leaders such as Prime Minister Nehru of India were deeply impressed. Even those most critical agree that this was a positive achievement.

Second, the conference helped to "relax tensions" on both sides of the Iron Curtain. But it is just here that the critics are fearful of the consequences. A powerful case can be made that in the West the relaxation is real and that it will become total relaxation. In the Communist sphere the relaxation is more apparent than real; more nearly a propaganda show than a fact.

The consequence, in this pessimistic view, is that even with a degree of real relaxation in the Communist world the Soviet curve of productive strength will go steadily up until at some point between 1965 and 1975 Soviet production will exceed Western production. This is the view expressed by former Secretary of State Dean Acheson when in a recent speech he pointed to the fact that out of Russia's total production 20 per cent is going for the military and 40 per cent into investment for the future with only 40 per cent for civilian consumption. In the West, up to 73 per cent of what is produced is consumed by the civilian population.

So much must be weighed in trying to foresee the future balance of power. The number of jet bombers on each side is merely one obvious element. Deep divisions at home and abroad make for damaging conflict in the free society of the West. If Americans are so divided they cannot agree on a way for the Federal Government to help public schools then the American educational system will continue to deteriorate and Russia will continue to turn out more and better trained scientists and technicians.

What has happened in the year that has passed is surely no reason for the smugness and complacency too often voiced here. The tangibles and intangibles to be weighed in the great scales of the future should give even the headiest optimist pause.

On the surface, the differences are great. A year or a year and a half ago few would have ventured to predict the exchanges going on across the Curtain. An American violinist, Isaac Stern, was wildly cheered for half an hour by a packed audience in the Conservatory of Music in Moscow. Iowans a year ago vied with each other in entertaining the Soviet agricultural experts who toured the Middle West. Russian churchmen who recently returned a visit of American churchmen signed with church leaders in this country a remarkable document on the independence of church and state.

These instances could be multiplied many times over and despite certain continuing obstacles they are bound to increase. But they are superficial changes and that is true, thus far at any rate, of the relaxation of life inside the Soviet sphere.

During the nearly 40 years since the Bolshevik revolution the Russian people have lived at a level barely above subsistence. Capital investment to build the Soviet Union into an industrial-military power has been at the cost of the amenities and even most of what are considered in the West the decencies of life. The iron despotism of Stalin forced the sacrifice of shoes—not butter but shoes—for guns and the means to make guns.

SUMMIT CONFERENCE in session at Geneva: July, 1955.

The important point for the West, under the relaxation to which Geneva contributed, is that by letting up the pressure a very little—just a few shoes—the new masters of the Kremlin can gain much in acquiesence and loyalty while continuing to build power at an ever more rapid rate. It is against the overwhelming fact of the mounting curve of Soviet power that the summit conference and its consequences must be measured.

In his commencement speech at Brandeis University Acheson pointed out that with Western Russia in ruins in February, 1946, Stalin set production goals for 1960 which the West considered fantastic. Coal production was set at 500,000,000 metric tons. It is 400,000,000 tons today. Petroleum and steel were each set at 60,000,000; petroleum today is 70,000,000, steel close to 50,000,000. The Twentieth Communist Party Congress revised these goals sharply upward.

"There is always the suggestion," Acheson said, "that the fervor of the revolution is giving way to the more stable and cautious attitudes of vested and bureaucratic interests. There is undoubtedly truth in this but it gives me no comfort. The new leaders seem to me every bit as ruthless and dangerous as the old ones. It was not Stalin's revolutionary fervor which made him dangerous but the imperialistic ambitions held by a competent autocracy in possession of a powerful country."

The pressure was great to get the United States to sit down with the Soviets at a top level conference. The British argued at the NATO meeting in Paris in May last year this was an urgent necessity to help elect Anthony Eden and a Conservative Government. Dulles agreed to the conference although he realized the hazards to the West in advertising a false atmosphere of geniality through the kind of pictures inevitably coming out of such a conference showing Eisenhower and Bulganin toasting peace and mutual friendship.

WHAT THEN were the alternatives? To have refused to participate would have offended America's Western allies, the British in particular, and would have tended to confirm the impression among the neutrals that the United States wanted not peace but a continuation of the cold war.

Having agreed to go to the summit, the United States might have insisted on hard bargaining on the major differences such as Germany and the approach to disarmament. The West might also, even on the basis of then still unofficial information about the Egyptian arms deal, have put the issue of peace in the Middle East squarely up to the Russians.

All this would have meant that the final communique would have been a pretty cold document without any of the vague aura of hope for future agreement that it did contain. Such frankness could hardly have been interpreted as peace in our time and it would not have made for pious slogans in anybody's election campaign.

But, granted the kind of relaxation bound to follow even an agreement to try to make peace, there was another alternative for American policymakers. They were under imperative necessity to come up with new ideas, new policy, a new approach to the allies, the neutrals and the Communist states.

IT IS HERE, in the opinion of this observer, that the Administration, during the past year, has largely defaulted. Policy has for the most part remained rigidly fixed in the same old grooves. On Germany, on disarmament, on SEATO, NATO and the other alliances the familiar position has, with small exceptions, been reiterated. With competitive relaxation going on between the Western powers the framework of American policy has remained as rigid and in some respects nearly as outdated as a dinosaur skeleton.

The contrast with the Soviets is striking. Khrushchev and Bulganin toured Southeast Asia making conspicuous gestures of aid and spreading smiles and flattery on every hand. They visited England and sought, with somewhat less success, to generate the same atmosphere of hearty good will. They leapfrogged over the NATO eastern line to put themselves spang into the Middle East with the Egyptian arms deal. While the Communist parties in the West have given a show of independence, a further inducement to relaxation, the hold of Moscow seems to be nearly as effective as ever.

President Eisenhower's heart attack, coming only two months after the summit conference, may have had some deterrent effect although he was in the midst of a long vacation in Colorado when the attack occurred. The impending election campaign has perhaps imposed some inhibitions.

But the failure to reshape policy in the aftermath of the summit conference cannot be so easily explained away. The fact of a new and widely advertised geniality between West and East, however unreal it was in substance, created a brand new situation. Having permitted that situation to develop, the leaders of the West were obligated to develop a new policy to meet it. They have not done so. And, in reckoning the score of the past 12 months this must be set down as the gravest omission. It is in the light of this omission that the net result of the intensively publicized summit meeting adds up to a liability to the West.

'Eisenhower, the Inside Story': New Book Raises a Controversy

White House Documents Are Used as Sources by a New York Herald-Tribune Correspondent.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 7.

WITH President Eisenhower's positive or tacit approval, Robert J. Donovan, a Washington correspondent of the pro-Administration New York Herald Tribune, has produced a controversial and perhaps important campaign document in his recently published, "Eisenhower, the Inside Story."

Undisclosed high-ranking White House officials, who "leaked" secret official and confidential political information to Donovan, obviously thought a book by a Herald Tribune writer would help Republican chances in the November presidential and congressional elections. Because of its sources, the book has a strong Administration slant but it contains seemingly factual information which Democrats can use for their partisan purposes to show how momentous decisions are made within the Government and how the Republicans are split on fundamental national and international issues.

Democratic Senator John L. McClellan of Arkansas, chairman of the Government Operations Committee, has taken the lead among congressional Democrats in pointing out that the White House has made information available to a writer which was denied to official investigating bodies. A few reporters have complained that a rival has been given an unprecedented advantage over others in the press corps and it is rumored—but not verified—that several members of the Cabinet and White House consultants have been embarrassed by seeing what they considered their private and confidential views in cold type.

The 407-page book is eminently readable and some day may be of value to historians. It is, however, "an" inside story, not "the" inside story of Gen. Eisenhower's three and a half years in the White House. Donovan undoubtedly had a great mass of material from which to select what he thought interesting and important and he must have talked with a number of high officials who kept detailed notes or had unusually retentive memories about what was discussed in Cabinet sessions and in the most confidential of political meetings. It is said—and this cannot be verified because no official is telling how Donovan gathered his material—that he was given "Q" security clearance to inspect national defense documents. This clearance has been limited to a few top officials and if Donovan received it he was indeed favored by the White House. He has left Washington on a five-weeks' vacation to avoid being involved in the controversy. Before leaving, he said that no political official had read the book for censorship purposes but that it had been submitted for the usual national security protection.

AS A CAMPAIGN DOCUMENT, it is far more balanced and revealing than the 24 excerpts that were syndicated to about 50 newspapers by the Herald Tribune. It is in chronological form, beginning with the President-elect's pre-inaugural meeting at the Hotel Commodore in New York with his Cabinet and staff-to-be. It ends with hitherto secret events leading to Mr. Eisenhower's announcement of his decision to accept a second nomination.

Donovan, 44 years old, has been on the Herald Tribune for 20 years, the last 10 in Washington. He is rated a competent, conscientious craftsman by his colleagues and while there may be disgreements among newspaper men and politicians over what he selected and what he omitted from the vast material that came under his favored scrutiny, he has done a worthwhile job. It is unthinkable that the White House would have given the advantage to an unfriendly or even an impartial writer in a campaign year. Donovan offers his own comments on some of the episodes he reports and occasionally he debunks official acts and utterances he thinks were designed for political purposes.

ROBERT J. DONOVAN
How decisions were made.

The so-called revelations promised by the book publishers are relatively minor but added together the intimate glimpses behind the scenes do give more definite color and form to what was already known by most well-informed newspaper readers about the President and his closest advisers.

For instance, it was commonly known that the President was disgusted and dismayed by the record his party made in the first session of the Republican-controlled Eighty-third Congress, during which many expected he would have the historical honeymoon of congressional cooperation. It was also reported that he had talked with some of his friends about how much better things would be if he could lead a new party of moderate Republicans and moderate Democrats.

Donovan writes that Mr. Eisenhower "began asking his most intimate associates whether he did not have to start thinking about a new party.

"As he conceived it, such a party would have been essentially his party. It would have represented those doctrines, international and domestic, which he believed were best for the United States and indeed for the world. It would have attracted those men and women of the older parties who believed as he did and who wanted to promote and preserve enlightened and progressive policies.

"The President even went so far as to think of a name for it, but he never hit upon one."

The author continues that the more Mr. Eisenhower pondered the idea of a new party the more he was forced into the realization that it was not the solution to the problem, as he turned over in his mind the failures of previous third party movements by Theodore Roosevelt and Robert M. La Follette Sr.

Donovan says that "the idea never progressed beyond the President's thinking and private conversations."

In addition to T. R. and the senior La Follette, who went beyond the pondering stage to form third parties, other Presidents made active efforts to purge their own parties of what they called unsympathetic factions. Franklin D. Roosevelt publicly berated the conservative Democrats and campaigned against Senators Walter F. George of Georgia and Millard Tydings of Maryland and Representative John J. O'Connor of New York; Truman defied the Southern Dixiecrats and the Wallace "Progressives" in 1948—and won. F.D.R. and Truman speculated privately about having their own party to back their programs but, as political realists, they knew this was an unattainable goal under the American constitutional system.

Not All Material Will Help Republicans in Campaign —Anger of President at McCarthy Is Revealed.

Donovan writes that later Mr. Eisenhower "took a new and calm look at what he was doing and where he was headed.

"On balance he came to the conclusion that his best hope of attaining his goals was to persevere in trying to give the Republican party a new viewpoint and a new complexion. He hoped that with patience on his part and through the logic of events and the influx of younger Republicans devoted to his philosophy he could to a considerable extent modernize and unify the party."

Donovan reports that early in his Administration Mr. Eisenhower was rankled by the Democratic claims that the Republicans were concerned only with Big Business.

"The President observed," he writes, "that 'Business Administration' had become the standard epithet for its critics to hurl at the Republicans. The Administration, he said, should take pride in the phrase as being one that meant that it was devoted to a business-like approach to the problems of Government. Nevertheless, he cautioned, willing acceptance of the label made it absolutely necessary for the Administration to be humane and to maintain its humaneness for all to see. Be busines-like, yes, the President said, but let the Administration never fall in the slightest degree to show its concern for 'the little man.'"

Donovan's listings of Mr. Eisenhower's closest advisers before and after his election reflects why the President was concerned about the Big Business label. Nearly all were successful business men; there were few, if any labor leaders, educators and professional men or experienced politicians—except the congressional leaders.

The pre-inauguration meeting of the Cabinet-to-be illustrated the difficulty in avoiding the Big Business label. Mr. Eisenhower submitted a draft of his inaugural address for suggestions. Turning to his then speech writer, Emmet Hughes, a former editor of Life magazine, he said he had been unable to find the proper words to express the merits of productivity.

Charles E. Wilson, who was later to sell his millions in General Motors stock, observed that he had a little thing on productivity.

"It is the urge and continuing effort," he said, "to accomplish more with the same human effort. That is the basis of the thing. Sometimes people think productivity means sweating the boys more. That's not the thing."

The President-elect interjected:

"That is one reason we were afraid that anything we would say would leave the impression that we were preaching going back to the 48-hour week, or something like that. It does not mean that, but it does mean that when a fellow is working at his maximum capacity and efficiency he is doing something not just for his pocketbook or the profit of the country, but the world."

The address as delivered omitted reference to increased productivity, which organized labor insists is a "speed up" unless accompanied by increased pay.

DONOVAN'S QUOTATIONS of remarks of Cabinet officers and staff members behind closed doors will furnish the Democrats campaign ammunition to show that several of the President's advisers frequently forgot the President's admonition to think constantly about the "little people."

At a White House meeting with Republican leaders, Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey recommended a reduction in excise and corporation income taxes. Donovan reports that Humphrey thought no excise tax should be higher than 10 per cent and "in his personal opinion a good case could be made for a 5 per cent excise tax on virtually all items except food."

The author says the congressional leaders threw up their hands at this thought. There was no chance that such a proposal could pass the Senate, one of them said. A House leader ventured that while revision of excises could be made selectively, a general excise tax cut was out of the question.

At a Cabinet meeting last October, when the President was still in Denver after his heart attack, Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson presented a paper on the farm situation, including its political significance for this year. The paper, according to Donovan, urged strong support by the White House and the Republican National Committee on Benson's farm program.

During the discussion, Donovan writes, "Humphrey questioned whether a great deal could be done about the farm problem except to let natural processes do their work."

Harold E. Stassen at that time had been serving for months as a special consultant on peace proposals but here, as in other meetings, he had views on other subjects. Stassen, Donovan says, supported the economic soundness of Benson's report but suggested "in addition more dramatic strokes were necessary to give the program political appeal. He also emphasized that the price of hogs must be turned upward before it hit rock bottom. For the problem as a whole, he urged measures to reduce the number of farms and for selling commodities abroad. In short, he

Report on the Long Road Toward German Rearmament

By BRIG. GEN. THOMAS R. PHILLIPS, U.S.A. (Retired)
Military Analyst of the Post-Dispatch.

BONN, July 7.

THE evening is bland, after months of cold and wet weather. The Soviet Ambassador to Germany is at the theater outside the little hotel in Bad Godesberg to watch a Soviet film of Arctic animal life. Hundreds of Germans are standing around to watch him come out.

Alphonse Juin, Marshal of France, is here in his American-supplied Buick, parading his seven stars on plates fore and aft, together with a flag in front. Ostensibly he is making a final tour of his central European command before his resignation of the command takes effect Oct. 1, simultaneously with the departure of General Alfred M. Gruenther, the American commander of the NATO forces.

At the Bundestag, the debate over the conscription bill, essential to get the new German military establishment off the ground, is proceeding—with the third and final reading in unexampled bitterness in postwar Germany.

At the Defense Ministry, General Adolphe Heusinger, the equivalent in Germany to our Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was this morning holding himself in tightly while discussing his military hopes and plans with the writer.

The start of the German military establishment was delayed while the French first proposed and then refused to accede to the European Defense Community. It was not until Germany became a member of Western European Union and the Western governments had signed the peace contract that Germany had the right to a military establishment of its own.

But even after the international way was cleared for German rearmament, internal politics in Germany—the effort of the opposition Socialist party to capitalize on the German distaste for arming again together with some failure on the part of the German defense authorities to realize the problems of setting up a defense establishment—has set back the German military effort for about a year.

Heusinger is dedicated to a democratic military establishment and has pledged his support to the effort to establish civilian control over the army.

American Ambassador James B. Conant supports Heusinger and the German authorities as being sincere in this respect. Conant told the writer: "One of the reasons for the delay in starting the German army has been the deep concern by all parties in the Bundestag that it will be what is called a democratic army. By this phrase is meant under civilian control and officered by people loyal to the conception of civilian control and loyal to the ideals of the federal government."

Heusinger is concerned with the psychological effect of the Soviet disarmament and peace offensive. The result of Russian propaganda and proposals is that people think the danger of war is over, he said.

But, he continued, "Every free people wants to be able to defend its freedom. No one knows how long the Soviets will follow this line. They can change overnight. In a dictatorship such as Hitler's or the Soviets' war and peace is a matter of what is more useful at the moment."

Heusinger had a distinguished career as a staff officer in the last war. He was operations officer of the army staff. In the peculiar division of responsibility for operations under Hitler, the army staff conducted the war in the west while the over-all war staff was responsible for the war in the east.

Under present plans, Germany will have 12 divisions under arms in three years. The men will be in uniform but not trained and combat-ready. It is expected that four years will be required for the air force and that during the fourth year the supporting units for the army will be organized.

The new German divisions each will contain from 12,000 to 13,000 men. Heusinger thinks the organization adopted has the greatest flexibility of any. Divisions can be separated into self-contained smaller units if necessary.

The present organization has a Ministry of Defense and three subordinate departments. These are the army, the air force, and a new type of military department that is charged with all matters common to more than one service.

Not all observers are as optimistic as Heusinger about the speed with which German rearmament will proceed. The costs to fully rearm in four years will be greater than the German Parliament is willing to support, they fear.

The United States is supplying initially about a billion dollars worth of equipment to carry the German military establishment for its first two years. After that Germany is expected to be on its own and to provide its own arms.

Recruiting for the new armed forces has been disappointing. Only about half as many of the border police volunteered for the army as had been anticipated. There are 22,000 men under arms now and the Bundestag has provided for 56,000 by the end of the year.

The schedule, however, calls for 96,000 by the end of this year, 250,000 by the end of 1957 and 500,000 by the end of 1958.

Conant said somewhat optimistically: "The German rearmament effort is now well under way. Although relatively the start has been slow, I have little doubt that it will proceed as scheduled."

The American military assistance advisory group that is responsible for instructing in the use of equipment is enthusiastic about the speed with which the Germans are taking hold. The major training of German cadres is taking place in American divisions stationed in Germany. A limited number of technical specialists are sent to the United States for schooling.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

'The Only Answer'

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I cannot help expressing my relief and gratification at noting that the Post-Dispatch has refused to answer to the House Appropriations Committee concerning its editorial of June 24, "Losing the Peaceful Atom?"

I write for myself, and not as chairman of the American Society of Newspaper Editors' Freedom of Information Committee. I realize that this is a matter of freedom of the press, rather than freedom of information. Yet sometimes it is hard to disentangle the two. And I for one am convinced that to refuse to answer for what it says to an arm of government is the only answer any free newspaper should ever give in like circumstances.

I realize that editors have disagreed on this in the past, and no doubt do now. Yet it seems to me that only if newspapers defend to the utmost their right to say what they please can they keep the First Amendment and all it means intact.

This is true whether it is The New York Times in World War I, Hearst in 1936, or Rumely, Wechsler, the Post-Dispatch, or the least significant newspaper in the country.

We either keep our freedom or we don't. And to keep it we have to fight for it constantly. What you and your associates have done today helps us all to breathe free.

HERBERT BRUCKER,
Editor, The Hartford Courant.
Hartford, Conn.

As to TV News Bulletins

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

With deep respect and admiration, my family and I want to thank your television station KSD-TV for its intelligent, tactful manner of presenting news bulletins during dull, uninteresting one-hour dramatic programs. Particularly since the news itself was of earth-shaking proportions — the ending of a brewery strike just when our little kiddies were down to their last case of beer.

Where Is Everybody?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The chairs are almost empty where "we" could be sitting in the assembly hall where the Charter Board of Freeholders meets.

Where are the representatives from civic organizations? Where are the citizens who care?

Not only because it is our responsibility as citizens of St. Louis, but because it is indeed an interesting and worthwhile experience, may we of the League of Women Voters of St. Louis suggest that each chair in the visitors' section of Assembly Room 3, Kiel Auditorium, should be at a premium?

We in St. Louis now are a part of the vital processes of democracy with the question of the basic laws of our city under consideration by our elected Board of Freeholders.

How fortunate that ours is a system of government adaptable to the demands of changing times and responsible to the citizen. Some of us will be there in Assembly Room 3. We hope to see you too.

MRS. GILBERT HARRIS,
President,
League of Women Voters.

A Subject for Inquiry

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

John J. Griffin Jr. of the Board of Governors, Mortgage Bankers Association of St. Louis, does not say what it is the board governs. Obviously it is not the mortgage bankers' practices.

The "discounts" of which he speaks are a direct violation of the spirit if not the letter of the law regulating G.I. and FHA home loans. What does the Board of Governors of the Mortgage Bankers Association have to say about this? "Change the law."

This situation is indeed a sad commentary on the moral plane of our "clean as a hound's tooth" bankers and other leaders. "If what we are doing isn't right," they say, "then change the law."

Recently the St. Louis area was investigated and action taken to prevent certain subdividers of real estate from forcing purchasers of their homes to buy fire insurance from their own or subsidiary corporations in the insurance business.

Here is another practice which should be squelched. It's pretty difficult to stay ahead of the angle-shooters, but let's keep trying.

Belleville. JOHN D. MAINS.

Just An Old Irish Melody

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

What amused me about your editorial of last Sunday, "Yankee Doodle, Esq.," was the statement that the tune was supposed to have been introduced into the colonies by an English fife major of the Grenadier Guards about 1750.

Well, I strongly assert that the tune is just a variant of an old Irish melody known as "All the Way to Galway," which was played for long years in Ireland well prior to the time it was played by the Grenadier Guards' fifer. I have the music here beside me as I write, and anyone with an ear can tell the similarity with "Yankee Doodle."

I may add that I fifed "All the Way to Galway" in a band in Ireland. Locally we often called it "Parnell's March," in honor of Charles Stuart Parnell, the Irish political leader. We played it at a somewhat slower tempo than "Yankee Doodle," but it was the same tune nonetheless. THOMAS J. POMPHREY.

Odd Way to 'Like Ike'

One of the continuing mysteries of the Washington scene is why so many Republicans in Congress who are eager to run for re-election on the same ticket with President Eisenhower will vote against him on key legislative issues. Two striking current examples are offered by roll calls on mutual security in the Senate and on federal aid to education in the House.

The President opposed the Powell amendment to tie school funds to desegregation as a year ago he opposed a similar amendment to the Army reserve bill. But the Republicans in the House voted 148 to 46 in favor of the Powell amendment even though they went against Mr. Eisenhower in doing so. The Democrats, on the same test, supported the President's position, 146 to 47.

Then on the vote to pass the bill, the Republicans after having put the Powell amendment in the measure, turned around and voted to kill the bill. They did so by a vote of 119 to 75. On that roll call the Democrats supported the bill 119 to 105. Thus on both these tests the Republicans could have carried the day for Mr. Eisenhower and chose not to do so.

Mutual security affords a similar study in "liking Ike" but not liking what he stands for. At stake in the vote on the Bridges amendment to the mutual security bill was the extent to which the Senate has confidence in President Eisenhower to use mutual security funds to the best interests of this country. Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, senior G.O.P. member, proposed an amendment to cut off all mutual security funds for Yugoslavia.

This amendment was opposed by the White House as tying the President's hands. Mr. Eisenhower felt that Congress ought to be able to trust him not to use mutual security funds foolishly. Yet when the Bridges amendment was voted on, a majority of the Republican Senators went on record as saying in effect that they did not trust President Eisenhower. The vote was 23 to 21. At the same time the Democrats backed the President 29 to 15—a very generous margin of 2 to 1.

This test is important enough that the country ought to know which way each Republican Senator lined up. Three G.O.P. members were not in the Senate when the roll was called on the Bridges amendment, but two of these—Jenner of Indiana and Wiley of Wisconsin—had left word that they favored the Bridges restriction on the White House The third absentee, Senator Capehart of Indiana, made no announcement but his office informed the Post-Dispatch: "His record is unanimous on that—he has never voted for foreign aid."

With these three Senators included, the lineup in President Eisenhower's party in the Senate was as follows:

This opposition of the G.O.P. to mutual security exasperated President Eisenhower in his first six months in office. Now after three and a half years it is still a worry to him and a danger to the country.

Just how does the G.O.P. reconcile its fervent praise of President Eisenhower as a leader at the polls with its failure to support him on key issues? And how does the President justify his call for the election of a Republican Congress in November when the Democrats back him more strongly on these important tests?

Apology to Carr Creek

Rand McNally and Company has sent us a copy of a letter from Andrew McNally III to the principal of the school at Carr Creek, Ky., in which the map makers apologize because Carr Creek was not on a map. In a way this was our fault as much as Rand McNally's.

Last March an editorial noted that little Davids could not defeat the big Goliaths in Missouri's high school basketball tournament because the teams were divided according to size. Yet, the editorial noted, the basketball champions of Kentucky, where basketball itself is champion, came from Carr Creek, which was "not even on the last Rand McNally map."

Mr. McNally hastens to assure Carr Creek that "it is most definitely on our latest maps," though not on some smaller ones. (Our editorial had reference to a smaller map, of course.) Mr. McNally adds that any omission anywhere "is not because of its unimportance but merely because room did not permit us to include the name legibly."

There you have it. No town likes to be told it is not on a map, even if it does not have a fine ball team and especially if it does. Apologies are in order for diverse reasons. Rand McNally makes it clear that it slights no place because of size, while our editorial was intended to praise Carr Creek's accomplishment because of its size. Anyway, that town is on the map.

In Diplomatic Language

The State Department plans to check its diplomats' knowledge of French, Spanish or German, and those who are not fluent in at least one of these foreign languages will be brought home for intensive training. If the diplomat still fails to learn, he probably will be fired.

Though Americans are not exactly renowned for their knowledge of foreign tongues, still few citizens should quarrel with the purpose of the State Department order. Diplomats of all people might be expected to know one other language. In the experienced British foreign service there are men who know five or six languages, perhaps including Arabic or Somali.

Language is the tool of diplomacy, but that is not the only reason for the State Department decision. Knowledge of Spanish, for example, might not do a diplomat much good in Pakistan. Besides, interpreters are always available.

The principal reason for mastering a foreign language—any foreign language—is the insight which language gives into the sentiments and thinking and customs of a foreign people. Why is a foreign language considered essential to a sound liberal education? Because the effort to understand one other segment of mankind can more easily be translated into effort to appreciate still others. And diplomacy begins with understanding.

The Commonwealth and the World

The prime ministers of the Commonwealth ended their 10-day meeting in London on Friday with the announcement of a program seeking disarmament and aid to the poorer nations of the world. This brings to mind the question asked by London's New Statesman and Nation at the opening of the conference: "Does the Commonwealth exist?"

This journal recalled that Lord Rosebery, who gave the group of nations its name, said in 1883 that "it is steering a path into the future where no chart and no compass can guide it." Since then common devotion to the British Crown has disappeared. The association, in the words of The New Statesman, "has no common judiciary or administration, no constitution, no joint system of defense. Its legal systems and political institutions are varied and often contradictory. Its ethical unity is shattered, since not all its members subscribe to the basic doctrine of racial equality."

It also is possible to cite failures to cope with specific economic and military problems, not to mention the hesitation to develop a better integrated organization. Yet the Commonwealth must be reckoned a going concern and a major factor in international stability.

Through World War II, its members always were partners in arms. Whether the post-war members, not all in agreement with each other, would come together the same way in the face of a new test is still conjectural. But the very fact that the prime ministers do meet regularly is of the greatest importance.

With the exception of recalcitrant South Africa, they represent the world's first interracial association, informal as it may be. Having not only common but also individual problems, nations as diverse as Canada and Ceylon, India and New Zealand do present a common front. Not only have they helped each other, but they also have refrained from pushing their differences to the breaking point. And this may well be the more important consideration.

Associations of the like-minded are easily formed. An association which encompasses differences is a work of true statesmanship and a symbol of hope for a divided world.

Gen. Swing as Huntsman

Immigration Commissioner Joseph M. Swing again is having difficulty distinguishing between private and official business. House investigators say Gen. Swing made five hunting trips outside the United States at the taxpayers' expense in Government vehicles. Gen. Swing insists that he was on official business because he met with Mexican and Canadian officials.

A month and a half ago a Senate subcommittee found that Gen. Swing had used immigration officers to recruit a maid in Juarez, Mexico. The Immigration Commissioner explained then that it was hard to find a maid in Washington, and the Immigration Service added that one of its undercover agents had spent an "inconsequential amount" of Government time in locating the maid.

Gen. Swing, a West Point classmate of President Eisenhower, is an Army man and his military life may have accustomed him to personal use of public property and time. Congress might inform him that the head of the Immigration Service is not expected to play the old Army game.

Master of the Eagles

They said of Mark Twain's Capt. Isaiah Sellers that he was born on the river and that he lived and died there. That was just as true of Capt. Leyhe of the Eagle Packet Co. He was born in the old Mississippi river town of Warsaw, Ill., originally Spunky Point, and the quality of the earlier name rubbed off on the riverman's son. His parents entered him in the family Bible as William H., but they called him "Buck" and so did every one else for nigh onto 80 years. He was only 18 when the Leyhes built their first steamboat of timber cut from along the Illinois bluffs and the great line of Eagles was born.

And what steamboats they were! The Bald Eagle and the Gray Eagle, the Spread Eagle and the Golden Eagle—the very names of the Leyhe craft stirred the imagination of travelers and drew them expectantly to the wharf at Eads Bridge in the latter years of river transportation. And there were the Alton and the Peoria and the Cape Girardeau and others on which a generation moved from one port to another on the Mississippi and the Ohio and the Illinois and the Tennessee. Sternwheelers and sidewheelers, the Leyhe steamboats moved great cargoes from the landings and their roustabouts, with names ranging from Snag to Lancelot, sang the folk tunes of a people and their way of life.

Capt. Buck knew the river in all its moods—its mill pond calms, its violent storms, its roaring rampages, its far-spreading brown floods. He helped its victims time without number and many a stranded farm family or distressed shantyboatman owed him a debt of gratitude. For he knew what it was to be wrecked and to have a boat go down in the very waters that had floated him minutes before.

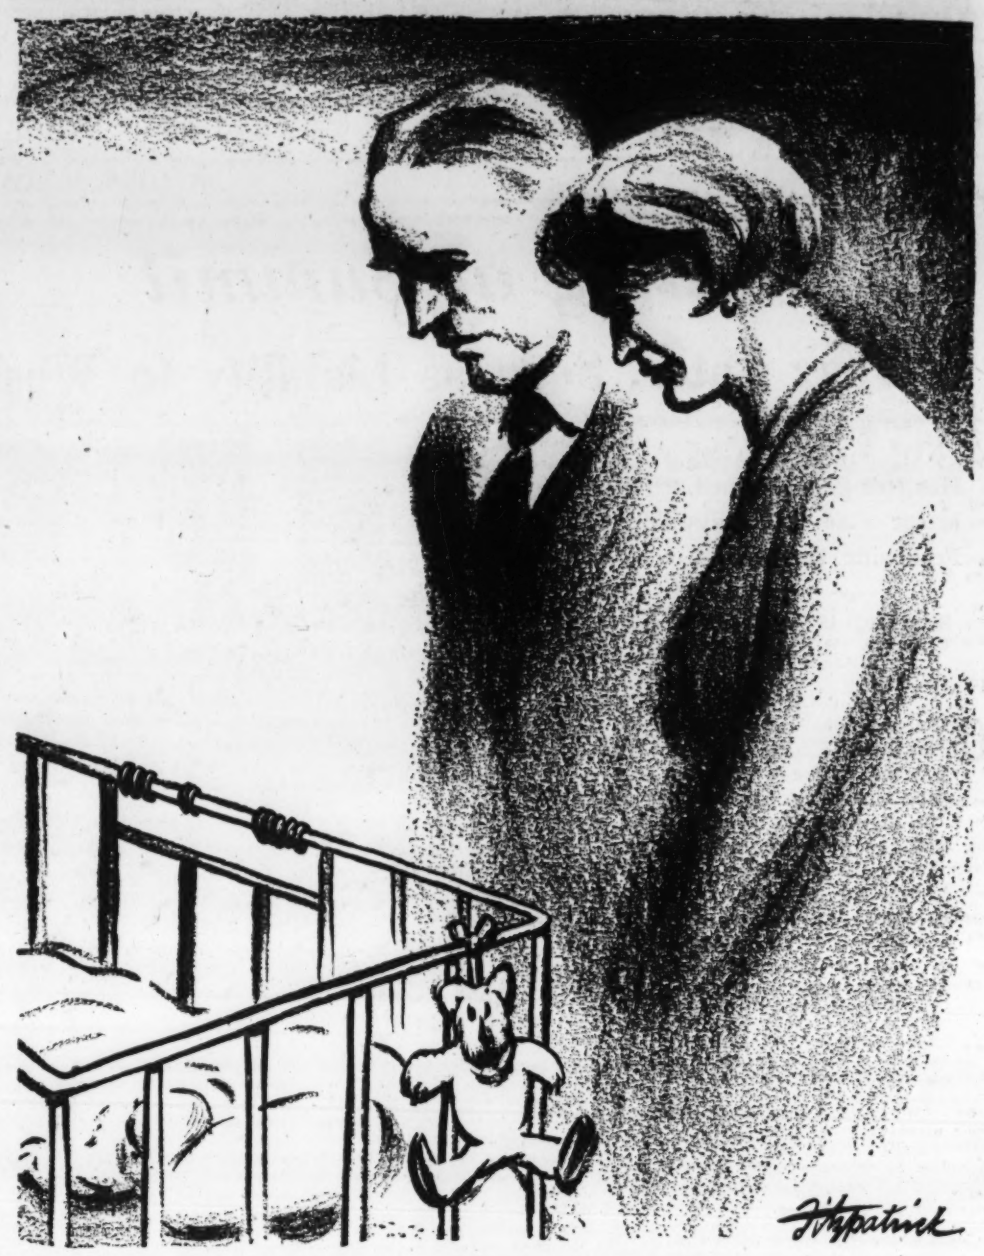

The news columns reported that he died in Barnes hospital at the age of 83 and that he would be buried in Alton, overlooking the Mississippi. That is one way of telling it. Another way is to say that the Leyhes have launched a resplendent new Eagle and Capt. Buck has taken it on its first run, plumes of black smoke flying, deep whistle blowing and gangplanks riding high in the river breeze.

About an Old Girl Friend

It was nice of the West Berliners to meet Queen Nefertiti at Tempelhof and to give her a first-class motorcycle-escort ride to the Dahlem Museum. If it were not so un-German, we would have appreciated some ticker-tape with the flowers—because Nefertiti is one of our very favored beauties.

Ever since meeting her for the first time—that was long before the war—we have wished we could know her better. The difficulty is that she married King Amenhotep IV of Egypt, and that was somewhere around 1370 B.C. But she has not one tiny wrinkle and her color has not faded a bit. Her "kissable" lipstick is as fresh as when she pencilled it on her lips. And her clear eyes—oh, those eyes!

We are grateful that at least two of the old Egyptian rulers—Amenhotep III and Ikhnaton—were bravely intelligent enough to repudiate the horde of domineering dog and serpent gods and the stiff, formalized art their priests had fastened on the nation. In the end, superstition was too touch an antagonist. But they did clear the field long enough for some sculptor to fashion the delicate portrait of Nefertiti, the queen to be. But for that we would never have seen the face that could launch a thousand ships for Helen's one.

JUVENILE COURT OF FIRST RESORT

The Pressure on the President

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Editor who is strong Eisenhower supporter tells how Republican leaders, business men and associates campaigned to induce 'Ike' to run for office again, despite his health; says G.O.P. desperately wants to win but President must make own decision.

John S. Knight, Editor and Publisher, in the Chicago Daily News

Everyone has the same question. "What about Ike? Do you think he'll run?"

I don't know why they ask me. I was wrong the last time; I thought Ike had too much sense to kill himself in office.

Actually, those "informed" people who have told you they "knew all the time that Ike would run" didn't know any such thing.

Ike decided to make the race only after he had been persuaded by Republican Chairman Leonard Hall, Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams, Gen. Lucius Clay and a small coterie of other close friends, that the Republicans had no other candidate who could win.

John S. Knight

When Ike was recuperating at Gettysburg, Hall kept him from saying "no" by arguing that a negative decision would jeopardize the Administration's legislative program.

With Ike's good recovery, the "build-up" began. Business leaders were urged to write the President about his "indispensability." Undocumented stories were circulated that an always active Ike was beginning to get bored with the pastoral life at Gettyburg.

No Real Desire to Run

But the President remained reluctant. Intimate and unselfish friends of older days who talked with Ike during his convalescence were convinced that the President had no desire to wage another presidential campaign.

What they failed to take into account was the tremendous pressure exerted by a powerful combination of political and business leaders upon a man with a deep-seated sense of duty.

Ike had no illusions about himself. He told his first press conference after the heart attack:

"It would be idle to pretend that my health can be wholly restored to the excellent state in which the doctors believed it to be in mid-September . . . My future life must be carefully regulated to avoid excessive fatigue."

He had reservations on Jan. 20 when he said, in speaking to the "Salute-to-Eisenhower" dinners in 56 cities: "My own future role remains undetermined. . . . I could devoutly wish that there were some method by which the American people could point out the path of my true duty. But it appears this is a question I alone must answer."

Another Fateful Choice

In finally deciding to run, the President yielded to appeals of the potent influences who have such a big stake in his re-election.

I like to think, too, that his affirmative decision was encouraged by the people's will.

Now the President must again make a fateful choice.

Should he fail to show the expected good recovery, his words of March 7 may prove prophetic. . . . "I have said, unless I felt absolutely up to the performance of the duties of the President, the second that I didn't, I would no longer be there in the job, I wouldn't be available for the job."

As things stand today, it would appear that the pattern of Gettysburg is being repeated. Republican leaders are chanting that Ike is sure to run and physicians who operated on the President believe it likely that he may be in better health than before.

The seriousness of the President's illness has been minimized by friendly editorialists who point to Adlai Stevenson's operation for kidney stones; Harry Truman's gall bladder operation; the recent surgery on Gov. Averell Harriman's prostate gland; and Senator Lyndon Johnson's heart attack and Senator Symington's sympathectomy (for high blood pressure) in 1947.

How idle and misleading it is to pretend that the President, a former heart case and chronic sufferer from gastric disturbances, can fully regain his vigor.

But in their anxiety over the future, the Republican strategists and the big guns in the business world are determined to have Ike run, even though he may not last through a second term under the pressure of the job.

But this time, President Eisenhower can decline to be a candidate for re-election if, as he said on March 7, he should not feel up to the performance of his presidential duties.

Certain it is that the President will reappraise his original decision.

He will seek, by inner self-examination, to determine "the path of true duty" . . . whether he can conscientiously run, or finds the burdens of office too heavy for him to carry.

In the People's Confidence

It is a very great tragedy indeed that President Eisenhower, respected abroad and beloved at home, has been twice stricken.

Probably no other President in our history has enjoyed such a full measure of the people's confidence and affection.

Ike has been almost an ideal President of our times. A nation weary of war and government by crisis found in his leadership the road to peace and a restoration of public morality.

Few men are as free from prejudice and few men have done as much to stamp it out. The esteem in which the President is held crosses economic groups and party lines.

Unlike the shrill and sometimes bitter partisan leaders of other days, Eisenhower, the "economic conservative" and "humanitarian liberal," thinks solely in terms of the general welfare.

When in 1952 the Republican convention nominated a war hero as its presidential candidate, it was an admission that the party had no leaders, including the respected Senator Taft, who could win the election.

What Other Possibilities?

Should Eisenhower be unable or unwilling to make another campaign, the G.O.P. faces a serious, if not an insuperable problem.

Vice President Nixon, young, able and diligent, is not popular with voters of independent tendencies.

Senator William F. Knowland of California, Harold Stassen, and Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts lack national appeal.

Other than Herter, there are no Republican governors who come to mind as men of presidential stature. Former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York has been twice defeated.

This brief summation of the men other than Ike who comprise the Republican list of presidential possibilities explains the wishful and almost hysterical conviction that Eisenhower must run.

The Republican party, out of power for 20 long years, desperately wants to win again.

But, as on Jan. 20, when the words of a humble and conscientious man were expressed to the nation, so it is once more:

"This is a question that I alone must answer."

Summer Is Kinder Far

From The New York Times.

Summer is kinder far than winter is
To country graveyards where slow centuries
Drift by like idling dust that pauses and passes
Making no shadow of sound among the grasses.

For summer brightens up each lonely place
With gold nasturtiums' fires and Queen Anne's lace,
A scatter of four o'clocks whose scarlet eyes
Count off each sun-hot hour before it dies.

But winter is white as death and takes away
Each beautiful thing the heart cries out to stay,
Even the humble names headstones would keep Inviolate where snowdrifts cover a deeper sleep.

A Return From the Wars

From The Yale Review.

A courthouse in the center of the town
On summer evenings pivots every car
From corn on either side across to corn
And back again though all the tapsters call.

A balmy dusk of gently-riding lights
That dip at Dairy Queens
And still maintain a regular serpentine
Around the Square and around again, each night's
A wreath for the unknown

And makes me glad to come back here and live.
Unhaunted be my mind
By all that in good conscience I forgive
In calling now the vicious circle kind:
I'll save my laughter for the grave—

And drive on summer evenings in my car
Around in the courthouse of the living town. FREDERICK BOCK.

Old Pastures

From The Christian Science Monitor.

Years will not wear away these rocky hills,
These pastures that invite the woodland in.
The scythe is not so ruthless now, the grass
Has grown and withered. Let the alders spread,
Let the sweet fern take more room than its share.
Joe-pye-weed lures the butterflies to rest
Atop its blossoms, and the boneset grows
Nearby to make white contrast with the pink.
All these fine pastures, if one leaves the rocks
Forgotten, will be woods before we know—
And somehow we are satisfied to see
The former owners take their place again.
If cows give up a place, let trees move in.

Big Three of Neutralism, Drawn Together by Cold War Conflicts, To Meet With World Watching

Nehru, Nasser and Tito, While Differing in Many Ways, Have Found Common Ground as Result of West's Alliances Against Iron Curtain Countries.

By RICHARD DUDMAN
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 7.

THE WAY OF the neutral in mid-century world politics will be explored this month by the big three of neutralism—Premier Jawaharlal Nehru of India, Marshal Josip (Tito) Broz of Yugoslavia and President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt.

Other nations will be watching carefully when the three strong men, an Asian, a European and an African, meet July 18 on Brion, Tito's private island near the head of the Adriatic Sea.

Strikingly different in background and political philosophy, the three men nonetheless agree on many important aims. Notably, they do not like the regional military alliances by which the West has sought to contain the Soviet Union, and they want to see Red China admitted to the United Nations.

These two issues have been recurring themes in the communiques issued after the several Nehru-Tito, Nehru-Nasser and Tito-Nasser conferences that have been held in recent years. The meeting this month at Brioni is believed to be the first occasion for all three to come together.

Colonialism Also an Issue.

Nehru and Nasser emphasize a third issue—their strong opposition to white colonial domination or even influence over the colored peoples of Asia and Africa. (The Communists appear to enjoy special exemption for their activities in China, North Korea, North Viet Nam and Tibet.) Tito shows less direct interest in this issue.

All three run one-man shows. Tito is an outright dictator. Nasser displays most of the elements of a dictatorship but appears somewhat beholden to the military junta that seized power under his leadership in 1952. Nehru conscientiously follows parliamentary process, but his personal appeal to the masses of Indians is so great that his position is probably stronger than those of most dictators.

Nehru and Tito have been hosts to the Soviet traveling good-will team, Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin and Communist Party First Secretary Nikita S. Khrushchev, in the last year. Nehru made a state visit to Moscow for two weeks in June 1955, as did Tito for three weeks last month. Nasser has accepted an invitation to visit Russia in August.

U.S. Confused Situation.

The neutralist big three meeting comes on the heels of a confused series of utterances by United States officials on the subject of neutralism. The confusion is not yet resolved, although Secretary of State John Foster Dulles denied there was any difference between his position and that of President Eisenhower.

Mr. Eisenhower started the episode by a news conference statement in which he expressed sympathy for small nations wanting to stay out of military alliances with the great powers. The White House explained the next day that the President believed in the principle of collective security. It said he also believed that there are "special conditions which justify political neutrality," but that "no nation has the right to be indifferent to the fate of another."

Two days later, Dulles told an Iowa State College graduating class that United States defensive alliances had abolished "the principle of neutrality, which pretends that a nation can best gain safety for itself by being indifferent to the fate of others . . . This has . . . become an obsolete conception and, except under very exceptional circumstances, it is an immoral and shortsighted conception."

Nehru Led The Way.

As the World War II alliance of the United States and Russia changed into a state of cold war, Nehru emerged as the foremost exponent of a third position, allied with neither of the two great power blocs.

A typical Nehru attack against the system of collective security blocs was made last November, when he and Khrushchev visited the Taj Mahal together.

"We are convinced that it is not by military pacts and alliances and by piling up armaments that world peace and security can be attained," Nehru said. "We are in no camp and no military alliance. The only camp we should like to be in is the camp of peace and good will. The only alliance we seek is an alliance based on good will and co-operation."

Significantly, that statement was made the day before representatives of five nations met at Baghdad to set up the Middle East Treaty Organization (METO). The Baghdad Pact, together with the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO), are particularly offensive to India because they arm Pakistan, India's neighbor to the north which India regards as a likely aggressor.

Nehru's Shift on NATO.

Nehru had not appeared perturbed about the first of the Western military alliances, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, in its early years. But at the Bandung Conference of Asian and African countries he extended to NATO his opposition to the regional pacts. Calling NATO a "powerful protector of colonialism," he said it was "an intolerable humiliation for an Asian-African country to degrade itself as a camp-follower" of either side in the East-West struggle.

After his meeting with Tito at Brioni last July, Nehru joined the Yugoslav Premier in a statement stressing "full independence" and "peaceful and active co-existence," as principles applicable to an increasingly large number of countries.

In one unscheduled incident of that meeting, Nehru pointedly demonstrated his independence of his host. Interrupting the carefully-planned tour, he suddenly left Tito behind and paid a surprise visit to a Roman Catholic Church.

Nehru's Strange Personality.

Those who have come to know Nehru sometimes find him a puzzle and paradox. He has called himself "a queer mixture of East and West." With his upper-class background as a Kashmiri Brahman, he was educated as an English gentleman at Winston Churchill's old school, Harrow, and then Cambridge. He is a socialist, yet he faces continual criticism for his slowness in undertaking land reform and government ownership of the basic industries.

The biggest puzzle is his attitude toward Communism. He fights the Communist movement skilfully in his own country but sometimes seems unaware of the threat of Communist expansion elsewhere.

Although Yugoslavia's 17,000,000 population is hardly comparable with India's 377,000,000, Tito's unique achievement makes him another key figure among the neutrals. Of all the prewar European Communist leaders outside Russia, he is the only one who was able to come through the war and Nazi occupation by welding a resistance movement which succeeded in taking over power with himself at the head.

In 1948, he broke with the Soviet Union, denouncing the late Josef Stalin's domination of the Cominform (Information Office of the Communist and Workers' Parties). The Cominform expelled Yugoslavia and then had to make a quick change in its headquarters, which had been at Belgrade.

Satellite Picture Shifting.

No other Russian satellites showed serious signs of following Tito's defection, but the role of Communism outside Russia has changed significantly in recent months.

Tito came to power as a military leader, but he started out as a proletarian Communist. A Croation metal worker, born into a peasant-worker family, he joined the Red army and became a Communist party member after the Russian revolution. He returned to Croatia in the 1920s as an agitator and organized the metal workers in the Zagreb railway shops. Years of underground political activity in Yugoslavia and a part, never clearly described, in the Spanish civil war, prepared him for leadership of the anti-Nazi partisan group.

He built up a force of 250,000 men and women as the Yugoslav People's Army of Liberation, earning allied recognition and aid. His break with the Cominform brought his Marxist government United States economic assistance, now subject to rising criticism but still continuing despite his reconciliation with Moscow.

Nasser's Ambitions.

Nasser, a youthful newcomer to the neutral camp, was virtually unknown four years ago, when he and a clique of young army officers overthrew King Farouk and set up a military government, with Maj. Gen. Mohammed Naguib as its first head.

Today, Nasser is president of Egypt (through an election last month in which he was the only candidate) and a world figure, acknowledged by millions of Arabs as their leader. He has made it clear that he wants to become a sort of Middle East and African Bismarck.

His radio propaganda program, "The Voice of the Arabs," urged Arabs of Central and East Africa last week to "join our Arab caravan."

"Arab nationalism is not embedded solely in the hearts of the Arabs of Egypt, Syria, Morocco, Kuwait, Bahrein or Sudan," it said. "Arab nationalism is embedded deep in the hearts of tens of millions of people—yonder in Somililand, Kenya, Zanzibar and Mauritania, south of Moricco."

Until last fall, when Egypt signed its $250,000,000 arms deal with the Communists, Nasser was considered safely on the side of the United States in the east-west conflict. Even after the first tanks and Russian fighters and bombers were delivered, United States Ambassador Henry Byroade and others remained confident that Nasser was a man on whom to rely. But with Egypt's unexpected recognition of Red China last May, the State Department began a reappraisal and now is reported considering withdrawing its offer of financial aid on the proposed huge Aswan high dam.

Nasser on Palestine.

On the subject of Israel, Nasser tells two stories. To the Arab world, his radio propaganda says Israel must be destroyed. To visiting correspondents and diplomats, Nasser takes the more reasonable view that there should be a return to the 1947 United Nations partition line.

Nasser has embarked on ambitious irrigation, housing, roadbuilding, education and public health programs. But there are signs that these are bogging down. Certainly they can offer no quick solution to Egypt's formidable problems of unemployment, disease and illiteracy. His foreign adventures are seen by some observers as the classic dictator's device to divert people from domestic problems.

New Interior Secretary Firm Believer In Hydro-Electric 'Partnership' Policy

Seaton Envisions 10-Year Need of 50 Billions, Too Much for Treasury.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 7.

PUBLIC power advocates who interpret the appointment of Fred A. Seaton as Secretary of the Interior as meaning that the Eisenhower Administration's "partnership" policy in hydro-electric development is going to be watered down are in for a shock.

Seaton is sold on the idea of a working partnership among the Federal Government, state and local agencies and private interests in the development of water resources and related power projects.

His support of this type of operation, initially advanced by President Eisenhower in his first State of the Union message, is not based on abstract theory of government or on blind loyalty to the Republican Chief Executive.

Foresees 50-Billion Need.

Rather, it is hinged to an estimate that 50 billion dollars will be requested to satisfy the burgeoning demand for electric power in the nation during the next 10 years and a mathematical conclusion that the United States Treasury does not have that kind of money. Hence, he reasons, private capital will have to take part if the job is to be done.

"The Government cannot be expected to go whole hog on this program," Seaton said in an interview with the Post-Dispatch. "It would be equally ridiculous to say that the Government should make no more starts on projects where the partnership policy may not be feasible. That's why I'm going to be in hot water all the time. I'll satisfy the extremists of neither the left or the right.

"Any policy which relies exclusively on federal or nonfederal development would choke off the necessary development of our water and power resources and, thereby, seriously hamper the economic and social betterment of our nation. We must have the cooperative efforts of all if we are to keep up with the demands of the American people."

"Every investment by nonfederal agencies in power generating facilities, if in accord with over-all basin development, helps to increase the total efficient power supply available to the nation. At the same time, available federal contributions may then be utilized for other projects which, in whole or in part, are beyond the capacity of nonfederal agencies."

Cites Examples.

Seaton cited what he termed three significant examples of partnership policy authorized by the Eighty-third Congress.

The Markham Ferry project in Oklahoma, he said, will develop Grand River power under a partnership plan wherein the Grand River Authority, a state agency, will build the dam and power plant, with the Federal Government contributing $6,500,000 for flood control storage facilities.

In 1954, he continued, Congress authorized non-federal agencies to construct a series of dams to develop the power potential of the Coosa river in Alabama. The Federal Power Commission has granted a license to the Alabama Power Co. to develop these sites. Federal participation is expected to come through payment for flood control facilities and navigation benefits.

Likewise, in the State of Washington, Seaton said, nonfederal agencies have been authorized to construct the Priest Rapids project on the Columbia river. The Grant County Public Utility District, he said, will finance most of the construction of this project, and the Federal Government will contribute the amount allocated to navigation and flood control by the Corps of Engineers.

The Eisenhower Administration, he went on, "vigorously supported" the multi-million dollar upper Colorado river project, an all-federal undertaking, which, he said, is designed to bring multi-purpose benefits to a great five-state area in the West.

The Hell's Canyon Dispute.

He then turned to the controversy raging in Congress over legislation which would authorize the construction of a single federally-financed dam in the Hell's canyon reaches of the Snake river on the Idaho-Oregon border. The legislation would have the effect of revoking a license granted by the FPC under the Eisenhower Administration to the Idaho Power Co. to build three low dams.

Seaton is opposed to the Government building the high dam. The bill before Congress, he said, is purely an authorization measure and it might be years before Congress appropriated money to finance the development, which already has been started by Idaho Power.

FRED A. SEATON, Secretary of the Interior.

"Two previous Congresses (under Democratic Administrations) failed to authorize the federal dam," Seaton said. "Should Congress now take such action it would be an example of the Federal Government developing a resource alone over the objections of the Governors of the three states directly involved, Washington, Oregon and Idaho. And it would call for federal expenditure at a time and place where private enterprise is ready and willing to do the job.

Cost of High Dam.

"It has been estimated that a high Hells canyon dam would cost the taxpayers $357,000,000, plus another $144,000,000 for transmission lines. The three low dams, paid for out of private capital, would produce nearly the same amount of electrical energy as the more expensive structure proposed for federal financing. Moreover, the bi-partisan FPC found that the three-dam proposal is best adapted to a comprehensive plan of development for the river."

Seaton's hearty espousal of the Eisenhower partnership policy of private development of the Hell's canyon site soon may cost him his unique status as the only member of the Eisenhower cabinet who has not been belabored by Democrats for one reason or another. Public power-minded members of Congress acidly refer to the partnership policy as a "giveaway" program and the Administration's Hell's canyon plan as a glaring example of how it works.

The 46-year-old secretary is not unmindful of the barrage of criticism levelled over a period of three years at his predecessor, Douglas McKay, for certain activities particularly offensive to conservationists, co-operatives and other preference customers for federally-generated power and others who contend that when Congress writes a law placing certain responsibilities on a secretary he is supposed to carry them out.

Democratic Charges.

Among the alleged misdeeds laid at the door of McKay and Under Secretary Clarence A. Davis are failure to carry out the mandate of Congress imposing on the Secretary the job of seeing that preference customers for federally - generated power get it, a "handout" of 274 national wildlife refuge lands to oil companies for oil and gas drilling which, in the words of Senator Richard L. Neuberger (Dem.), Oregon, perverts the primary purpose of the refuges; the "giveaway" of valuable national forest lands in Oregon to the Al Sarena Mining Co., which did no mining but made off with 2,000,000 board feet of valuable fir and pine; a proposal to "give away" 200,000,000 acres of national forest lands to a few "cattle barons;" commercialization of the national parks and, in general, permitting private business interests to pick and choose where the national resources are at stake.

Seaton took office on June 6, after McKay packed up and went to Oregon to run for Senator against Senator Wayne Morse, a Democrat and an Administration arch-foe.

To Study Cases.

"If there is any oil and gas drilling going on that does violence to the purpose of the wildlife refuges, it will be stopped," he said with finality. "I have the Al Sarena case under study. The timber was taken under a law which the Democrats never changed. We have changed the law so that an Al Sarena deal could not happen again, but we couldn't make the law retroactive.

"There is no excuse for commercialization of the national parks."

As for congressional actions relating to power distribution, Seaton said that "when Congress passes a law and the President signs it, that's the law and as long as I am here we're going to follow it." He said he was "sure as hell going to take a careful look" at any proposals to deliver up to private companies the power revenues of dams built with federal funds.

Seaton has round-the-clock drive which is being drawn on heavily in his taking-over period. He claims no infra-red insight into all the problems that confront him. But he does have the respect of the Senate, which confirmed him with loads of praise and not a dissenting vote. He brings to the position an understanding of how the Government works, acquired in a career of political activity dating back to his student days at Kansas State College in the very early 30s, six months in the Senate in 1951-52 and his work as Assistant Secretary of Defense and Assistant to the President under Eisenhower.

DRUMMOND

Senate Republican Policy Staff Guilty of Un-American Tactics

Cagily Worded Disclaimer Does Not Free Party of Taint in Trying to Link Opponents With Reds.

By ROSCOE DRUMMOND
Copyright, 1956, The New York Herald Tribune, Inc.

WASHINGTON.

REALLY NOW, in the kind of world we are living in today, hasn't the time come when American national politics ought to get up out of the mud puddle and shed the low-blow, un-American tactic of trying to smear your political opponent with the innuendo that he is enmeshed with the Communists?

I am convinced that United States voters distrust these smear - the - whole - landscape, mud-pack charges, disbelieve them, are bored by them and will in the end penalize the politicians who think they can survive by feeding on them. They did in the 1954 congressional elections.

But it is a trade still plied by some and the latest example is a memorandum released by the staff of the Senate Republican Policy Committee proclaiming that the Communist party in the United States wants "the Republicans defeated" and hopes for "a Democratic victory" this fall.

This is a tricky, dishonest and dishonorable thing. No wonder it was coldly and angrily condemned by leading Democratic Senators on the floor this week and that Senator William F. Knowland, Republican leader, had the good grace—man of integrity that he is—to repudiate it unreservedly.

Taint of Shoddy Tactics.

But this kind of carefully circulated insinuation has been made before and, after its sponsors think it has done its dirt, withdrawn. It will take more than Senator Knowland's and Senator Alexander Smith's disavowals to free the Republican party from the taint of very shoddy tactics.

There can be no doubt that the staff of the Senate Republican Policy Committee knew what it was up to. It attached a cagily worded disclaimer to its release. The disclaimer read: "Note—Neither the members of the Republican Policy Committee nor other Republican Senators are responsible for the statements herein contained, except such as they are willing to indorse and make their own."

There are only two things wrong with such a half-hearted disclaimer. Republican Senators may not be responsible for staff statements they do not themselves indorse, but they are responsible for actions of the Policy Committee staff. Second, the staff must think there are Republican Senators who will want "to indorse" these statements and "make them their own" or the staff wouldn't prepare them. Is the staff of the Republican Policy Committee employed to publicize statements so their superiors can repudiate them?

Assertions Not Borne Out.

Actually, this Republican staff memorandum does not bear out its own assertions. It puts a title on its release which asserts that the "Communist party pleads for Democrats to win" and in the first paragraph it claims that "the official Communist line has now been announced" and that the Communists consider "a Democratic victory is essential."

The fact is that the official Communist party line has not been announced and the Republican memorandum quotes just one state Communist functionary who suggests that Communists pursue "an independent course which influences the direction of the Democratic party."

Finally, how do Republicans think they are serving the nation or themselves by suggesting that the Communists are to be believed or that they say what they are going to do or do what they have been saying? Communists are required to be liars and I shouldn't think that Republican Senators would want to pay their staff to persuade us that they are not!

The Republican committee staff seems entranced by the syllogism which they suggest but do not prove: The Communists want to hurt the United States; the Communists — so they claim—support a Democratic victory; therefore a Democratic victory would hurt the United States. Let us see where that kind of reasoning carries them.

The Communists have imprisoned and liquidated more Socialist leaders than they have capitalist leaders. Is this Republican staff trying to persuade us that because the Communists hate Socialists we ought to approve socialism?

The Communists indorse the Supreme Court's public school desegregation verdict and Vice President Nixon described Earl Warren, after delivering the verdict, as a "great Republican Chief Justice." Is this Republican staff trying to call Mr. Nixon pro-Communist?

They are doing all these things if their logic in the first instance is to be accepted.

I would hope that at his next press conference President Eisenhower would use his great moral influence to strike these un-American tactics from the hands of his party as un-Republican.

PAPER PUBLISHES ALLEGED TALK WITH ANA PAUKER

VIENNA, July 7 (UP)—A Vienna newspaper published today an alleged interview with former Romanian Foreign Minister Ana Pauker. A Paris refugee newspaper reported earlier this week that she died a month ago.

The newspaper Die Presse said the 62-year-old one-time Communist strong woman was alive on June 27 and "leading a secluded life in an elegant villa in Dr. Koch street, Bucharest."

Carol Coghill, a former correspondent for a British news agency, said in Die Presse that the former Romanian official "talked about paintings, books, cooking and art" in a 30-minute interview.

When the official was purged from her government and party posts in 1952 she was accused of "living on the slope of aristocracy." Western diplomats said at the time that she entertained lavishly and owned a fleet of private automobiles.

Devil Worship in English Countryside

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN
Book Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

AN engrossing story of rural England at the end of the eighteenth century is skillfully seasoned with elements of the supernatural in "Afternoon of an Autocrat" by Norah Lofts. The reader who is so inclined may accept without reservation the episodes dealing with black magic and devil worship. But if he is confused by the necessity of having to apply a double standard to the events described by Miss Lofts he can easily supply a rational explanation for the seemingly irrational.

For myself the value of this novel lies in its atmosphere, its social cross-currents and its lifelike, sharply drawn characters. Foremost among these is Damask Greenway, a good-looking and reasonably pious daughter of a village cobbler. Against her better judgment Damask falls in love with a rakish farm lad named Danny Fuller who is known throughout the countryside as a "jilter." As has happened before Danny tires of her before the banns can be published and shortly afterward is forced to marry a neighboring wench whom he has fondled too often.

WHEN Damask hears the news she falls into a coma during which she descends into a dark realm where light can be felt and sounds can be tasted and where her soul is hardened into a new consistency. Damask emerges from this experience with a strange sense of power. She can look at people and make them do her will; and as her will is now directed at gaining status for herself and bringing confusion to her enemies she attaches herself to a half-cracked old lady who happens to own much of the land thereabouts and soon dominates her.

Meanwhile the new Squire of Clevely, Sir Richard Shelmadine, has taken over at the big manor house with consequences that promise to upset the lives of half the inhabitants and particularly those who live in "The Waste" and scratch a meager living therefrom. "The Waste" is a common field open to public use and Shelmadine's father, the old Squire was always against enclosing it but the new Squire, urged on by a few less sentimental fellow-landowners, decides to fence it in and thereby increase the value of his holdings even though the squatters will be thrown out and become paupers.

NORAH LOFTS

AFTERNOON OF AN AUTOCRAT, by Norah Lofts. (Doubleday, 320 pgs., $3.95.)

SUBSEQUENT developments involve Shelmadine, Damask, a sinister figure named Mundford who is supposed to possess certain diabolical powers, Shelmadine's wife Linda, and an estate foreman who is in love with Linda. Strange rites are practiced in the remains of a pre-Christian temple discovered on the Shelmadine estate. For Shelmadine — bored with hunting, gambling, highlife, lowlife and everything else has turned to Devil worship only to find that he is still bored.

In working through to a somewhat melodramatic climax Miss Lofts brings into play a complex of human relationships set against a background of folkways, traditions and vividly described rural scenes. Miss Lofts is steeped in the lore of the English countryside. Yet "Afternoon of an Autocrat" though a historical novel is not archaic. The characters, and the problems that beset them, are universal and timeless in their essence.

Miss Lofts is a good storyteller. Her narrative is always in motion but at a pace that allows for reflective thought.

A Fine Ear for Dialogue

THE HEEL OF SPRING, by Frank Rooney. (Vanguard, 314 pgs., $3.95.)

CHARLES BLACKWELL had always been told that he was an orphan. He was raised in boarding houses and by relatives, so it was not until he was twelve that he learned his father was still alive and he was sixteen before he found out that his father was serving time in a penitentiary for having killed his mother. Charles probes back over the past to find out what sort of man his father had been in order to find a root to affirm his own identity. He is aided in his search by his sister, Hester, who has a rather hysterical need to get the facts about what happened between her parents. Another sister remains untouched by the entire matter of the revelations. In the end, Charles crosses the threshold of maturity and cuts his tie with the past but not until all of the family relatives, who are ridden with guilt neuroses, have jostled him in every which way.

Mr. Rooney has a deep understanding of characterization, a fine ear for the dialogue to express characterization, and a keen style of putting words together to convey mood, but all of his glittering talents seem wasted on this novel because what happens to Charles Blackwell does not have enough story-depth. —JACK ALDRIDGE.

On Improving Quality and Span of Life

LIFE, THE GREAT ADVENTURE, by Jean Rostand and Paul Bodin. (Scribners, 228 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by
WILL WHARTON

THERE is so much information in this little book that if it had been written as a treatise it would seem too rich and concentrated. The Socratic method is used, however—Paul Bodin, a journalist with a background in biology, is the interrogator, and Jean Rostand, France's most eminent biologist, supplies the answers.

Hundreds of the problems to which we of today devote more concern than did our ancestors are considered: improvement of the species, geriatics, control of cancer, among others. Always the optimist, Rostand, correcting Bodin at one point, summarizes the gains made by psychiatry in the past generation, whereby many patients have been salvaged from "madness."

As to longevity, he predicts a life expectancy of 120 eventually, but warns that this will present a financial problem, since most pensions now start at 65.

Jean Rostand (since you are wondering) is indeed the son of famed playwright Edmond Rostand. Jean's defection to science is fortunate and timely. He charges that in our society "the interests of collectivity are subordinated to the commands of selfish private interests." He adds that the day will come "when the best types of men will no longer look upon it as a supreme reward when they see others lack what they themselves possess in superabundance."

WHILE such remarks, read locally, have a heretical tinge, it should be kept in mind that they are common in France, where things have gone to pot (while fewer eels and chunks of horsemeat are going into the pot).

Jean Rostand is not so much concerned about hunger per se, as he points out that moderate starvation during World War II improved the health and lengthened the lives of millions of Europeans (excluding those deliberately starved by the Germans and Russians) and the untapped wealth of the ocean can feed us for centuries to come.

The aim of Jean Rostand is improvement of and progress for humanity. That he opposes capital punishment, which condones killing, and euthanasia, which is anarchy, is but one facet of his desire to continue a progress that has been remarkable despite two and a half devastating wars in our century.

A Calm Sensible Voice

SMALL SOUNDS IN THE NIGHT, by Eric Sevareid. (Alfred A. Knopf, 305 pgs., $3.50.)

Reviewed by
MARQUIS W. CHILDS

THE voice of Eric Sevareid is a unique voice on radio and television. We have solemn voices, voices charged with doom, voices that snarl with malice and voices that sound like molasses being poured out of a jug. But Sevareid's hallmark, as this second collection of his electronic essays establishes once again, is common sense colored with a dry often ironic humor and sometimes with deep feeling simply expressed.

These pieces that he speaks each weekday night after the news roundup are in a long and happy American tradition. You can hear echoes of Artemus Ward, Mark Twain and Will Rogers with even now and then a touch of Thoreau. This is an American seated on the cracker barrel or on the rail fence at the cross roads commenting on the passing show of people and events.

THE average in this volume is remarkably high, partly because Sevareid has excellent taste which prevents him from mere sentimentalizing and partly because he is resolutely determined to avoid the portentous and the solemn. Even when he is discussing Harry Truman's last message to Congress as President it is in the tone not so much of the self-conscious commentator as of one neighbor talking to another neighbor. His judgments, and now and then he passes some stern judgments, are tempered with a wise understanding of human frailties and above all of the frailties of the political species as observed in Washington.

Sevareid is never happier than when, as he so often says, the flow of the news is placid with no slightest hint of disaster and he can take off on some small and unimportant incident.

One of the most delightful pieces in the book is the story of two boys and their small dog whom they rescue from an eagle's nest. Back home after this exciting adventure the boys let the dog get locked up in the deep freeze while they are immersed in a television drama. The dog is rescued a second time rather the worse for his encounter with modern gadgetry than from the narrow escape from wild life. The commentator's dry reflections on the vicissitudes of life, ancient and modern, enliven this small tale out of the news.

TO use that most inadequate of words, Sevareid is considered a "liberal." But his analysis of the late Robert A. Taft at the time of Taft's death must surely have been one of the most moving and sincere tributes to the Senator from Ohio who had so long been a fixture in the Washington scene.

"Robert Taft," Sevareid said, "seemed almost the last of a valuable vanishing breed of politician—the men like Webster and Clay who dedicated their lives to government itself, to whom the art of politics was a high art, the conduct of government a social science, to be mastered as a scholar and carried on with a scientist's devotion. To him the Senate was a temple, not to be entered merely to boost a law practice or to enjoy the sound of one's voice. To him the opportunist approach was almost a sacrilege."

Whatever he says, whether serious or humorous, has the warm, friendly quality of his American background; of the background traditional to this kind of easy, informed, lively commentary that broadens the perspective not only on the news but on life itself. This reviewer is strongly of the opinion that we could do with some more Sevareids.

King Arthur And Knights In New Tale

THE GREAT CAPTAINS, by Henry Treece. (Random House, 302 pgs., $3.75.)

Reviewed by
STEPHEN SHERWIN

THE story of King Arthur and his knights has been told and retold so many times that it almost seems true. Actually, the events which probably did take place have been lost in antiquity; and the story as it exists today probably resembles the historical event only in a very general way.

Henry Treece has fitted together a convincing picture of sixth-century Britain and has set for himself the great labor of telling the story of Arthur as it might have happened. The result is interesting as a tale of action and interesting, also, in its implied comparison with Tennyson's well-known version.

In Treece's book, Arthur becomes Artos, a Celtic chieftain; Sir Kay becomes Cei; Guinevere becomes Gwenhwyfar; Bedevere becomes Bedwyr; and there are numerous other restorations of the likely sixth century names for persons and places. Guinevere (to retain the familiar form of the name) fares much better in Treece's account than in Tennyson's. According to Treece, Arthur is the inconstant one. Guinevere, Arthur's first wife and half-sister, is faithful. But Arthur takes another wife, or mistress, who is renamed Guinevere; and it is she who is caught attempting the seduction of Modred (or Medrawt). Lancelot does not appear in Treece's novels.

The author's description of a violent and primitive time is excellent.

DAVY CROCKETT'S EARTHQUAKE, by William O. Steele. Illustrated by Nicolas. (Harcourt, Brace, $2.25.)

IN "Wilderness Journey" William Steele displayed a nice talent for the telling of the frontier tall tale. His new book proves him a master of the technique. Nobody knew exactly where Davy spent the fall of 1811. This rollicking story recounts what history failed to record when Betsy fired an an "animal" even she couldn't kill.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S CAT, written and illustrated by Robert Lawson. (Little, Brown, $3.)

Mr. Lawson continues his rare characterization of famous persons and unconventional interpretations of history in this surprising account of Captain Kidd, the "quiet, respectable New York merchant." The delightful humor of text and illustrations that gave new stature to Benjamin Franklin and his mouse, and to Paul Revere and his horse, here throws new light on William Kidd and creates a tough, but unforgettable, seagoing cat, McDermot.

HOW WALL STREET JOURNAL READERS GET MORE OUT OF LIFE

By a Subscriber

Since I started reading The Wall Street Journal, my income has increased from $9,000 to $14,000 a year.

But that is only part of the story. The Journal not only tells me how to earn more money—it also tells me how to get more value for the money I spend.

For example, an automotive article in The Journal helped me trade in my old car at the right time. An article on building supplies gave me ideas on remodeling my home and showed me how to save $700.

Articles on food and clothing point out the things to stock up on in order to save money. Articles on taxes guide me on what to do to keep my taxes down.

The Journal also gives me a better understanding of what is going on in the world. In conversation with other men I find that I know how to interpret business and government trends a little better than they do. They wonder where I get my "inside dope."

This story is typical. Because the reports in The Wall Street Journal come to you daily, you get quick warning of any new trend that may affect your income. You get the facts in time to protect your interests or seize a profit. The Journal is a wonderful aid to salaried men making $7,000 to $20,000 a year. It is valuable to owners of small business concerns. It can be of priceless benefit to ambitious young men.

The Wall Street Journal is the complete business DAILY. Has largest staff of writers on business and finance. The only business paper served by all four big press associations. It costs $20 a year, but you can get a Trial Subscription for three months for $6. Just tear out this ad and attach check for $6 and mail. Or tell us to bill you. SLP 7-8

STEEL STRIKE'S POSSIBLE DANGERS EXCEED USUAL

Writer Says It Chops Hardest at Most Vital Pillars Upholding the Economy, Heavy Construction.

By JOHN G. FORREST
Financial Editor, The New York Times.
(Copyright, 1956, by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, July 7.

IT WOULD BE extremely hard to imagine a good time for the country to have a major steel strike, but the one that's a week old tomorrow holds more possible dangers than most such calamities in the past.

The reason is that it chops hardest at the most vital and vulnerable of the pillars upholding the economy. This is heavy construction.

'Look at Plant Figure.'

Every forecasting about the progress of the country so far in 1956 has been met by the determined optimists with the blithe cry: "But look at that plant and equipment figure." Estimated plant and equipment expenditures, set at around 35 billion dollars for the year, slipped off to an annual rate of $32,800,000,000 in the first quarter, recovered to a rate of $34,800,000,000 in the second quarter, and were scheduled to rise to a $36,700,000,000 annual rate in the third quarter if the steel strike hadn't intervened.

The figures are those of the survey of current business for June, in which the department of commerce staff credits "investment in fixed assets by non-farm business" for the upturn in business in the second quarter.

Store Sales Pick Up.

Reinforcing this better feeling, up to the time the steel strike began, was the pick-up in sales by department stores during June. This upturn—an average of 6 per cent for New York's nine major department stores—did lend strength to the feeling that as long as construction of plants was pouring wages and profits into the commercial stream, retail sales must respond sooner or later.

The pessimist could reply that the response came late rather than soon—that the buyer of both durable and perishable goods appeared to be oversold, if anything. If this picture of a tug-of-war between purchasing power generated by investment, and consumer reluctance to continue the shopping spree of the last two years, is a correct one, we have a right to be alarmed that the investment pull has suddenly ceased.

This is bound to be the effect of the steel strike. There are large inventories of appliances and automobiles that use light-gauge sttel, and of such steel itself. But steel for railroad car-building construction and the $33,000,000,000 highway program has been in short supply, so that every day the strike lasts must mean a day's lay-off or more for these vital heavy industries.

"Whats Going to Give?"

A cheerful view of what's going to give—as between retail sales pointed one way and capital investment the other—was presented by the stock market in the curtailed week following the outbreak of steel's civil war. In early trading last Monday, prices declined, but that day showed a slight upturn in the later hours.

Tuesday's trading also tended upward and volume rose moderately. Thursday's market was still firm, with volume the greatest since June 8, the day the president became ill. By Friday's close, prices were back to the best levels of early May. Enough has been seen, it would appear, to say with safety that the market has no intention of panicking—yet, at any rate.

Consumer installment debt rose by $331,000,000 in May, with the help of a climb of $170,000,000 in automobile paper outstanding. Although this rise was considerably smaller than the one of $636,000,000 in May 1955, it did bring installment credit at the month-end to $28,600,000,000—more than $4,400,000,000 higher than a year earlier.

Meanwhile, there are some signs that the nation's major finance companies expect liquidation of inventories and interrupted steel deliveries to generate enough cash and dampen enough demand to justify a little cheaper money. Commercial paper rates were marked down by one-eighth of a percentage point during the week on short-term maturities.

CONTEMPORARY NOTE IN ARCHITECTS' SHOW

Exhibit, Believed Largest of Kind Here, Opens at Art Museum.

A trend away from conservatism and toward the contemporary in building design is indicated in the annual architectural exhibit sponsored by the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, which opened yesterday at City Art Museum.

The exhibit, believed the largest ever held here, includes several hundred drawings, renderings in water color, pencil and other media, photographs and models representing projects of nearly 30 St. Louis area architects. It occupies six basement galleries.

Architects of the St. Louis chapter and their wives, as well as a number of invited guests, attended a formal preview at the museum Friday night. An American Institute of Architects film on new developments in design was shown. The exhibit will be on view through July 30.

Plans for both the John M. Olin Library at Washington University and the Pius XII Library at St. Louis University are displayed prominently. The former was designed by Murphy & Mackey, architects, and the latter by Leo A. Daley Co. There is a large scale model of the proposed St. Louis University structure.

Office building plans designed by Harris Armstrong for McDonnell Aircraft Corp. are among a number of examples of extensive use of glass and color in industrial or commercial building. Another is the Remington-Rand office building done by the firm of Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum.

The Hellmuth firm's prize-winning Belleville Memorial Hospital, done in association with Isadore & Zachary Rosenfield and Charles E. King, is represented with a number of others, including the Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital by Maguolo & Quick and Froese, Maack & Becker's new Lutheran Hospital.

The Belleville Hospital is noted for the manner in which its medical "core" has been separated from the nursing wing. The core is a one-story building. The two separate units are connected by corridors.

There are drawings, photographs and plans of private residences by Armstrong; Wedemeyer & Hecker; Edward F. Gordon; Charles E. King; Erwin Carl Schmidt; Russell, Mullgardt, Schwarz and Van Hoefen; Edward J. Thias; John A. Grunk and others. Most of the houses are contemporary in style.

In residences as well as in larger buildings, uprights and other structural members often are exposed to form part of the design. Advantage is taken of color and texture in building materials, and these factors, together with use of glass and light-metal panels in walls, make for an effect of lightness and space.

In the case of the houses, there is emphasis on shielding occupants from view of passersby on the street side while giving them maximum living area and natural beauty on the sheltered side. Lines are simple, and interiors uncluttered.

Kurt K. Perlsee's model for an "Air Key" occupies a sizable portion of one gallery. It is a sort of terminal for the jet age of the future, and consists of a loading point for a shuttle transportation system in which busses will transport passengers from terminals to waiting airliners.

A number of interesting modern designs for schools, churches and apartment buildings, and for a variety of types of industrial and commercial buildings, are on display. Many are done in models that enable the observer to visualize drawings in three dimensions.

The architects represented include, in addition to those previously mentioned, Rathmann, Koelle & Carroll; Jamieson, Spearl, Hammond & Grolock; Eric W. Smith Jr. and Robert Entzeroth; Burks & Landberg; Kenneth E. Wischmeyer; Fitch & Nicholas; Burton, Wirth & Theodor; Frederick C. Sternberg; J. T. Wisnewski; Roy L. Stiff; P. John Hoerner & Associates; William B. Ittner Inc., and Lester O. Roth.

There is also a section devoted to work done by students at Washington University School of Architecture. Richard T. Henmi, chairman of the exhibition committee, said the work shown this year was considered unusually fine and was more contemporary in treatment than had been true in previous years.

A Glimpse at Jet-Age Facilities

By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

ARTHUR F. SCHWARZ, architect and vice chairman of City Plan Commission, and MRS. SCHWARZ study model of "Air Key" for jet air age of future. Model, designed by Kurt K. Perlsee, visualizes loading point at which passengers will take busses for waiting airliners. It is part of City Art Museum exhibit sponsored by St. Louis Chapter of American Institute of Architects.

Controversy Over New Eisenhower Book

favored a long-range program plus immediate 'crisis' measures."

Secretary of State Dulles, whose concern was primarily with foreign affairs, "cautioned against any thought of dumping surpluses abroad because of the resentment this would cause among our allies."

Other reports on Cabinet conversations show that Stassen and Vice President Nixon appeared to be the most politically - minded members, with Nixon freqently bringing up the question of alleged subversion in the Truman Administration as a political subject.

Donovan, as far as he lets his personal views be reflected in his writing, appears to be disappointed that the President did not take a strong public stand against Senator Joseph R. McCarthy when the Wisconsin Republican was splitting the party and throwing the executive department into confusion with his investigation and charges. He says that the Senate fight over the Bricker constitutional amendment to limit the President's authority in foreign affairs and the McCarthy clash were "two of the most emotional and vexing domestic issues that have faced Eisenhower during his years in the White House."

Bricker Amendment.

The author says that when the Bricker amendment was "first presented to Eisenhower he felt sympathetic to its general purpose." Although Dulles, Wilson and Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. were emphatically opposed to it, the President did not oppose the amendment until Senate debate on a NATO agreement revealed the potentialities of the Bricker proposal. The NATO agreement about the status of American armed forces abroad was something he understood as a former SHAPE commander. Nevertheless, he reprimanded Philip Young at a Cabinet meeting when the Civil Service chairman facetiously remarked that a small atomic bomb might be used to good effect on the Bricker advocates.

In the chapter on "Eisenhower and McCarthy," Donovan tells of the President's private anger against the Senator which was in contrast to his public silence.

"The President's aim in approaching this problem," he writes, "was not to alienate any wing of the Republican party beyond hope of reconciliation."

The book reveals that the White House staff was about evenly divided in the McCarthy dispute. The leader of the anti-McCarthy bloc was C. D. Jackson, then in charge of psychological warfare. He was supported "actively or passively," by Press Secretary James C. Hagerty, Appointments Secretary Tom Stephens and by Robert Cutler, Bryce N. Harlow, Charles F. Willis Jr., and Stanley M. Rumbough Jr. Those on the pro-McCarthy side, or those who thought they could do business with the Senator were listed as General Wilton B. Persons, assistant to Sherman Adams; Secretary Bernard Shanley; Special Counsel Gerald B. Morgan; U.N. Representative Henry Cabot Lodge, and Assistants I. Jack Martin, who had been secretary to the late Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio; Earle D. Chesney and Homer Gruenther, brother of General Albert Gruenther. Most of these men had had experience on Capitol Hill. Adams is listed as usually siding with them.

No McCarthy Statement.

After McCarthy had viciously attacked Dulles personally, Jackson prepared a statement going after McCarthy by name for the President to read at his next press conference. This is Donovan's account:

"The President put on his spectacles, took a look at it (the proposed statement) and banged it down on his desk.

"'I will not get in the gutter with that guy,' he told Jackson angrily.

"Many times in those days Eisenhower made the same point: to fight McCarthy, either he would have to descend to McCarthy's level or else bring McCarthy up to the President's level, and he would not do either.

"Instead of Jackson's statement, the President and his staff, with Jackson's help, prepared a restrained reply to McCarthy's attacks on assistance to Britain and to his assertion that the Communist-in-government issue would blossom again in the 1954 campaign. The statement did not mention McCarthy by name."

At a Cabinet meeting, when the Administration's wire-tapping bill was under discussion, the President observed that the "bad thing about McCarthy is that he is impeding this work." He added — Donovan reports that it was more in jest than seriously—that it might be a good idea for the Kremlin to put McCarthy on its payroll.

Donovan reports that those who were closest to the McCarthy problem do not believe the President followed any "carefully planned, deliberate strategy toward McCarthy." In their opinion it was "an attitude" rather than "a strategy" that guided him. "If there is any single word that can epitomize this attitude," he writes, "it is disdain."

His own comment is this:

"The public, of course, could not be privy to Eisenhower's thought at that time, and while the Senator was riding high, the President's aloofness left a discouraging void in the movement against McCarthy. To the people—and there were many—who believed that the most important problem in America then was to flatten McCarthy, the President's attitude was so unsatisfying as to be almost unendurable. Yet in view of the fate that overtook the Senator from Wisconsin, a very strong case can be made for it."

Sherman Adams's Role.

In addition to the split in the Republican party and the President's irritation with the McCarthys and Brickers, Democrats are expected to emphasize the important role Sherman Adams, the Assistant to the President, has played and would continue to play in influencing the President's decisions and actions. Donovan indicates that the former New Hampshire Governor's power has been limited to domestic issues.

"While it has not been an inflexible rule," he reports, "it has been the general practice that almost everything of importance in the White House bearing on domestic and political policy clears through Adams. He has been the pivot of political maneuver in the White House. He is the channel through which many of the most important projects in domestic affairs reach the President. What has been even more significant in fixing his influence is the fact that by the time many of these projects have reached the President they have already been shaped in part by Adams himself."

Adams, Vice President Nixon and Press Secretary Hagerty were the first to take over when the President was stricken by coronary thrombosis at Denver in September last year. They repeated this performance when an attack of ileitis required a major operation last month. Adams and Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall were in the forefront of those who thought he should and would seek re-election.

Second Term.

One of the important revelations of the book is the account of how the President's closest advisers in and out of the Government overcame his objections to seeking a second term.

Donovan asserts that "from the time he entered the White House Eisenhower's deep desire was to be a one-term President," and adds, "In the years that followed he expressed this wish many times in private and those who know him most intimately are convinced that he meant it."

The Big Four meeting in Geneva in the summer of 1955 may have changed his mind and at the time of his heart attack the second term question was, Donovan says, "in the balance."

During the early weeks of his convalescence the President "took it for granted that his illness barred a second term" and "Mrs. Eisenhower was dead set against it," but "Adams did not count the President out nor did the political professionals in the Cabinet like Brownell and (Postmaster General) Summerfield."

These officials and others, aided by editorials in Republican newspapers and magazines, played up the idea that the President was in a unique position to preserve the peace of the world.

"Constantly Eisenhower heard this appeal repeated, sometimes expressed in terms of duty, to which he seemed peculiarly responsive," Donovan writes.

"'It was this advice,' an intimate said later, 'that he took to bed with him when he was making up his mind.'"

What Business Men Said.

His friends in big business also told him that he alone among the Republicans could win the election. Here is the author's account of typical meetings:

"In December Gen. (Lucius) Clay (board chairman of Continental Can Co.) discussed this point with him. Clay told the President that he would soon be meeting privately with groups of Republicans. He said he was going to tell these gatherings that, his health permitting, Eisenhower would run again if he believed it his duty to do so, and he would further say, Clay continued, that one of the things that would make the President consider it his duty would be the prospect that otherwise the 'old crowd' would return to the White House.

"After listening to Clay, the President did not ask him to refrain from saying these things. And Clay said them. He said them to a meeting of Republican business men and leaders at the Links Club on East Sixty-Second Street in New York and at a series of meetings in Brownell's house in Washington. Attending the meeting at the Attorney General's were Thomas E. Dewey, former Gov. Dan Thornton of Colorado, Paul G. Hoffman, Under Secretary of Commerce (Walters) Williams, William Robinson (president of Coca-Cola Co.) Tom Stephens (who had left the White House staff), W. Alton Jones, president of the Richfield Oil Corp., and Fred G. Gurley, president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe."

Jan. 13 Decisive.

Apparently the most decisive meeting was the one the President himself called at the White House on Jan. 13. In addition to the President, those attending were Dulles, Humphrey, Brownell, Summerfield, Adams, Hall, Lodge, Hagerty, Persons, Howard Pyle, Stephens and the President's brother Dr. Milton Eisenhower.

Each guest in turn told the President why he should consent to run again, with Dr. Eisenhower saying that if the President was to work effectively for peace it would have to be from the White House, not from retirement.

The President jokingly told his guests, "I didn't know you'd all be against me."

He did not disclose his decision at this meeting but the guests, Donovan says, "Seem to have sensed it."

He announced at a press conference on Feb. 29 he would accept a second nomination. Donovan says it appears that Mrs. Eisenhower did not try to influence his decision one way or another.

"Some of those best acquainted with the family," he writes, "believe that in the gloomy November and December days at Gettysburg she had come to the conclusion that her husband was not ready for retirement."

The Donovan book was on the presses when the President was stricken with ileitis and so it contains no indication what the President will decide because of his recent operation.

PUMPS $341,300,000 INTO BANKING SYSTEM

Federal Reserve Eases Pressure on Credit—Largest Aid in 2 Years.

NEW YORK, July 7 (AP)—The corporate bond market improved on average this week while United States Government bonds declined. Corporate industrials advanced despite the steel strike. Rails, however, eased. Utilities and investment quality issues were firm.

Corporate trading, interrupted by the July fourth holiday, experienced one of the lightest weeks of the year. Volume amounted to $12,319,000 par value on the big board compared with $14,112,000 the previous week. A year ago, the corresponding weekly total was $17,032,000.

Convertibles were generally a bit improved for the week.

Japanese dollar industrial liens were steady in a generally higher foreign section.

United States treasury bonds turned soft this week after registering small gains Monday. The reason was attributed to the fact that the Federal Reserve System eased pressure on credit by pumping $341,300,000 into the commercial banking system in the week ended Wednesday, the largest amount in more than two years. The open-market action by the "fed" was designed to offset a drain on bank reserves caused by the holiday week.

The Treasury 2½s of 1963 closed Friday at 96 30-32 bid, a loss of 2-32 from the previous week. The Victory 2½s of December, 1972-67, gave up 8-32 during the period to close at 94 16-32. The 30-year 3¼s dropped 6-32 at 104 10-32. The 40-year 3s declined 10-32 at 99 16-32 bid.

At these prices, the 2½s of 1963 would yield 2.92 per cent, the Victory 2½s 2.91 per cent, the 30-year 3¼s 2.97 per cent and the 40-year 3s would yield 3.01 per cent.

Work Where Advancement Opportunities Multiply Fast

CREATIVE ASSIGNMENTS
PROFESSIONAL RECOGNITION

Opportunities in several departments of the Component Product Department of General Electric call for:

- Automation Development Supervisor
- Automation Development Engineers
- Fractional and Integral Motor Design and Development Engineers
- Dry Type Transformer Design & Development Engineers

Graduate mechanical, electrical, or industrial engineers are urgently needed for design and development work in manufacturing engineering sections, motor engineering sections and transformer engineering sections. Previous experience is not required, but a good understanding of basic fundamentals is necessary.

Break With Tradition Requires Fresh Thinking In Established Fields

Exploration and application of new materials and design concepts need research, development and design engineers. Extended performance requirements for missiles and aircraft provide challenges in high temperature and nuclear radiation tolerant motors and transformers.

A supervisor is needed to organize, administer and technically direct an engineering organization devoted to the development of complex automatic assembly machines and other automatic equipment.

OPENINGS ALSO EXIST FOR MECHANICAL ENGINEERS IN THIS FAST MOVING AUTOMATION DEVELOPMENT FIELD.

Excellent engineering facilities and laboratories are adjacent to engineering offices. I.B.M. computing equipment is available to engineers working in these departments. In addition, engineering assistants reduce the amount of non-creative work load on engineers.

In these diversified departments, which management anticipates will grow to double their size in the next ten years, you are encouraged to further yourself professionally not only in your assignments, but by participating in technical societies, professional societies, civic activities, etc.

Adequate university facilities provide additional technical training in selected fields.

WRITE US TODAY FOR A CHANCE TO START USING ALL OF YOUR ENGINEERING KNOWLEDGE AND INTELLIGENCE. YOUR REPLY WILL BE HELD IN STRICTEST CONFIDENCE.

PRAVDA COMES OUT IN FAVOR OF ALGERIANS

Editorial Is Most Definitive Soviet Statement to Date — Reflects Party Policy.

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

MOSCOW, July 7—The Soviet Union took sides between France and the Algerian rebels today. It frankly came out in favor of the Arab nationalists.

This stand was disclosed in a major foreign policy editorial in Pravda. It was the most definitive Soviet statement on Algeria to date and reflected Communist party and government policy.

The editorial told France it was fighting a losing war in Algeria and called for a solution on "new lines." It suggested France follow its example in Morocco and Tunisia, meaning full independence for Algeria.

Comfort for Rebels.

It was felt in diplomatic circles here that Pravda's advice would infuriate many Frenchmen, who regard Algeria as part of metropolitan France and at the same time would hearten the rebel movement.

"The Arabs who comprise the indigenous population of Algeria and are the lawful masters of their land," the newspaper said, "no longer wish to tolerate their unequal position.

"Though formally the Arabs of Algeria are French citizens, in actual fact they are subjected to colonial oppression."

The Communist party organ described the rebellion in glowing terms and said the Arabs are "ever more actively and self-sacrificingly fighting for the complete abolition of the colonial regime, for their national independence."

It was stressed that "the people of Algeria" are resisting French troops armed with modern weapons. "But these mighty weapons are powerless against people with primitive weapons but who are inspired by the knowledge of the just cause for which they are fighting."

Casualty Reminder.

Pravda reminded the French of the 92,000 dead and missing soldiers the seven-year war in IndoChina cost them.

"And what was the result?" it asked. "The colonialists were defeated and the liberation movement in Indochina triumphed."

Another result, the newspaper said was that "imperialist circles of the United States profited" by replacing French interests in South Viet Nam. It raised a similar specter for the French in Algeria.

"In some French circles people are watching with alarm the actions of American imperialists in Algeria who are trying to occupy there the weakened positions of the French."

This Soviet support of the Algerian nationalists was presaged here during the visit of French Premier Mollet in May. Despite intense efforts he could not win Soviet support for France's position on Algeria.

It was recalled that party chief Khrushchev, in the hearing of Mollet, raised his glass and drank "to the Arabs and all nations fighting for independence."

29 Nationalist Rebels Killed In 3 Clashes Near Algiers

ALGIERS, July 7 (AP)—French authorities today reported 29 Moslem nationalist rebels killed in three clashes west of this capital.

There was no listing of French casualities, and no authoritative rebel reports have been available since the revolt started in the eastern mountains of Algeria more than 20 months ago.

In Paris, there were indications that the positions of the rebels and Premier Mollet's government are moving closer together. Indian Prime Minister Nehru, due to visit Paris after the Commonwealth conference in London, is known to be eager to act as peacemaker. But any talks going on were being kept secret.

SUMMER SCHOOL PROGRAM OFFERS 3-WEEK INSTITUTE

Summer school activities at St. Louis University will be highlighted next week by the beginning of a three-week institute on "A Child in an Institution," which will deal with adequate preparation of the child for wholesome adulthood. Sister M. Emmanuel, R.G.S., supervisor of case work at Villa Loretto, Peekskill, N.Y., will conduct the institute.

The Rev. Edmund F. Burke, S.J., instructor in religion at St. Louis University, will conduct a religious institute on "The Spiritual Exercises of St. Ignatius," Monday through Thursday, from 2 to 4 p.m.

Lowrie J. Daly, S.J., assistant professor of history at the university.

Beginning this week and continuing six weeks, one healtth program a week will be offered children at 10 city and four county playgrounds. The programs will consist of stories, plays, films and handicraft activities in health subjects.

Health programs also will be offered at Webster Groves Y.M.C.A., Kinloch Y.W.C.A., Sarah - Page Y.M.C.A. and Wheatley Y.W.C.A. One visit will be made in the summer to each 30 daily vacation Bible schools to present programs.

BLUEJAY RETURNS AS PET FOR FAMILY THAT SAVED LIFE

A small bluejay, nursed back to health by the three sons of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Eason Jr., 17 Concord lane, St. Louis county, has become a semi-permanent guest at the Eason home—almost like the man who came to dinner.

The bird was found by 10-year-old Scott Eason after it apparently fell from a tree. Scott and his brothers, Steven, 7, and Alan, 3, fed it with an eye dropper and captured bugs to round out the bluejay's diet.

They also built a cage and kept the bird on an inclosed back porch. The boys became so attached to the small bird, the Easons took it on a nine-day vacation trip to Fayetteville, Ark., and the Lake of the Ozarks.

When they returned last Sunday, the bird was released. Since that time, it has earned its wings and returns regularly from a nearby wooded area to be fed by the children. The bluejay makes itself at home whenever the Eason door is open.

BOSTON POST PREPARES TO RESUME PUBLICATION

BOSTON, July 7 (AP) — A Boston attorney took a 24-day option on the Boston Post today and all labor unions involved agreed to return to work immediately.

Preparations were started at once to resume publication, 24 hours after it had been suspended.

John S. Bottomly took an option on the 125-year-old morning paper after two lengthy meetings with publisher John Fox.

Financial details of the option agreement were not revealed.

The news spread quickly among the Post's 800 employes, who were told last night by city editor John Mannion that the paper was discontinuing publication because of financial difficulties.

TV PANEL WILL DISCUSS VANDALISM IN SCHOOLS

A panel discussion on the effects of school vandalism on the home, the school and the police will be held next Sunday at noon on the "Road Ahead" program on television station KWK-TV.

Panelists will be Emmet T. Carter, attorney for the Board of Education; Champ C. Stonebraker, member of the Public School Patrons Alliance, Colman Kraus, a June graduate of Soldan High School and former president of the school's student council, and Sgt. Charles H. Mueller of the police juvenile division.

Mrs. Irma H. Friede, a member of the Board of Education, will be moderator of the program, the second in a series of three in which various aspects of school vandalism are being explored.

SCIENTIST KILLED IN BLAST AT ROCKET FUEL COMPANY

REDLANDS, Calif., July 7 (AP) — A scientist was killed today in an explosion at a plant manufacturing rocket fuel to be used in the proposed man-made earth satellite.

Benjamin J. Kimbrig, 51 years old, was apparently disintegrated when the powerful rocket propellent exploded at the Grand Central Rocket Co. in Mentone, five miles east of Redlands.

A shoe identified as one Kimbrig was wearing was found on the roof of a nearby building, and bits of cloth believed to be part of the scientist's clothing were found in the wreckage of the small building in which the blast occurred.

HOUSE APPROVES 14-BILLION COMMODITY CREDIT CEILING

WASHINGTON, July 7 (UP) —The House passed by voice vote today a bill to increase to a record 14 billion dollars funds the Commodity Credit Corp. can borrow from the treasury to finance the farm price support program.

The administration requested the increase last spring, asserting the present 12 billion ceiling—most of which already has been invested in farm surpluses—was inadequate to meet price support commitments on crops to be harvested during the coming year.

Since then the administration has increased its estimate of the needed borrowing authority to $14,500,000,000. The Senate last Wednesday passed a bill providing the higher borrowing authority. The two bills now go to a Senate-House conference committee to reconcile the difference.

Named by Business Women.

Two St. Louisans were named chairmen of national committees of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, it was announced yesterday. Mrs. Jeanette Becker was named head of the membership committee and Mrs. Martha Rohrick head of the finance committee.

CURTIS DISPUTED ON FIRE STATEMENT

Army Records Center Here Has 'Ample' Protection Commander Says.

The Army Records and Publications Center, 9700 Page avenue, Overland, has "ample" fire protection, Col. Robert M. Gant, commander, said yesterday after Representative Thomas B. Curtis (Rep.), Webster Groves, complained the installation was without protection from fires.

Curtis made the charge in a letter to Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson. The congressman asked that an Army contract with the Community Fire Protection District, which was canceled last March by the district, be renewed.

Col. Gant said the Records Center has a full-time fire chief and a fire inspector. Guards have received fire-fighting training and go through frequent drills. The center, he added, maintains a 750-gallon pumper and a small hook and ladder truck.

The first three floors of the six-story building are protected by a sprinkler system, Col. Gant said, and hoses are built in the walls in such a fashion as to provide plant-wide protection.

Fire Chief John Moody of the Community Fire Protection District, told the Post-Dispatch it was his understanding that the Records Center met minimum state fire code requirements.

The fire district canceled its agreement to provide protection because the army failed to pay $3600 for the service. The Comptroller General's office ruled the Army had no authority to entered such a contract. The Army took the stand that the district should provide protection without cost.

After this ruling, the Defense Department took over fire protection at the center and also at the Aeronautical Chart Plant, 8900 South Broadway. The chart plant has Fire Protection equipment similar to that at the Records Center.

JUNIOR C. OF C. PRESIDENT

Edward C. Foote, resident manager here for Michigan Mutual Liability Co., has been installed as president of the St. Louis Junior Chamber of Commerce, it was announced yesterday. He succeeded James J. Eagan, an attorney.

George Heckman was elected first vice president, and Elmer Schuster, treasurer.

DIXIE SENATORS URGE REJECTION OF SOBELOFF

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP) —A majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday called Solicitor General Simon E. Sobeloff "well fitted" for the judicial post for which he was nominated nearly a year ago.

But Senators Olin D. Johnston (Dem.), South Carolina, and James O. Eastland (Dem.), Mississippi, filed a sharp dissent to this majority report to the Senate. They urged the Senate to reject the nomination, saying it was "repugnant" to the majority of the people in the Carolinas and Virginia.

Sobeloff, a Baltimore Republican, was nominated by President Eisenhower last July 14 to serve as a judge on the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. Its jurisdiction covers the Carolinas, Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

A week ago the Judiciary Committee voted 9-2 to recommend Senate confirmation of Sobeloff's nomination — long stalled by Southern opposition.

50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Gibson of O'Fallon, Mo., observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary Friday and also celebrated the event a week ago at a family gathering at the home of a son, Virlin Gibson, also of O'Fallon.

Gibson, 70 years old, is a retired employe of Allhoff Brothers Inc. feed store in Wellston, where he worked for about 25 years. Mrs. Gibson is 69. They have nine children, 21 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

NUN TO TEACH COURSE HERE ON CHILDREN IN INSTITUTIONS

Sister M. Emmanuel of the Order of the Good Shepherd, director of social service at Villa Lorette in Peekskill, N.Y., will conduct a three-week institute on "A Child in an Institution" at St. Louis University, beginning tomorrow.

She said yesterday that the orphans of former years have disappeared from institutions because relatives are able to care for them with financial aid from public agencies. Children in institutions today are those who need foster care and can adjust more readily in a group than in a boarding home.

Mrs. Thomas H. Ward, Valley road, Webster Groves, will discuss her recent novel, "Mistress of Thornhedge," on the St. Louis Public Library's television program, "Bookmark," at 10:15 p.m. Tuesday on Station KETC, Channel 9.

The author, who writes under the name Caroline Harris Ward, used her family home at 300 North Gore avenue, Webster Groves, as the setting for the novel, but moved its location to Canada.

MRS. COOPER OIL DISPLAYED

An oil painting of the old Des Peres School in Carondelet, by Mrs. George Cooper, 140 North Rock Hill road, Webster Groves, has been put on display in the teachers' and parents' room at Central Public Library, it was announced yesterday.

The first public kindergarten in America was opened in the school in 1873. Mrs. Cooper, former instructor at Webster College, has exhibited her works locally and nationally for many years.

POLAND PLEDGES JUSTICE FOR RIOT CHIEFS IN POZNAN

British Laborites Had Urged Restraint—No Revenge Motive, Warsaw Promises.

The New York Times News Service. (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

LONDON, July 7—The Polish government sent word to British Laborite members of Parliament today that it would not be motivated by "any feeling of revenge" in dealing with the recent uprising in Poznan. But, it said, "those responsible for the riots will be brought to justice."

The Laborites had written to Aleksander Zawadzki, president of Poland, asking him "to exercise generous restraint in dealing with the workers and citizens of Poznan."

The reply, which came today through the Polish Ambassador in London, Eugeniusz Milnikiel, expressed the official line that "agents of subversion" were responsible for turning the "economic demands" of the workers into the riots that flared June 28.

"We wish to assure you that we are deeply distressed by the death of many innocent victims as well as of those unwittingly guilty of the events of Poznan," the Polish letter said. "We will do our best to alleviate the lot of their bereaved families."

At another point, the letter said:

"You will agree that those responsible for the lawless disturbance of public order and for bloodshed in the streets of Poznan must be brought to justice for their deeds. The government of the Polish People's Republic approach this matter with full consideration, without any feeling of revenge."

However, the British Laborites are clearly skeptical about Poland's good will.

Hugh Gaitskell, leader of the Labor party, said in a speech at Colchester tonight that it was "just possible" Poland was moving away from dictatorship toward more liberties. But, he added, "the shooting in Poznan and the use of tanks by the government against the workers is a sharp reminder of the true state of affairs in that part of the world."

On behalf of the Labor party, Gaitskell sent a salute to the workers of Poznan.

"We are greatly moved by this clear sign that after so many years of repression their love of freedom burns as brightly as ever," he said.

Communist Party Assumes Part of Blame for Revolt.

MERLIN, July 7 (UP)—The Polish Communist party today took part of the blame for the Poznan revolt, confessing "irregularities" and "mistakes."

The party accused local leaders of neglecting to heed legitimate complaints.

Western travelers arriving in Berlin from Poland said a purge of those authorities who either supported the rebels in last week's uprising or who failed to crack down quickly enough had filled prison cells with "scores" of party members, union officials and police officers.

The official Poznan party paper Trybuna Ludu charged party and union bosses with "bureaucratic irregularities," "confusion" and "mistakes."

"The workers had reasons for bitterness," it said in an editorial believed to reflect the opinion of a commission set up to investigate the revolt.

The paper denounced American offers of food for the workers as a "mess of pottage," but eased up on its earlier line that American agents caused the uprising and instead denounce Poznan officials for their stupidity in office.

NAMED TO ST. LOUIS U. POST

Dr. Homer C. Welsh has been named acting director of the department of modern languages at St. Louis University to fill a vacancy caused by the death last month of Dr. John V. Tillman, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Welsh, a member of the faculty since 1952, formerly taught at the University of Kansas City and at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Fiesta Del Pacifico to Open July 18 in San Diego

Spanish or Early American fashions have been officially proclaimed as the only fitting clothing for San Diegans during the Fiesta del Pacifico, July 18 through Aug. 19. The setting above is an arcade in one of the many Spanish type structures of beautiful 1400-acre Balboa Park, site for many of the Fiesta's activities.
—San Diego Convention and Tourist Bureau.

Sports and Community Events to Be Featured During Colorful 33-Day Celebration.

THE colorful and romantic history of California will come to life again this summer when San Diego, birthplace of the state, presents its first annual Fiesta del Pacifico. The celebration will get underway July 18 and continue through Aug. 19.

The Fiesta will be a series of community events revolving about 14 evening performances of "The California Story," which depicts San Diego's role as the first city of the golden state, as one of the great harbor cities of the west, as the gateway to Old Mexico, and as one of the nation's airplane empires.

The pageant was first presented in 1950 by the California Centennial Commission. Its 1956 presentation will have a cast of 1300, and will be staged in 18,000-seat Balboa Stadium.

Color will be added to the Fiesta by nearly a million San Diegans, who are expected to "dress for the occasion" in the Spanish or Early American fashions which have been officially proclaimed as the only fitting clothing for citizens during the month-long celebration.

In addition to the scheduled performances of "The Story," the Fiesta calendar will include an array of colorful dramatic and recreational events.

For the sports-minded there will be a four-day water show, July 18-22 in the beautiful $26,000,000 aquatic playground, Mission Bay Park. Speedboat races, synchronized powerboat exhibitions, swimming events, yacht races and air-sea rescue demonstrations will be part of the activities.

Equestrians and horse show enthusiasts will be delighted by the two-day olympics-type horse show scheduled in nearby Mission Valley. Over $5000 prizes will be awarded to some of the nation's finest horses and riders.

The nationally famed $25,000 Yellowtail Fishing Derby continues throughout the Fiesta and is expected to outdraw last year's record-breaking 100,000 entries.

Street dancing will spring back on San Diego's asphalt during the Fiesta with at least two major name bands scheduled for nighttime dancing in quaint Old San Diego Plaza.

Spanish, Mexican and early California curios will be displayed from 10 a.m. to midnight throughout the Fiesta in Old San Diego, home of Ramona's Marriage Place, California's first palm tree and site of the first American flag raising in the West.

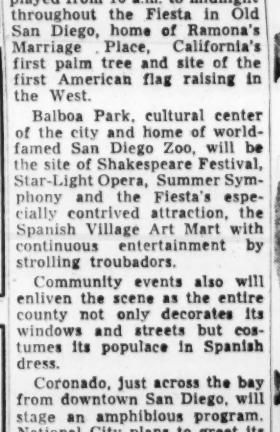

Balboa Park, cultural center of the city and home of world-famed San Diego Zoo, will be the site of Shakespeare Festival, Star-Light Opera, Summer Symphony and the Fiesta's especially contrived attraction, the Spanish Village Art Mart with continuous entertainment by strolling troubadors.

Community events also will enliven the scene as the entire county not only decorates its windows and streets but costumes its populace in Spanish dress.

Coronado, just across the bay from downtown San Diego, will stage an amphibious program. National City plans to greet its visitors Hawaiian style with Aloha Week. A rodeo and three nights of outdoor square dancing are slated for Lemon Grove. Fiesta de las Flores, highlighted by a huge floral parade, will be featured in La Mesa, while El Cajon Valley plans to host over 12,000 to an outdoor barbecue.

A calendar of events and complete details on the Fiesta may be obtained without charge upon request to the San Diego Convention and Tourist Bureau, 924 Second avenue, San Diego, Calif.

ACTIVITIES IN MICHIGAN DURING JULY AND AUGUST

An action-packed summer awaits Michigan vacationers this year, with more than 60 special events scheduled to be held throughout the state during July and August.

Emphasis is on water sports, appropriately pointing up Michigan's abundant facilities for boating, water-skiing, fishing and swimming.

Included are water carnivals, boat races, fishing and flower festivals, showboats, shuffleboard, baseball, tennis and golf meets, summer stock theatres, and a national music festival.

TRUE ISLANDERS

Ever want to live on an island? Millions of people do in Greater New York City.

Those who live or work in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, Staten Island, Governors Island, Ellis Island, Bedloe's Island, Welfare, Randall's, Ward's, Riker's, North Brother and South Brother Islands are all islanders in the true sense of the word.

Hell's Gate.

Hell Gate, a channel between the Borough of Queens and Ward's Island in New York's East River, has been a ship's graveyard for many years. Yet, strangely enough, the name Hell Gate is the English version of the Dutch Hellegat which means "beautiful passage."

MORE ACCOMMODATIONS BEING BUILT IN FLORIDA

Approximately 45 new hotels and 176 motels have been built in Metropolitan Miami in the past 10 years, adding 10,000 tourist housing facilities. Total number of hotels in the Miami area is 535; motel number, 308.

Construction of Florida's first thousand-room hotel is scheduled to start in downtown Miami this summer, with the opening set for the autumn of 1957.

From Panama City, northwest Florida's summer tourist resort area, comes word of a new $3,000,000 160-unit luxury hotel, featuring two penthouse apartments, a glass-enclosed cocktail lounge and restaurant with a seating capacity of 500 and a view of the Gulf of Mexico. A combination pleasure-fishing pier extending about 1500 feet into the Gulf, and an Olympic-size swimming pool are also part of the plan.

Circle Tour of Wisconsin's Famed Indian Head Country

One of the most popular 'circle tours" out of Hayward, in Wisconsin's Indian Head Country, is one that includes scenic Copper Falls, Chequamegon National Forest, through the city of Ashland, and along the shores of the famed Namekagon river.

Starting from Hayward on Highway 63, one travels north through the valley of the Namekagon river, famed for trout, canoe trips, and as the path of French explorers and fur traders. The route cuts through a variety of rolling terrain, past lakes, across trout streams and through many heavy timbered areas.

At Grandview may be seen the beautiful panorama for which the village was named. Here one first sees the watershed divide — Wisconsin's own "Continental Divide," which extends across the northern part of the state. From this point streams flow north to Lake Superior on one side; south to the Mississippi river on the other.

Beyond Grandview the countryside makes a transition to the more populated farm and dairy region surrounding the port city of Ashland. At the junction of Highways 62, 2, and 13, west of Ashland, an historical marker indicates the location of the market place of the French explorers, Radisson and the Sieur de Grosseilliers, first white men to penetrate beyond the Great Lakes.

At Ashland, a prime Lake Superior shipping port, one can see ore docks and vast rafts of Canadian pulpwood in the natural harbor.

South out of Ashland on Highway 13 one climbs rapidly into the wooded granite hills of the Penokee Range surrounding Copper Falls State Park and the village of Mellen.

Copper Falls and Brownstone Falls, two beautiful waterfalls, are scenic highlights of the park. Adding to the scenic interest are deep rocky gorges, winding wooded trails, and delightful picnic grounds.

Routes 13 and 77 out of Mellen take the vacationist through miles of National Forest, past the village of Clam Lake and through the northeastern part of the Hayward lakes region.

BROILER FESTIVAL

Maine's famous "Broiler Festival," claimed to be the world's largest out-of-door chicken barbecue, will be held this year at Belfast, Maine, on July 13 and 14.

Persons from all of the states and from many foreign countries annually converge on Belfast for the event, one of Maine's major festivities during the summer season.

Aboard a Great Lakes Cruise Ship

Dancing, deck sports, gay parties, entertainment and sunbathing are just a few of the many activities aboard the ships that cruise over 2200 miles weekly to the top scenic and historic points of the Great Lakes area. There is sightseeing ashore, too, as the ships stop at different ports-of-call each day.

Minneapolis Aquatennial To Be Held July 20-29

Annual Festival More Elaborate Than Usual During City's Centennial Year.

DURING Minneapolis' centennial year, the city's annual water festival, Aquatennial, will be the springboard for visitors from all over the nation bound for an air-conditioned vacation in Minnesota's northland.

Tourists by the car, bus and trainload will funnel through Minneapolis and enjoy the colorful Aquatennial festival, set for July 20-29, on their way to a quiet, restful vacation on one of Minnesota's 10,000 lakes.

The 1956 festival will hit a high with the celebration of the Minneapolis Centennial culminating during Aquatennial.

A wide-range of sporting events, water shows, radio shows, music, parades, and a coronation show will be run off during the 10-day period.

The Aquatennial is woven throughout the lake-studded, recreationally rich fabric of the Minneapolis metropolitan area, with events in all parts of the city.

The budget-minded tourist doesn't have to spend a cent to sample the 115 events which are open to the public without charge. For a nominal price, he can view the five paid attractions in Aquatennial.

From a participation standpoint the festival solders together all elements in the city. About 7000 persons take part in the two parades; 25,000 participate in the music segment of the show; 50,000 take part in the sports program; 200 AAU swimmers compete in swimming; 500 young women compete in the Queen of the Lakes contest; 119 swimming and diving stars perform at the Aqua Follies water show and nearly 200 take part in a two-day lake show.

Focal points of the festival are the two giant parades; the day parade and the dazzling torchlight parade. Bands, floats and marching units from every corner of the nation wind their way down Minneapolis' fashionable boulevard, Nicollet avenue, past the reviewing stand then fade into the festive throngs that celebrate Aquatennial throughout the city.

The Aquatennial has long boasted of its water spectacle, the Aqua Follies. Originated by two Minneapolis men, Aqua Follies has grown into the nation's top aquatic event. The attraction features the perfection of top Olympic diving stars, a precision water ballet that outdoes Hollywood, chuckle-making comic divers, and a stage show packed with stars. The site of Aqua Follies is a specially constructed outdoor arena overlooking emerald-hued Theodore Wirth lake. After a 12-day stand during the Aquatennial, the show moves on to Seattle where it plays before capacity audiences at that city's renowned Sea Fair.

The highlight of Aquatennial events is the selection of the Minneapolis Aquatennial Queen of the Lakes, titular ruler of the summer season.

Street dances, noontime shows in the loop, naval uniforms, and glamorous visiting queens all lend to the celebration and create a festive atmosphere.

Two jam-packed days of lake activities climaxed by a giant fireworks show take place around the shores of Lake Calhoun, one of the 22 lakes within the Minneapolis city limits. The events include a water skiing thrill show, North American Water Skiing Championships, giant Indian village, power boat races, water ball fights, canoe obstacle race, and distance swimming events.

SEATTLE'S LOCKS

The Government Locks at Seattle, Washington, are next in size to those at the Panama Canal. The Locks afford passage from Puget Sound into Lake Union and Lake Washington via ship canals.

The Locks are one of Seattle's top sightseeing attractions where visitors may watch huge lumber ships, fishing vessels, submarines, pleasure boats and all manner of vessels passing to and from the salt water. On Sunday afternoons, hundreds of yachts enter the locks returning from week end cruises in Puget Sound.

Declaration of Independence.

Visitors to Washington, D. C., can view the original manuscript of the Declaration of Independence. The document reposes under glass specially treated to prevent passage of rays which would cause fading. Most of the writing still is legible. It is in the Library of Congress.

SIDEWALK SUPERINTENDENTS PROVIDED VANTAGE POINTS

Michigan this summer is offering two special vantage points for visitors to the state's gigantic Mackinac Bridge construction site. One is in Michilimackinac State Park in Mackinaw City, lower peninsula approach to the bridge; the other in the Straits State Park near St. Ignace, gateway city to the upper peninsula.

Sidewalk superintendents will be able to check construction progress against a set of statistics and dimensions shown on a large picture of the bridge as seen from each of the vantage points.

For a close-up view, special excursion boats run the full length of the huge engineering operation to take visitors within rivet throwing distance of the 500-foot high support towers.

Patriotic Note.

The flags on the front and rear of the nation's capitol are never lowered.

MT. RANIER FOURTH HIGHEST MOUNTAIN IN UNITED STATES

In 1792 Capt. George Vancouver sighted a majestic peak from his ship and named it after his friend in the British Royal Navy — Admiral Peter Rainier.

The fourth highest mountain in the United States, Mt. Rainier is one of the greatest examples of glacial beauty.

Down its slopes spread 28 glaciers. The year-round snow meets miles of mountain meadows bright with flowers in its 377 square mile expanse; its giant trees are some of the greatest in the Pacific Northwest's forests.

Water Sports on Lake of Ozarks

There is plenty of opportunity for aquatic sports right in our own state. This scene is on the Lake of the Ozarks, where boating, swimming, fishing and water skiing are excellent.

—Mazzio—Missouri Resources Div.

Vacation Days on Kentucky Lake

Kentucky Lake is a fine place for boating, with numerous dock areas in resorts on this giant body of water in western Kentucky. The state provides dock facilities at Kentucky Dam Village and Kentucky Lake state parks. Each park also has excellent vacation accommodations and is set up to provide fishing, swimming and other sports.

—Kentucky Div. of Publicity.

Special Events On Schedule In Missouri

By LESLIE G. KENNON
(Missouri Division of Resources and Development).

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—According to latest reports coming into the Missouri Division of Resources and Development office here, midsummer travel is up in the state—perhaps even over its record summer of 1955.

One reason for this may be because of the many special events left on the calendar during the summer vacation season.

The Shepherd of the Hills Theater, one of the newest and most unusual of Missouri's events, got under way early this month, and will run through August. Players from Southern Illinois University present different plays each week in this home-erected out of door theater built on the banks of beautiful Lake Taneycomo.

St. Louisans may stay, for instance, at nearby Rockaway Beach and commute to Branson and the theater via moonlight cruise on Taneycomo to see the plays. Incidentally, the theater puts on an original stage adaptation of Harold Bell Wright's immortal "Shepherd of the Hills" each weekend.

Another big event will be the annual J-Bar-H Rodeo at Camdenton on the 60,000-acre Lake of the Ozarks. The J-Bar-H is to be held this year July 10-15.

The Sullivan Centennial will be held July 25 and, of course, Centennials — what with their beards, folk music et al, are always something worth seeing whether on vacation or on weekend trip.

August begins Missouri's vast fair time — the Jaycee Cole County Fair here Aug. 1-4; the Northeast Missouri District Fair at Kirksville Aug. 7-10; or the annual Washington Fair Aug. 9-12.

Then, a really big event will be the sesqui-centennial celebration at Cape Girardeau Aug. 19-25. Within comfortable driving distance of St. Louis, it will be one of the biggest special events of the midsummer vacation season.

The Ozark Water Ski Show at the Lake of the Ozarks; boating, swimming, sightseeing or just relaxing — there's always plenty to do in Missouri. If you've thought it's too hot for a midsummer vacation bear in mind that Missouri's resorts are economical, cool and comfortable and most events are planned at night or when the weather is the most ideal. Fishing's fine, too, despite what you've heard about "hot weather fishing." It is important to know where and when, but that's what resort operators and guides are for.

For helpful literature, write the Missouri Division of Resources and Development, Jefferson City or direct your inquiry to specialized departments such as the Missouri Conservation Commission or State Park Board.

HOLLAND'S DIKES

Tourists traveling through Holland will be surprised to see the dikes that keep the sea from flooding the low Dutch farmlands.

The legend of the small boy who held a dike together by putting his finger in a hole will seem improbable when visitors see the massive concrete structures in modern Holland. One even has a four-lane highway running along its top.

BOONE'S LICK TRAIL

Daniel Boone spent the last years of his life in Howard county, Mo. It was there he started to blaze his "Boone's Lick Trail" from his salt spring to St. Charles which later developed into the Santa Fe Trail and is now followed by U.S. Highway 40.

ANNUAL RODEO TO OPEN JULY 10 AT CAMDENTON

The fifth annual J Bar H Rodeo of Champions will be held July 10 through 15 at Camdenton, Mo. on the Lake of the Ozarks.

Since its initial performance in July 1952 the rodeo has been steadily gaining recognition, and is now rated by many experts along with Cheyenne's Frontier Days, the Pendleton Round-up and the Calgary Stampede.

Prize money totaling $11,900 has attracted some of the top cowboys of the nation. Other features will include clowns and rodeo specialty acts, an exhibition by two dressage horses, Brahma bull fighting, and bronc riding.

The arena has been enlarged to seat 13,000 persons, with 5000 seats held for sale on the day of each performance. The rodeo will be held each evening at eight o'clock, with championships awarded at the 5:30 p.m. performance July 15.

NATIONAL PARKS RANK FIRST AMONG TOURIST MAGNETS

The combined National Parks are the leading attraction among the nation's four top tourist magnets, according to the American Express Travel Service. The other three big drawing cards are New York, California and Florida.

The National Parks attracted more than 53,000,000 Americans last year. This year the number will greatly increase, according to estimates by the National Park Service, and the service estimates that by 1966 the Parks will need facilities to accommodate 80,000,000 visitors.

New York, which has a resident population of over 9,000,000 will play host this summer to an additional 5,000,000 out-of-towners, and in the course of the year, the city will be visited by a total of 13,000,000 travelers and convention delegates. California was the destination last year for ½,305,000 visitors. Visitors to Florida during 1955 numbered slightly over 6,000,000.

BY-THE-SEA ART SHOW AT VIRGINIA BEACH IN JULY

A colorful boardwalk art show will be a "Golden Jubilee Event" highlight at Virginia Beach July 13 through 18.

The first "by-the-sea" exhibit ever to be held at the resort, it has been instigated to encourage an art colony at Virginia Beach where artists can have a working vacation, exhibit and mart.

The exhibits will include sculpture, ceramics, weaving, hand screened reproductions, paintings in oils, watercolors and pastels and fine china decorations.

Artists will attend their own exhibits and many will paint while exhibiting and selling their work. With the sea as a backdrop the exhibit scene will be set with gay awnings and umbrellas.

AMSTERDAM A CITY OF LIGHTS JULY 18 TO MID-SEPTEMBER

Holland's capital will be bathed in the lights of 50,000 electric bulbs each night during the Holland Festival period and every Wednesday and Saturday night from July 18 to mid-September.

The lights, which are strung on cables with a total length of more than 35 milese, give a fairy-tale effect when their glow is reflected in the water of Amsterdam's numerous canals.

Each of the 300-odd bridges is transformed in a glowing arc of lights. All the old buildings and towers are illuminated with floodlights. Special sightseeing boats will tour through the canals of this city of lights.

150th Anniversary

How Pike Explored Upper Mississippi

This year marks the 150th anniversary of the first major exploration of the upper Mississippi area—an expedition that opened up a great region that now includes Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas. Here's the story of that eight-month trek and the man who led it, Zebulon Montgomery Pike.

NEW YORK, July 7 (AP).

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY YEARS ago a young Army lieutenant whose name was later to commemorate a mountain poled his keelboat into St. Louis and thus became the first white man to successfully ascend and come down what is known today as the "upper stretch" of the Mississippi river.

ZEBULON M. PIKE

Zebulon Montgomery Pike, just 26 years old, had returned to St. Louis after an eight-month trek into the upper Mississippi area. Our nation had purchased the Louisiana Territory in 1803, and Pike's upriver exploration was one of two important missions being conducted in the young republic in 1805. The other, of course, was the Lewis and Clark Expedition which broke trail up another great river, the Missouri.

Pike's Mississippi trip is one that history seems to have overlooked. Perhaps it is because his second great river trek—up the Arkansas in late 1806—brought him to the mountain now named "Pike's Peak." Whatever the explanation, his Mississippi river explorations deserve notice, too.

Pike and his party of 20 men left St. Louis on Aug. 9, 1805. According to orders given him by Gen. James Wilkinson, Pike was to explore and report on the Mississippi river from St. Louis to its source; recommend sites for military posts; consult with Indians along the way; make peace (if possible) between the Sioux and Ojibways, and check on British traders who had remained in the newly acquired American territory.

Pike, unlike Davy Crockett, Paul Bunyan and other figures of Nineteenth Century American frontier lore, was not a perfect man. He did manage to placate some of the Indians he encountered, and indeed, he discovered certain known murderers among several tribes in the upper river country. But he never achieved his goal of finding the actual source of the Mississippi. He thought he located it when, on Jan. 20, 1806, he reached the junction of Leech lake and the main stream of the river. But there were several other sources of the great stream to the north, and these he did not find.

● THIS UNDERSTANDABLE shortcoming aside, Pike's accomplishments on the 1330-mile stretch of upper river were worth the difficult trip. He managed to secure 100,000 acres of land from the Sioux who were camped at the confluence of the Minnesota and Mississippi rivers where Fort Snelling now stands. The price for this tract? Pike reported that he got it after he had presented the Sioux with $200 worth of gifts and had "cleared the Indians' throats" with some 60 gallons of well-watered whisky. Pike also visited the fabulous Julien Dubuque, whose lead mines at what is now Dubuque, Ia., were the richest in the area.

The expedition wintered in what is now Little Falls, Minn. In the fierce winter weather Pike made his way north by canoe, dog-sled and snowshoes until he reached Leech lake. He must have been a happy and weary man indeed, when he got back to St. Louis on April 30, 1806.

Pike got no special reward for his upriver accomplishments, and bad luck seemed to follow him from this point on. Sent out on the exploration of the Arkansas river three months after he returned from his Mississippi trip, he was captured by Mexicans and taken on an enforced tour of their country before he was released in 1807. He finally was killed in the Battle of York during the War of 1812.

Pike's military career was short and fascinating. He began as a lieutenant in 1802, and when he was killed he was a brigadier general. Although Pike's name is known now, for the most part, in association with the mountain he discovered, in the Nineteenth century he was a heroic figure. The first steamboat to reach St. Louis was named after him; President James Madison eulogized him in an address to Congress, and a new warship was christened the "General Pike" in 1813. Today, his name marks a Mississippi river dam, a state park, 10 counties, 18 towns and several bays, rivers and lakes in addition to the famous mountain.

● MOST INTERESTING OF ALL, perhaps, when one thinks of Pike and his expedition into the upper Mississippi country 150 years ago, is what happened to that country. During the "golden age of the steamboat," hundreds of the romantic-appearing, yet important, stern and paddle wheelers made their way upriver, transporting passengers and cargo destined for the booming upper Midwest country. This was the great period of settlement in the area which encloses the states of Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and the Dakotas.

Today, the river is as busy as a highway. In 1955, an all-time record was set for tonnage shipped on the Mississippi. Stubby but powerful towboats, equipped with Diesel and radar, do the job. Coal, oil, metals, farm machinery, grain and chemicals are hauled by the millions of tons.

And though the river itself has seen great changes in people, commerce, industry and navigation, it is the same great stream the Indians called "the Father of Waters." The upper Mississippi has remained legendary, even as in Pike's time, though it is now fully explored and harnessed.

V. P. Queen as Big Game Hunter

Audrey Faust Wallace and Her Family Have Trophy Rooms Filled With Specimens They've Bagged on Expeditions Ranging From Frozen North to Africa

AUDREY FAUST WALLACE'S subjects who saw her crowned Queen of Love and Beauty at the Veiled Prophet ball last October, remember her as a slim blonde in white silk marquisette aglitter with silver and crystal and rhinestones.

They would never have recognized her as her family saw her on a hunting trip in the frozen North the summer before—sitting on an ice floe, wearing heavy woolen slacks and parka, happily skinning a polar bear she'd shot, as a group of Norwegian sailors looked on admiringly.

The Veiled Prophet Queen, (known to her family as "Tolie,") her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Brookings Wallace Jr., and her 21-year-old brother, Mahlon, III, who is called "Lonnie," are all big game hunters in a big way. Their home at 100 Sunningdale Drive, Ladue, has two special trophy rooms, with a splendid collection of specimens worthy of a museum, ranging from the tiny scrawny hornbill bird to the Greater Kudu (a rare trophy) over the fireplace, and a huge rhinoceros which almost got Wallace before he got it.

The elephant tusks which form an arch between the trophy rooms are Tolie's pride. Shooting an elephant, she thinks, was the high spot of her career as a markswoman, although she's shot a buffalo, lion, and polar bear, too.

ON ONE occasion she brought an animal back alive. She attended a Christmas party of the Advertising Club of St. Louis where a monkey was auctioned off. She and two of her special V. P. maids, Elizabeth Busch and Kitsy Borders, bought it. The other girls quickly relinquished their claim, however, and the monkey became part of the Wallace household.

Named Ketty after the three girls' initials, it is reputedly a ringtailed monkey ("although I doubt it because there are no rings on the tail," Tolie's father points out.) It has a white chest and a wizened, ancient looking white face with bright, inquisitive eyes, and a marking of black on the head like a monk's cap.

It chatters incessantly, making a sound like a cross between a canary and a squeaking door. Occasionally the Wallaces let it out to swing around the room or sit in their laps, but most of the time, it sits in a parakeet's cage, munching apples in the corner of the family study.

MISS WALLACE POSES WITH AFRICAN BUFFALO SHE SHOT ON 1952 TRIP.

This study, like the trophy rooms, which are in a separate building reconverted from a stable, has a large collection of mounted trophies. Going from one to the other, you can almost trace the interest of the Wallace family in hunting.

"I guess I'll have to take the responsibility for being the original hunter in the family," Wallace says. "I always liked the outdoors, liked to hunt rabbit, duck and quail."

Mrs. Wallace, who was Audrey Faust, granddaughter of Anthony Faust and Adolphus Busch, had had some experience at hunting, too. Among the trophies are numerous German roebuck, small sized deer, labeled "Villa Lilly," the name of Busch's estate in Germany where Mrs. Wallace had visited and hunted as a youngster with her grandfather Busch.

"It was a case of two people finding each other and finding that they had a common interest," Wallace says. "It's been a very happy situation."

The Wallaces went hunting on their wedding trip.

"In the Laurentian mountains in Eastern Canada," Wallace said. "That's when Mrs. Wallace shot that moose," he indicated the head over the fireplace. "She's an avid hunter and a good one."

WALLACE names the other trophies on the wall—"That one's an Eastern caribou . . . that's a big horned Rocky Mountain sheep." Finally he comes to some of Lonnie's trophies, a Dall sheep, and a Kodiak bear, crouching in a corner as if to spring.

"I took Lonnie deer hunting with me in Missouri when he was just a little bitsy fellow, about 10 years old," Wallace recalls. "Tolie went along on some of those trips, too. But Tolie really learned to shoot on her first trip to Alaska. She had trouble at first, couldn't learn to close one eye."

That was in 1948 when she was 12 years old. She recalls that she practiced shooting a .22 rifle at tin cans.

ON THEIR next trip to Alaska in 1950, they had poor hunting luck except for the Kodiak bear and the Dall sheep which Lonnie shot. Then in 1952 they went to Africa, flying by way of London, Rome, Cairo and Nairobi.

"That was the most exciting trip," Tolie says. "I'll remember Africa long after I've forgotten the North country."

She had no preconceived ideas about Africa as she'd never read too much about the country, she says.

"You can read all the stories you want about hunting and there are some extremely fine ones," her father says, "but until you've gone on a safari you don't know a thing about it. Africa was by all means our most exciting trip; the amount of game, the beautiful country, the immensity of it, the interesting tribes."

"It reminds me of a number of our own states," Mrs. Wallace says. "Parts are mountainous like Montana and Wyoming, other parts are like Texas. There are parts like Florida with palms and orange trees, and other parts even remind me of Virginia with its rolling country and valleys."

In Africa during June, July and August, the Wallaces bagged a large amount of game, much of which is on exhibit in the trophy rooms. There is a huge elephant head (that one killed by Lonnie), a buffalo, eland or largest sized antelope, the dik-dik, tiny rabbit sized antelope. There are zebra skin rugs on the floor, a native's shield and spear made into a floor lamp.

"Everything in the rooms is something we got ourselves," Mrs. Wallace says. "When people ask, 'What ones did you buy?' I'm ready to kill them and hang them on the wall."

"The five most dangerous animals in Africa are the elephant, buffalo, rhino, lion and leopard," Wallace explained. "We got them all but the leopard."

THE VEILED PROPHET QUEEN FLANKED BY TUSKS OF ELEPHANT SHE SHOT. SHE THINKS SHOOTING AN ELEPHANT WAS THE HIGH SPOT OF HER CAREER AS A MARKSWOMAN.

"Of course we have a lot of duplicates," Mrs. Wallace said, "because four of us were shooting at one time. We had to depend on game to supply the daily food for ourselves and the 24 safari porters who accompanied us."

NOT only the animals but the native tribes added to the interest of the African trip. Pictures taken by the Wallaces—with Mount Kilimanjaro in the background—show Tolie with grinning, beaded and bedecked natives of the Masai tribe, once considered the most warlike tribe of Africa, and even now still considered the most uncivilized.

"When Tolie shot her first lion, she was carried back into camp by our safari boys," Mrs. Wallace said, in explanation of another picture in their album. "It's the custom when you shoot a lion for the safari boys to carry you on their shoulders through your camp, yelling and chanting, 'Simba-Simba-Simba.'

LOOKING ON IS STRATFORD LEE MORTON, PRESIDENT OF THE ACADEMY OF SCIENCE OF ST. LOUIS.

MAHLON WALLACE III WITH A ROAN ANTELOPE THAT HE SHOT.

Killing a lion is special because for generations lions have killed their families in their native villages."

WALLACE, a board member of the Academy of Science of St. Louis, has given a habitat group, consisting of nine mounted East African animals, to the city. This group, called the "Plains" group, has been on display at the Pavilion in Forest Park since June of 1954. He has two other groups, which he would turn over to the city if proper quarters were available to exhibit them. Wallace hopes that the city will build a Museum of Natural History, pointing out that St. Louis is the only city in the United States with more than 300,000 population that does not have such a museum.

All three of the habitat groups were mounted by a museum taxidermist, Louis Paul Jonas, of New York. Two of them are reproduced in miniature in glass inclosures in Wallace's trophy rooms. One is the "Plains" group, consisting of a Grant gazella, a hartebeest, zebras, a wart hog, two Thompson gazelles (called Tommies), a wildebeest and a topi. All of these animals are found together in the same habitat. The second group is the lion group and the third a northern group of seals and bears, which the Wallaces obtained on their last trip.

This last was a trip to the Spitzbergen islands north of Norway, which Wallace describes as "a real fun trip," which they made in 1954. Accompanied by their nephew, John K. Wallace Jr., they flew from Paris to Tromso, Norway, with stops at Denmark and Sweden, then went by small ship to Spitzbergen and there chartered a 57-foot motor sailor ketch for three weeks. Their crew consisted of four Norwegians—"one of whom spoke a little English, which helped a little, and one of whom spoke German which Mrs. Wallace speaks, which also helped a little," Wallace said.

"It's a barren, desolate country, about 300 miles from the North Pole, completely frozen, with no vegetation, nothing but snow, ice, water, and a few rocky mountains, but truly fascinating and eerie."

This is where Tolie shot her polar bear, at midnight (although it was daylight midnight) and skinned it while sitting on an ice floe, a task that required time and skill.

"She liked that gory part," her mother laughed.

"Mothurr," Tolie protested.

On questioning, Tolie admits she is unafraid of any wild animals but scared of snakes.

"I'd face anything before I'd face a snake," she shivers.

So far, Wallace is the only member of the family who has faced actual danger in their hunting expeditions. In Africa, he was charged by a rhinoceros, but managed to kill it in time to keep from being killed. Numerous times on flying trips around the Arctic circle, while in Alaska in 1950, the Wallaces were fogged in and on one occasion thought they'd have to sleep under their plane in an Eskimo village on the edge of Bering sea.

"Fortunately we found a CAA station there and they took us in for three nights," Mrs. Wallace recalls.

"But that's the fun of it," she continued. "You meet wonderful people and see wonderful country. You get close to real people, people like the sourdoughs in Alaska, the Eskimos in the Arctic, the Norwegian fishermen, and the British white hunters in Africa, all of whom are most interesting and fine people. Half the fun of hunting big game is the trip itself, the rugged life and elements."

"That and having your children with you, enjoying it all together," Wallace says.

NONE of their friends has ever gone on a trip with them, except perhaps for briefer, tamer trips like quail shooting trips to Georgia and Texas.

"Most of our friends," says Mrs. Wallace, "say they'd just as soon shoot a cow in the backyard.

"But it isn't just the shooting," she expresses her enthusiasm for hunting. "The shooting isn't entirely secondary, but there's more to it than that. It's the excuse to take a trip. It's the bad and the good, the horrible weather with the beautiful, the awe-inspiring scenery, the fascination of different game in their natural habitat, everything that goes with it that's exciting."

Both Mrs. Wallace and Tolie have numerous wardrobes of hunting clothes. In Alaska and Norway they wore the same clothes they wear here for duck shooting. In Africa they had special "safari outfits" made in one day by the native tailors in Nairobi — inexpensive but good-looking and durable.

This year has been far more of a dress-up year for Tolie with her obligations as the Veiled Prophet Queen and the parties of her debut. She has no dislike of dressier clothes and occasions, however.

"I like both," she says. "I wouldn't want to do one all the time or the other all the time."

Since Lonnie is a senior at Yale, and will go into the Marine Corps upon graduation, the family is rather pessimistic about the chances of another major safari in the near future.

They are all agreed on what they'd like to do. In fact, it's Tolie's biggest ambition.

"That's to go to India and hunt tigers," she says, her eyes shining.

Possum Trot Farm

Summer in Missouri Is Farmer's Delight

By Leonard Hall

PEOPLE who go away from Missouri in summer miss one one of its most delightful seasons. This is, of course, a biased opinion. Not everyone in Missouri lives out in the open countryside on a high prairie where the wind sweeps down from the St. Francois hills during the day and the shade of big sugar maples keeps the earth from absorbing the heat so that it cools off immediately at sundown. Not everyone in Missouri spends his working hours outdoors in the fields where the flow of perspiration is nothing to be ashamed of. Not everyone in Missouri gets up with the rising sun to enjoy, as we did last week, that perfect hour when the thermometer stands below 60 degrees and you shiver just a bit as you go about the morning chores.

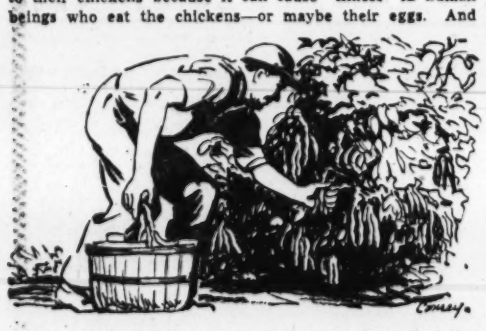

Out in the garden, picking a mess of young string beans and listening to the early song of an indigo bunting and to the first tractor of the day starting up on a neighboring farm, I thought of an article we read recently. It was "The Annihilation of Privacy," written by Ashley Montagu, distinguished professor of anthropology at Rutgers, in which he discussed some possible long-range effects of the ceaseless attack on this very important department of human living. One aspect of it is noise—the noise of traffic, screeching tires, telephone, radio, fire sirens, the factory, the air-conditioning machine, and countless others. On a par with these as attacks upon privacy he lists the files of the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities, wire tapping, manpower lists, mail advertising lists—until a life of one's own becomes near to impossible and the day of George Orwell's "Big Brother is watching you" seems almost at hand. Out of these things, in the United States, we've built the highest living standard in the world at the highest cost in ulcers, mental breakdown, homicide, violent crime, juvenile delinquency and alcoholic and drug addiction in man's history.

Some of this invasion of privacy reaches out to touch everyone, yet there's no doubt that in the country you escape a lot of it. Our telephone rings, although the calls are not too often for us. The radio has a button on it by means of which it can be rendered silent whenever the commercials reach the brain-washing stage. Traffic sounds are muted by distance and almost no-one would class the murmuring of bluebirds along the garden fence as nerve-jangling. The tractor is noisy, though this is a comfortable sort of clatter when it is hitting properly and performing some useful task such as mowing. We can count on a "sonic boom" several times a week as some high-flying jet above the valley breaks the sound barrier and explodes into incredible speed as if shot from a cannon. These "booms" sometimes shake the windows but so far haven't cracked the cellar walls and we've learned to take them in stride as part of the cost of living in the twentieth century, though they still send Daisy and Ribbon galloping across the pasture.

● GOING BACK to those string beans we were picking from the garden, I'm often amused—or it might be more accurate to say, not amused—by items in the agricultural press and the newspapers on the wonders of food packaging. They're on the way, now, to taking any old cut of meat from any old tired dairy cow, doctoring it up with chemicals, cutting it into the shape of a porterhouse steak and selling it to you as such. You simply won't be able to tell the difference. E. B. White tells of a wonderful bit from the "Rural New-Yorker" to the effect that poultrymen had "volunteered" to quit feeding diphenyl-phenylene-diamine to their chickens because it can cause "illness" in human beings who eat the chickens—or maybe their eggs. And pretty soon kitchens are going to be so revolutionized that you can walk into this department of the household, press a button and peas will appear on a paper plate. This, says White, is a dream of the American Society of Industrial Designers.

It's true that our garden pretty much goes to pot when the haying season starts, like the garden of many another busy farmer. Yet right now we can go out there and take our pick of a lot of wonderful eating. The peas are in the freezer, but there are bushels of new potatoes, both red and white. String beans hand in big clusters on the bushes. The scalloped and yellow crook-neck and zucchini vines are loaded, each vine covering a 12-foot circle. Sweet corn is silking out and green peppers are ready for picking. The onions are laid by for digging. There are pecks of cucumbers and okra and eggplant are in bloom. No mysterious formula is responsible for these things; cow manure turned under, a strong back for laying out and planting the rows, some elbow-grease for cultivating. No miracle processing of this modern age can produce the succulence and flavor of these vegetables picked fresh and eaten within the hour. The pot roast from the home-grown beef which went into our locker last winter comes out of the oven as tender and juicy as any prime rib roast; and this without benefit of a single one of the miracle drugs being injected into the animal or its feed.

● ALL IN ALL, we wouldn't miss a single day of our country summers in Missouri, though we spend many a worrisome hour attempting to solve the unsolvable problem of raising and marketing our beef and other crops for what it costs to produce them. Just now, however, we're looking forward to the arrival of grandson Ricky who is flying in from California to spend the rest of the summer with us. He's sure, now that he is almost 8, that he can take his full place as a "hand" on the farm. And we're sure that there are going to be some wonderful hours with him in the fields and down at the creek and going camping in the Ozarks. Certainly on a Missouri farm, summer is a time which should be devoted in large measure to 8-year-old grandsons.

Watch That Sun

How to Adjust to Summer Heat

Gradual 'Acclimatization' Over a Four-Day Period Is Necessary

By E. Hunter Wilson, M.D.

The summer sunshine can bring deep tans, but it also can make life most uncomfortable . . . can even be a killer. Following is the first article in a series on how to take the hot, summer sun in easy stages to avoid the complications of heat intoxication.

The author is a native of Cambridge, Md. After graduating from Princeton, he received his medical degree from the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine. He has practiced internal medicine and done research at Philadelphia General Hospital and Baltimore City Hospitals. He is now returning to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore where he will continue research.

THE OTHER DAY, a man, aged 62, was brought into the accident room of a city hospital in a state of collapse. His temperature was found to be 110 degrees F.—normal temperature being about 98.6 degrees.

He had been in perfectly good health up until that day. He had had the day off, and decided to take advantage of the hot sunshine. So, in the late morning, he spread a blanket in his unshaded back yard, and took his first sun-bath of the season. Five hours later, his wife returned home from shopping and went out to call him. She found him confused and unable to rise. She summoned friends, who rushed him to the hospital. But by the time he arrived he was unconscious and had no blood pressure. He died before treatment could be given him.

Now, this may seem an extreme case. In reality it is a story that will be repeated hundreds of times throughout the country during the summer. It is, however, only one—although a serious one—of a number of different diseases to which man is exposed in summertime. All of them are uncomfortable, some of them are dangerous.

These diseases may be broadly divided into three categories; first, as in the case above, diseases due to heat and exposure to the sun itself; second, allergic processes, such as poison ivy, hay fever and the like; and third, diseases due to tiny living organisms (bacteria), such as athlete's foot, dysentery and typhoid fever.

In this series, all of these diseases, and their special effect in children and older people, will be discussed with the intention to make your summer a safe and enjoyable one.

FORTUNATELY for the human being, the body has an automatic, inborn mechanism for adjusting to and handling heat. Were it not for this process, which is called "acclimatization," it would be impossible ever to spend long hours in the hot summer sun without being in extreme danger. Because of this process, man can both work and play in the summertime without fear.

There are three main developments in acclimatization:

First, the amount of sweat increases, so that it becomes possible to excrete as much as four pounds of sweat a day. It is the evaporation of this sweat that helps keep the body cool and temperature normal.

Second, the amount of salt contained in the sweat decreases, so that the person will not lose too much of this material that is so necessary for all bodily processes.

Third, the amount of blood plasma is increased, so that the heart can function more effectively.

The net result of these three processes of acclimatization is that the body temperature is kept at a normal level, the pulse and blood pressure remain normal, and the person can now endure efficiently and safely long hours at work or play in the heat of summer.

But, if the body can do all this, you might ask, why is there anything to fear from heat or exposure to the sun? And how do cases like the one mentioned above ever happen?

THE answer is that once the process has occurred and the person has become acclimatized, there is relatively little to fear. But it must be emphasized that the process of acclimatization takes approximately four days to develop to the point where heat can be handled adequately.

If, therefore, severe or prolonged exposure to the sun occurs before or during those four days, the complications of heat intoxication can be expected.

How, then, does one become acclimatized?

The process of acclimatization begins immediately on exposure to a climate hotter than that in which one is accustomed to living. Thus, it begins immediately on going from home into the street, or from the street to the beach. Each move to a hotter place makes further acclimatization necessary.

Acclimatization occurs best when there is short, intermittent exposure to heat over a four-day period. It is improved when there is some exercise associated with the exposure. Thus, if one goes to the beach, a one-to-three-mile walk twice a day—without further exposure to the sun for the four-day period—should insure acclimatization. Or, if the climate where a person is working should suddenly become hot, he should restrict his work, but not quit, for about four days to allow himself to become acclimatized.

Acclimatization is also aided by a good salt intake. It is a good idea to add more salt than usual to the food eaten during this period, unless there are other medical reasons not to do so.

To summarize briefly, a person is able to adjust to hot summer weather by a process of acclimatization. If this adjustment is not made, the person is susceptible to all the complications of heat intoxication, which could be fatal. Allow yourself to get used to the sun, and you can enjoy it safely.

Heat can affect a healthy person who has not become acclimatized to it in any one of three ways, each of which is serious and can be fatal.

First, it can produce what is known as "heat cramps." This condition sidelined a young tennis player whom I saw recently. He had developed severe cramping pains in the muscles of his legs, arms and back on the third day of a tournament. The weather had turned hot on the day before he was stricken. He had sweated profusely and drank a lot of water, but had taken no extra salt. Within half an hour of coming to the hospital, however, he was "cured" by the injection of a salt solution into his veins.

Heat cramps are caused by a low salt level in the blood. This condition is nearly always found in unacclimatized persons who have exerted themselves strenuously in hot weather, sweated a lot and consumed a great deal of water but no extra salt. The symptoms are cramping pains in the muscles which may be mild at first but which may become so severe that the arms and legs are drawn up tight from muscular spasm.

Heat cramps can be prevented by the taking of several shakes of salt with each meal during the day, or by taking several salt tablets an hour before, and during, strenuous physical exertion, unless, of course, your doctor had previously advised against your use of salt. If the cramps are merely mild, they may be treated by administering salt tablets and ceasing exercise, but if they are severe a doctor should be called.

THE second disorder that heat can cause is called "heat exhaustion." This is the most common of all heat ailments. Heat exhaustion is caused by a temporary low blood plasma, which needs to be increased to combat the hot weather. It can be prevented simply by "acclimatization," during which process the blood plasma increases.

In its most severe form, heat exhaustion causes fainting and loss of consciousness. These are best treated by keeping the head down, and elevating the legs, to restore consciousness. Rest and plenty of water and salt are generally prescribed by your doctor, who should be summoned promptly.

THE third, and by far the most serious, form of heat intoxication is "heat stroke," or "sun stroke." Of the three common heat ailments, this is the only one that causes death in a high percentage of cases. It, too, is found almost entirely in persons not acclimatized to heat, and is more common in older people and in alcoholics.

Heat stroke can occur when the temperature is as low as 90 degrees F., when the air is humid and close, but in dry climates it is rare unless the temperature hits 100 degrees. Persons have been stricken after exposures of only an hour or so, but is most common after being in the hot sun for three to four hours. Exertion through strenuous work or play will increase one's susceptibility, however.

The condition is caused by the sudden stopping of perspiration, which in turn prevents the body from losing its heat. The reason that an unacclimatized person may suddenly stop sweating on exposure to heat is not known. Such a person first begins to feel listless and weak, and then rapidly becomes unconscious and goes into a coma. He has a hot, dry skin, which may be pink or gray, and his temperature is usually above 106 degrees.

Needless to say, such a person needs medical attention promptly, and minutes can be life-saving. Packing the victim with ice, putting him in an ice bath, or rubbing him with ice or cold water until he can be transported to the hospital could be life-saving measures.

These three conditions — heat cramps, heat exhaustion and heat stroke—are similar in three respects: all are caused by heat; all are common in persons who have not taken the precaution of getting used to hot weather gradually; all are preventable by "acclimatization."

Modern Marriage

Does Wife Know Husband?

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

IT IS not easy to convince any wife that she doesn't understand her husband. Mr. M., however, thinks women carry this self-delusion too far.

"I get mighty tired of hearing my wife assert that she knows me better than I know myself," he informs me. "This confounded woman's intuition seems to have all women hypnotized. Won't you write a column, Dr. Popenoe, telling wives that they don't know anything like as much about their husbands as they think they do?"

It would be a safe enterprise, Mr. M. You and I can certainly agree privately with each other, and all other experienced husbands will agree with us, that wives are a little too sure of themselves in this respect. If they make an occasional lucky shot, they are convinced that they are expert sharpshooters and can't fail. Let's give them a tryout.

HERE IS A LIST of questions that any wife should be able to answer about her own husband:

1. What person, living or dead (wife excepted, of course), has had the most influence on his life, his mental development, and his ideals?
2. What size does he wear?
3. How many girls had he proposed to before he married you?
4. Where would he go on a vacation, if he were perfectly free to go anywhere he liked—without you?
5. Apart from the question of being in style, does he really prefer a single-breasted or a double-breasted coat?
6. How many buttons are on the coat he wore yesterday?
7. What is his favorite color?
8. How much does he usually pay for a necktie?
9. If he could, without any expense, join any one organization in the world, which would he choose?
10. If he could start life over again, what profession or work would he like to take up?

If a wife can answer eight out of these 10 questions, correctly, she has kept her eyes and ears open. If she can't answer more than half of them correctly, she is depending too much on woman's intuition.

Answers to Questions.

Q. WHAT IF a fellow wants to go out with girls, but his parents won't let him?

A. I don't know how old or mature you are; but in general, try to get some older person (Sunday school teacher or parents of a friend, etc.) to invite you as a starter. Have them take it up directly with your mother or father.

Q. I have seven children of my own, ranging from 14 years down to 3½. Relatives think I should also take care of their children, when the don't get along well. They want to pay me but I'm unable to stand the strain. They think I'm churlish. How can I prevent hard feelings?

A. Talk to your physician privately and ask him to lay down the law, loudly and uncompromisingly. You are already doing your full share.

Q. What can you do about a husband who is the soul of generosity so far as his children or charities are concerned, yet his wife never has a dollar she can go out and spend as she pleases?

A. Adopt a budget and work out a businesslike spending plan. Many banks and department stores offer skilled help for that purpose.

Q. Do you think an elopement is ever justified?

A. Oh yes, there are doubtless occasional exceptions. But as a rule it is a poor substitute for the usual procedure. American Institute of Family Relations, of which I am the Director, published details of 738 elopements. When due to family opposition, less than half turned out to be happy marriages.

Q. I'M in with the wrong crowd—harmless, but useless. How do I get out without leaving 100 per cent enemies behind?

A. The easiest way would be to get a job in a different place. Or, you could join a church in a different part of town and then explain that you were drawn into an active social life there and had to give up everything else. Appeal to some older person to help you by introducing you to some new friends. Or merely start out by yourself to look for some new groups or organizations into which you can fit more comfortably.

Q. For 12 years we had close friendship with a couple. One night they visited us, said goodby, and never came back. We have telephoned; nothing happens. We wonder if they are trying to drop us because they have made money. Should we try harder to revive this friendship?

A. What's the use, since they obviously don't want it.

Secrets of Charm

Hand Care for Summer

HANDS must take it as no other part of the body does, and hand skin is different enough to stand more than its share of exposure, water and soil.

Even so, hands need plenty of help. They may need it especially now that they must look as if they match all that soft, white skin that's been covered all winter, but shows so plainly in the new bathing suits, play suits, and baretop summer dresses.

DON'T STOP USING your hand lotion just because the weather's warm. Between washings with the soap that suits your hands best, use the lotion for its beauty-restoring oils. Use it lavishly and work it into your skin just as you do soap lather, then rinse your hands with cold water and pat them dry. Apply a second but very sparingly film of lotion to protect and smooth the skin.

Whenever possible, rub a little facial oil onto the backs of your hands, and once a week, give your hands a treatment with a little facial oil and a pair of old smooth-fitting cotton gloves.

Warm the corked bottle of facial oil in a bowl of hot water. Drop a tablespoon of warmed oil into your palm, then massage both hands gently, with special attention to the nail cuticle and the knuckles.

AFTERWARDS, pull on the gloves and go about your business for the next hour. You can shop, drive or do many household chores while giving your hands this beauty treatment.

Your hands, of course, will stand more sun without burning than the rest of you, but don't over-estimate them. There's a limit to how much they can take without becoming excessively dry and leathery.

Those neat pale or white cotton gloves that help so much to make a simple dress look right for town are also a beauty protection your hands may need.

A Change in Tactics by Jayne Mansfield

By Charles Mercer

NEW YORK, July 7 (AP).

NOT long ago a well-stacked blonde went into a shop on Madison avenue to buy a pair of stockings. By the time she reached the street about 200 people were milling around.

"What's going on?" asked a guy who was passing.

"Jayne Mansfield just left that store," a woman said excitedly.

Miss Mansfield is a phenomenon of this—or any—time. For some time she has been drawing crowds to the Broadway comedy, "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?"—which it hasn't yet. But Jayne Mansfield fan clubs have not sprung up around the country because of her starring role. It's more—or less—subtle than that.

For some time Miss Mansfield has been her own best press agent. If she didn't attend every cocktail party in Manhattan, she attended many. If she didn't have her more or less scantily clad likeness on every magazine cover in the country, she appeared on many. She also has made her presence felt as a guest on nearly every TV program from "Today" to "Tonight."

Now, at last, she is appearing in a dramatic role in a TV musical comedy—a spectacular, of course, Sunday evening, July 15. The vehicle, titled "The Bachelor," will appear on NBC-TV (at 6:30 p.m., St. Louis daylight time). Hal March, Carol Haney and Julie Wilson are featured with Miss Mansfield.

JAYNE MANSFIELD . . . SHE'S "LAUNCHED ON A NEW POLICY OF DON'T DO ANYTHING."

An idly curious fellow went up to see her the other day in her apartment to discuss her past, present and future. Miss Mansfield, barefoot and wearing a playsuit, stretched on a divan pinning her golden tresses. The fellow sat in a chair making notes. The scene was reminiscent of a psychiatric seance. Except it was more public. Miss Mansfield's small daughter by a fractured marriage played with a doll in a corner. Her four dogs and a white rabbit played on the floor. And one or another of two maids passed constantly to answer a constantly ringing phone.

"My whole career has been revamped," said Miss Mansfield. "I'm launched on a new policy of don't do anything. Now I'm turning down everything—cocktail parties and guest appearances and all that. I'm only doing the big things. I have my Broadway role and I have my daughter and I'm studying ballet and drama and taking voice lessons. I got where I am by promoting myself. But not any more. I don't miss the parties at all."

She is interested in more television roles. Movie companies are making advances to her. She is reading a couple of new plays. But Hollywood appeals to her most of all.

Designing Woman

Deep Set Drapery

By Elizabeth Hillyer

THE hanging of drapery on the wall instead of directly on the window so often solves window treatment problems. Problems of letting in enough light particularly, and this is true of the window wall that has two or three deep set windows like these.

Drapery hung at the glass could not be opened wide enough. Hung on rods which range afar on the wall just above the windows, the drapery can be pushed away from the windows entirely, to cover nothing but the strips of wall between them.

Cafe curtains give the windows finish and provide privacy if it is needed. The entire areas of upper glass are uncovered to let in the best light, which always does come from above.

Traverse rods can be rigged for this treatment exactly, and to open and close one window at a time as well as all three.

'Miracle' of Rehabilitation

By Dickson Terry

It Came to Pass When Dick Dahms, Once Regarded as 'Hopeless Cripple,' Stepped Forward to Get Missouri U. Law Degree; Aided by State Rehabilitation Division

DICK DAHMS, LEFT, PACKS FOR LAST TIME IN HIS DORMITORY ROOM AT MISSOURI UNIVERSITY AFTER HIS GRADUATION FROM LAW SCHOOL AS ONE OF THE TOP 10 IN HIS CLASS. ON HAND TO SEE HIM OFF IS PETE ELLIOTT, HIS VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION COUNSELOR AND CLOSE FRIEND.

TO the people of Deepwater, Mo., a town of 956 people in the western part of the state, the name of Dick Dahms is proof that miracles can happen.

Dick was a familiar sight for a number of years around Deepwater, his distinction being that he was, as they used to say, "a hopeless cripple." The people remember him first as a little tyke whose legs were so badly malformed and useless that he scooted himself along the ground with his hands. Later he had a short pair of crutches with which, along with some help from one twisted foot, he made his way around.

He was a handsome boy, bright and eager and crazy about sports. Any kind of sports. But there wasn't much future for a cripple whose parents were not well off, and who lived in a little town where expert medical help was not readily available. By the time he had reached his teens, Dick Dahms's future seemed a foregone conclusion.

But on June 6 this year, which was graduation day at the University of Missouri, Dick, wearing a cap and gown, stepped forward and received a Doctor of Laws degree. And when he stepped forward, he did so without the aid of even a cane, let alone a pair of crutches.

Not only that but he graduated in the top 10 of his class, and was selected by Attorney General John Dalton for a job as one of his assistants. And some time next month, he plans to be married.

To a couple of men named Joy Talley and Pete Elliott the story of Dick Dahms is something of a miracle, too, as well as the source of a great deal of satisfaction, both personal and professional. They can add the case of Dahm to the histories of several thousand other handicapped people who have been helped by the State Vocational Rehabilitation Division, of which Talley is director and Elliott a counselor.

The Vocational Rehabilitation Division is a little known agency which does a big job. Since it was started in Missouri in 1934 is has helped nearly 20,000 handicapped persons find a place in the world.

IT is a combined state and Federal program, which was started by the Government in 1920, mainly as a program to help veterans of the first World War. The law made possible a civilian program for states which passed an acceptance act. Missouri didn't pass such an act until 1934.

However, the history of vocational rehabilitation in Missouri goes back some 30 years to the day when Miss Julia Alsberg, a pioneer in the field, started the first such service in St. Louis. Miss Alsberg, who for many years conducted the vocational counseling service for the Red Cross, and who now is director of Vocational Counseling Service of Greater St. Louis, started the first such service here as a Red Cross project.

Miss Alsberg got the Red Cross, the state and the Federal Government to put up $10,000 each, and hers was the only program of vocational rehabilitation in the state, until the Missouri Department of Education, in 1934, decided to offer the service on a state-wide basis.

Joy Talley, state director, is a middle-aged man with graying hair and an air of gentle dignity. He has only one arm, having lost his left arm in an accident in his boyhood, but he refers to himself as a case of "disability without handicap." He is a college graduate, former school principal at Reeds Spring, Mo., and head of the Rehabilitation Division since 1943.

The division employs 42 professional workers and 26 clerical workers. Its headquarters are in Jefferson City, with five district offices, situated at St. Louis, Kansas City, Cape Girardeau, Springfield and Hannibal.

Among the professional workers are 24 counselors, whose job it is to contact persons in every county of the state who might be eligible for the service. The only qualifications for an applicant is that he or she must be at least 16 years old, the employable age. There is no maximum age limit.

THE counselors visit schools, hospitals, employment agencies, crippled children societies, and all welfare agencies, to let them know what service is available. Most doctors also are familiar with the program, as are many insurance men and service clubs, such as Rotary and Kiwanis.

The procedure is simple. Take, for example, John Doe, who has a crippled hand. Once he has been referred to the division, he is assigned to a counselor who first consults with him, then visits with him in his home to learn something of his background and environment.

One of the first steps is to determine the extent of the handicap, and here the division leans to the idea that if a man feels himself handicapped, he is handicapped. At least psychologically, and needs help.

Arrangements are then made to have him examined by one of the many doctors in the state who serve as medical consultants.

"One of the things we want to find out, even more than how great his handicap is, is how much he has left to work with," Talley explained.

Arrangements are made for treatment, which will include surgery if it is indicated. Also any physical aids he may need, such as braces, artificial limbs and the like are provided. Which, Talley said, brings up one of the questions most often asked: Who pays the bill? And is the program only for indigents?

The answer is, the program is for anybody who needs it. They can pay what they are able to pay. If they are unable to pay anything, Vocational Rehabilitation pays the bills.

When his physical disabilities have been corrected so far as possible, John Doe is ready to consider the matter of learning a job. Sometimes people are learning to work for the first time, having considered themselves too badly handicapped to try to work. At other times, because of disabling accidents, people have to give up their work or profession, and find something they are equipped to do.

IF a man or woman has had enough education, he or she may enter the professional field. If, for instance, John Doe has had a high school education, and is a man with intelligence and drive, there are many things he can be trained for, such as accountant, stenographer or any of the various clerical jobs. If such is the case, John Doe probably will be sent to a business college for training.

If, on the other hand, his background qualifies him for skilled manual work, and he is physically able to do it, he will be sent to a trade school.

When he has completed his training, his counselor will help him find a job. Many industries and businesses co-operate with the division and with the State Employment Service to help place the handicapped. In fact, Vocational Rehabilitation will even see that a person gets tools, if he needs them.

Even after he is on the job, his counselor is still available to help him iron out any difficulties, psychological or otherwise, which may arise. Eventually the day comes when the case of John Doe is closed, and he is on his own.

In 1955, the division served 4396 persons, closed the files on 1177 as rehabilitated. The total cost came to $582,002.71, of which the state paid $203,598.21, and the Federal Government $378,404.50.

The average age of those rehabilitated was 37, the average years of schooling, nine. A total of 165 had never worked before, 692 had about half-time employment, and the rest had less than half time or none at all.

JOY TALLEY, DIRECTOR OF THE STATE VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION DIVISION, WHICH SINCE IT WAS STARTED IN MISSOURI IN 1934 HAS HELPED NEARLY 20,000 HANDICAPPED PERSONS TO FIND A PLACE IN THE WORLD.

Most of the cases were orthopedic in nature. More than 200 were amputees. Another 200 or more had some impairment of either arms or legs, or both. Other impairments included back and spine injuries, bad eyesight, poor hearing, epilepsy, heart trouble, and total or partial deafness. Three cases, handicapped because of facial deformity, were rehabilitated by plastic surgery.

Of those helped last year, 60 are now in professional occupations, 26 in semi-professional jobs, 21 in managerial positions, 224 in clerical and sales jobs. Others are in domestic service, protective service (night watchmen, guards, etc.), and building services, while 145 of them are in agricultural and kindred occupations.

BUT the most revealing statistic of all, for evaluating the services of the division is this: The estimated annual earnings of those helped was $296,920 before rehabilitation. After rehabilitation it was $2,013,284; an increase of 678 per cent.

Most cases require a year, or maybe two, of rehabilitation help. Rarely does a case take as long as did that of Dick Dahms, which officially started in 1948, when Dick was 16 years old and eligible for the program, but which actually started when he was just a little boy.

One of the people of Deepwater who knew the crippled youngster then was Joy Talley. He had gone to school with Dick's father and they were good friends. Talley went away to college and when he finished he never went back to Deepwater to live. When he became head of the division of Vocational Rehabilitation, he remembered Dick Dahms. He got in touch with the boy's parents, and with the principal of his school. But they had to wait until he was 16 years old to be eligible for the program.

In the meantime, the boy had been taken to two orthopedic specialists, both of whom had tried to help him, without success. They had recommended, finally, that both his legs be amputated, and that he be fitted with artificial legs. The parents refused.

When Pete Elliott, tall, athletic counselor for the division, took the case in 1948, he found both parents discouraged and apprehensive. Even Dick had resigned himself to a life as a cripple.

Elliott had referred the case to Dr. Nicholas Pickard, a well known orthopedic surgeon in Kansas City.

"Dick and his parents finally agreed to go and talk to Dr. Pickard, if I would go along with them," Elliott related. "Dr. Pickard talked to them all one afternoon. They finally agreed to let him try. You see, Dick had never stood upright in his life, and he didn't believe he ever would."

THE task which confronted Dr. Pickard was almost without precedent in his experience. He found that, whereas a normal leg has two bones below the knee, the tibia and the fibula, Dick's legs had only one. In one leg he had a tibia, in the other a fibula. Both feet were malformed and far out of line with the ankles, the right leg was some eight inches shorter than the left, and in the left leg the bones of the upper and lower leg failed to meet at the knee and the kneecap was twisted to one side.

There started a series of operations which were to last more than four years. When Dick graduated from high school, Elliott got him to enroll in Central Missouri State College at Warrensburg. The operations were spread with months in between, to allow Dick to go to school, and to build up his strength between operations.

At Warrensburg his personality as well as his body began to show signs of change. He had been somewhat inhibited as a small boy. In college he began to take part in student activities, became manager of both the football and the basketball teams, which helped him overcome his feeling of frustration about actively participating in sports.

In fact, his devotion to sports was so great that he was determined, while going to school at Warrensburg, to become an athletic coach. It took a lot of counseling by Pete Elliott to talk him out of this.

WHEN he got his Bachelor of Science degree from Warrensburg, he wanted to go out and earn a living. Elliott let him find out for himself. He went to Kansas City and started applying for jobs, and he soon learned, from bitter experience, that a man on crutches has a strike or two against him, even with a college diploma and high honors.

It was then that Elliott steered him toward law. That was in the summer of 1953, which was memorable for another reason. Early that summer, Dr. Pickard had performed his fifth and final operation.

With the help of a specially made extension which fit his right leg, which was still some six inches shorter than the other, Dick stood erect for the first time. At first he had to walk with crutches. He was going to school that summer, so he practiced all summer walking without the aid of anything.

Late in the summer of 1953 he went home and, both literally and figuratively, walked in on his parents.

"I thought my mother was going to faint when she saw me," Dick recalls. "It was quite a moment for all of us."

In his second year in law school Dick stood second in his class. Starting his third and final year he got a job as assistant instructor.

It was then that he and Pete Elliott shook hands. With the job he would be able to pay his own way through the last year of law school, and as far as need of counsel was concerned, it was plain to see that Dick Dahms was able to stand on his own two feet.

Bluebloods All

Minutes Of the Meeting

By Art Buchwald

PARIS.

THE annual meeting of the International Set was held again on Sunday at the Pre Catelan, immediately following Aly Khan's Grand Prix party. This party, one of the most beautiful of the year, is made up of the creme of all European society, bluebloods one and all, aristocrats of the first water, titled persons from every walk of life and then some; statesmen, ambassadors, dowagers and half the bankers on the continent. Also present were horse owners, an occasional trainer and our wife, all of whom added to the gayety and fun of the evening.

It was after this affair that the serious business of the International Set was attended to. As recording secretary of the club, we naturally can't report everything that was said, but here are some of the highlights.

A resolution was passed censuring the Birmingham Small Arms Company for the way they fired Sir Bernard Docker. The Dockers were one of the mainstays of the International Set and their exploits in London, Paris, Cannes and Monte Carlo were legendary. One of the reasons given for kicking Sir Bernard off the board was that he tried to charge off a gold lame dress and a mink stole worth 8000 pounds to the company. Several members of the Set pointed out they had charged off a lot more than that to their companies, all still remained chairmen of their boards.

THE RESOLUTION read: "We, the members of the International Set, were shocked at the ouster of Sir Bernard Docker from the Birmingham Small Arms Company, maker of our Daimlers. Sir Bernard as well as Lady Docker have contributed much to the encouragement of good cheer and innocent international fun.

"Lady Docker's coverage of the Monaco wedding, her promotion of the game of marbles in England and her scientific discovery that mink was too hot to be used as automobile seat covers (she replaced hers with leopard skin) are things that the International Set will never forget. We therefore call on the Birmingham Small Arms Company to reconsider their harsh, undemocratic gesture and to put the Dockers back where they belong. Unless Sir Bernard and Lady Docker are restored the members of the International Set will buy their small arms elsewhere."

Miss Elsa Maxwell was commended by the group for canceling her ball this year in Paris because of the trouble in Algeria. Instead of a ball to which 350 people were invited, Miss Maxwell felt the seriousness of the political situation was such that she would hold a dinner party instead, to which only 220 close friends were invited. An orchestra would be on hand for dancing, but Miss Maxwell instructed the leader to play the music quietly and to keep the cha-chas down to a minimum.

Miss Maxwell denied that the reason she had only invited a very few British people to her party was because of the Cyprus situation (since her cruise she has become a strong friend of Greece), but said that because she had to cut down on the invitation list she felt her French friends and foreign ambassadors should get priority.

Several Britons walked out of the meeting.

The question of using water pistols in night clubs was brought up. In a recent fracas at L'Elephant Blanc, a New York society columnist and a Spanish marquis engaged in fisticuffs after someone at the table shot a water pistol at somebody else's girl. The use of water pistols by members of the International set was deplored by almost unanimous vote and a resolution was passed suggesting the L'Elephant Blanc and other Paris night clubs require clients to check their pistols at the door.

AN ALTERNATE resolution to prohibit the serving of water at the tables was voted down when it was pointed out that if water wasn't served some members might substitute Scotch in their pistols, which was three times as lethal.

A resolution against higher taxes in France was passed without debate.

The meeting was adjourned at five in the morning and several members were tabled until the following day.

Art and Artists

For a Regional Architecture

By William K. Wyant Jr.

FORMER Dean Buford L. Pickens of the Washington University School of Architecture has a word for buildings of which he disapproves. The word is "corn." It applies to the weak, the meretricious and the slavish in architecture. Pickens thinks there would be less ugliness in the world if the public had a lower boiling point, esthetically.

One way of informing the public on what architects are trying to do is by means of such exhibits as the one that will be on view through July 30 at City Art Museum. The exhibit was organized by the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Pickens, who recently became chairman of the university's campus planning committee, said yesterday he hoped a great many people would see the show.

His point was that good modern architecture simply had to have, in a democracy at least, the encouragement of sympathetic laymen who would put up the money and go along with new ideas. In his opinion, it is about time Americans developed a regional architecture suited to their own particular climate and needs. He has devoted considerable attention to St. Louis's problem in this regard.

"IN THE LAST generation we have absorbed a tremendous influence from European architects, for the most part as a result of the architects themselves coming to this country," Pickens said. "So-called modern architecture is the only architecture that is creative, rather than imitative, and it has reached the point where it cries for regional expression."

The Washington University official, who directed the College of Architecture at Tulane University before coming to St. Louis in 1953, observed that a recent Time magazine cover story about Eero Saarinen, Finnish-born American architect, printed the photographs of seven other "Twentieth Century Form Givers."

Of the seven, Pickens pointed out, only two, Frank Lloyd Wright and Wallace K. Harrison, were American born. Four of the remaining five, however, live and work in the United States. They are Walter A. Gropius, Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, Marcel Breuer and Richard Neutra. The exception is Le Corbusier, the French architect, who has had a strong influence in this country but never has lived here.

While fully recognizing the contribution made by great Europeans, Pickens emphasized that many of the major figures, having moved to America and been here for many years, could be regarded as American now. He said inspiration in the future would have to be less dependent on influences beyond the seas.

"AMERICANS HAVE done as much as they can with these elements from abroad," he said. "From now on, it's going to be up to our own creative capacity. These architects have run their course. We must look around and draw on our own talent."

It is a theory of the historian Toynbee that the health of a culture is indicated by the way people respond to a new challenge. Applying this to architecture, Pickens said that when architecture faced the problems of a new age, it was fresh and alive, but when it devoted itself to copying the past, it betrayed decadence.

In Pickens's opinion, St. Louis cannot afford complacence despite the excellence of City Art Museum exhibits. The dean said the new St. Louis airport terminal was already internationally famous, in addition to which the area has some fine modern churches and a relatively few examples of first-class modern school design. Elsewhere he found much to criticize.

There still is too much "ancestor worship" in St. Louis construction, and too little vocal, aggressive leadership by the creative minority, Pickens told the Post-Dispatch. By "creative minority," he meant the group of people who have had the advantages of wealth and education and who, in any community, are the people who set the tone.

PICKENS DENOUNCED as "poor taste" the imitations of colonial buildings in some St. Louis suburbs, and called for a regional architecture suited to this region's needs. He was strongly critical of some new city schools built by the St. Louis Board of Education, which designs its own. He said the structures were "inept modern" and reflected the city's failure to take advantage of competitive architectural design.

As for architecture and climate, Pickens said he had not lived for seven years in New Orleans, which also has hot and humid weather, without learning a thing or two.

"People in St. Louis seem to think they are living in a northern climate," he said. "They should catch on to the fact that this is a tropical or sub-tropical climate. We have more in common with New Orleans than with Chicago or Cleveland. The old French who came to these parts as settlers showed more sense than we do—they built their houses with overhanging eaves and all-around porches."

Pickens is now building himself a house in St. Louis county. It will have a roof with a wide overhang and other climatic adaptations. One of his objectives is to prove that it is possible to live comfortably through a St. Louis summer without air-conditioning.

'The Great Waltz' Next at Muny Opera

PRINCIPALS OF "THE GREAT WALTZ," THE VIENNESE MUSICAL USING THE WALTZES OF THE JOHANN STRAUSSES, FATHER AND SON, WHICH WILL BE REVIVED TOMORROW NIGHT AT MUNICIPAL OPERA. FROM LEFT, MURIEL O'MALLEY AS THE PASTRY SHOP PROPRIETRESS, THEODOR UPPMAN AS STRAUSS, FILS, PEGGY BONINI AS RESI, GEORGE GAYNES AS STRAUSS, PERE, AND CLARAMAE TURNER AS THE COUNTESS OLGA BARANSKAJA.

"THE GREAT WALTZ," the operetta with music adapted from the famous waltzes written by Johann Strauss, Sr. and Jr., will be given its sixth production by Municipal Opera during the week beginning tomorrow night. The musical, with book by Moss Hart, the playwright, and lyrics by Desmond Carter, was first given on the Forest Park stage in 1937. It was revived in 1940, 1943, 1946, and in 1951 for two weeks.

The story, based essentially on fact, tells how the elder Johann Strauss, an eminent composer and conductor, bitterly opposes his son following in his footsteps. But Johann, Jr. rises to fame anyway. Encouraged by his beautiful pupil, Resi, and his patroness, Countess Olga Baranskaja, he finally conducts his own orchestra in his own works and is hailed as the new waltz king of Vienna.

The songs included are "Tales of the Vienna Woods," "Like a Star in the Sky," "With All My Heart," "Morning," "You Are My Songs," "Love Will Find You," "While You Love Me," "Love's Never Lost," "For We Love You Still," and "Love and War"—in other words, the Viennese waltz and love were not exactly antagonistic. The closing scene will be, of course, the playing of "On The Beautiful Blue Danube."

Theodor Uppman, baritone, will play Johann, Jr. George Gaynes will be Johann, Sr. Peggy Bonini, soprano, will be Resi, and Claramae Turner, contralto, will play the Countess.

Miss Turner played Nettie Fowler in the current movie production of "Carousel." She sang leading roles with the Metropolitan Opera, was soloist with the NBC symphony, and sang in the Broadway production of Menotti's "The Medium."

Uppman sang the title role in the world premiere of Britten's opera, "Billy Budd," in London in 1951. He went with the Met the following year, and sang leads in "Pelleas et Melisande" and "The Magic Flute." He appeared in "The Merry Widow" on television.

Miss Bonini is a leading singer of the New York City Opera Company. She sang an aria and a duet with Mario Lanza in the 1952 film, "Because You're Mine." Gaynes, who was starred last summer in Muny Opera in "The Merry Widow," and "Wonderful Town," was a bass-baritone after World War II at opera houses in Mulhouse and Strasbourg in Alsace. He came to New York to sing with the New York City Opera, and was featured in the Broadway production of Menotti's "The Consul." He also played on Broadway in Cole Porter's "Out of This World," and in "Wonderful Town" opposite Rosalind Russell.

Patricia Bowman will be the prima ballerina. Muriel O'Malley will be Greta, the pastry shop proprietress. Others in the cast will be Oliver Cliff, Emile Renan, Roy Urhausen, Robert Cosden, Joseph Cusanelli, Gene Varrone and Vince Vernon, all regulars in the Muny Opera company.

"Hit the Deck," the Vincent Youmans musical comedy, will be given its final performance at 8:30 o'clock tonight. It features Betty Kean, Mark Dawson, Paula Stewart, Horace McMahon and Lou Wills, Jr.

'Bellevue Is My Home' Bought By Fox

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.

The motion picture bidding for "Bellevue Is My Home," a book of hospital reminiscences, written by Dr. Salvatore R. Cutolo in collaboration with Barbara and Arthur Gelb, has been concluded with Twentieth Century-Fox buying film rights for an undisclosed price. Gelb is a member of the New York Times drama staff and Dr. Cutolo is deputy medical superintendent at the venerable infirmary. Gelb drew upon his experiences as a hospital reporter covering Bellevue to write the book.

Dr. Cutolo's recollections are due to be published soon by Doubleday. The story was recently serialized in the Saturday Evening Post. Fox has not yet formulated any production plans for the property.

Kim Novak to Play Jeanne Eagles

HOLLYWOOD, July 7 — The title role of Columbia Pictures' "The Jeanne Eagles Story" has been given to Kim Novak, the studio confirmed today. The biographical film on the career of the late, famous New York stage actress, has been tentatively set for an early fall start. Daniel Fuchs is currently writing the screen play.

Tennessee Valley Transition in Film

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—The transition of the Tennessee Valley from its 1929 agricultural status to its World War II semi-industrial blooming will be the subject of a motion picture to be made by Elia Kazan, the director. Late this year or early next, Kazan will take William Bradford Huie's book, "Mud On The Star," originally published by Duell, Sloan & Pearce in 1942, as the basis for his feature. He announced acquisition of the screen rights to the novel today.

The story, told in terms of the people in the Tennessee Valley, will be produced by Kazan's independent company, Newton Productions, Inc. A screen writer will be assigned to adapt the drama to scenario form.

Local Talent at Forest Park Highlands

Local talent will be featured on the Forest Park Highlands outdoor stage this week, with a show provided by a school of dancing. The dancers will range from youngsters to adults. Along with the dance exhibitions, Frank Miller's orchestra will offer concerts each night and Sunday afternoon.

At the Movies

By Myles Standish

THE GREAT LOCOMOTIVE CHASE—Walt Disney does a recreation of an 1862 Civil War raid by 22 Union agents on a vital Southern railway. Interesting more for its factual basis than for any excitement or suspense that it generates. With Fess Parker as leader of the raiders and Jeffrey Hunter as the tenacious conductor of the stolen train who frustrates the plot. ORPHEUM.

SANTIAGO—A typical Alan Ladd action melodrama, very lively if not realistic, in which the calculated Ladd formula has him as a good-bad guy, a mercenary arms runner to the Cuban patriots in the revolt against Spain, whose essentially noble qualities come out. With Lloyd Nolan as a greasy rival and Rossana Podesta as an idealistic Cuban inspiration. FOX.

TRAPEZE—A perfect circus picture by Director Carol Reed, in which he has filled his wide CinemaScope screen with tumultuous action and gaudy color. Beautiful camera work by Robert Krasker of the trapeze sequences which highlight a triangle among the aerialist team of Burt Lancaster, Tony Curtis and Gina Lollobrigida, in which sex breaks up a high-flying act. LOEW'S STATE.

THAT CERTAIN FEELING—Bob Hope in a light-comedy change of pace, from the Broadway play, "King of Hearts," in which he is a mousy assistant to a comic strip star. It's pretty weak until its final wild farcical climax. Eva Marie Saint is enchanting and the Vista-Vision is perfect. ST. LOUIS.

THE NAKED CITY—Return of the realistic, exciting detective picture of 1948 in which a semi-documentary technique is used to show the patient workings of the New York police force after a killer. With Barry Fitzgerald, Don Taylor. Also another reissue, BRUTE FORCE, from 1947, in which a story about a bloody prison mutiny confuses a crude exposition of brutality with powerful drama. In bad taste. With Burt Lancaster, Yvonne De Carlo, Hume Cronyn. MISSOURI.

MARTY and SUMMERTIME—A really good reissue bill with Ernest Borgnine in his Oscar-winning role in the first as a homely Bronx butcher who finds love. The second has Katharine Hepburn as a lonely spinster who encounters romance and wisdom in a beautifully photographed Venice. RICHMOND.

SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD—A rather uninspired travelogue in Cinerama. AMBASSADOR.

'Walk With the Devil'

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—Columbia Pictures has purchased screen rights to "Walk With the Devil," a 1950 novel by Elliot Arnold. The story line concerns an American Army officer in Italy during World War II who is forced to call on his brother, a deported gangster, for help in blowing up an enemy bridge. No production plans had been formulated.

'The Sun Also Rises'

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—Another motion picture adaptation of a Hemingway story, Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Sun Also Rises," has been set for a starting date. Charles Clarke, cinematographer, leaves today for Pamplona, Spain, where his camera will record a bull fight fiesta there on that date.

'Island in the Sky'

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—Negotiations have been concluded for Robert Rossen to direct "Island in the Sky," Darryl F. Zanuck's first independent production for 20th Century-Fox release. Rossen is understood to be already at work on the script, to be based on the Alec Waugh novel, in collaboration with Alfred Hayes. Present plans call for ten week's photography in the Bahama Islands starting in October, to be followed by several weeks' interior work in London.

Before Zanuck left for Europe to lay the groundwork for his overseas shooting schedule, he made plans to talk to Yul Brynner in London about playing Joseph Stalin in "The Secret Crimes of Joseph Stalin." The studio reports that still photographs of Brynner in complete makeup as the late dictator had already been taken and that prospects for his playing the role in Zanuck's third production were good.

TV Program Changes

TELEVISION programs for the week are carried in the TV Magazine with today's Post-Dispatch. Following is information received after TV Magazine went to press:

11 p.m. Tuesday on KWK-TV: "Famous Playhouse" replaced by "The Vise," moved from 11 p.m. Friday when "Famous Playhouse" will be presented.

9:30 p.m. Saturday on KTVI: "High Finance" quiz program; Dennis James, master of ceremonies. Replaces "Joe Palooka."

Jockey Schoolteacher

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—The situation of a school teacher whose pupils are mostly jockeys has tickled the R.K.O. Radio Pictures' funnybone, and the studio has purchased Adele Rogers St. Johns' Cosmopolitan Magazine story that details the school marm's problems.

R.K.O. has turned over the comedy, titled "Sex and Miss McAdoo," to Arthur Lubin, a producer who is no stranger to comedy. He made many of the "Francis" talking mule farces. The production is tentatively scheduled to next year with William Bowers writing the scenario. Lubin must get his next film, "Escape In Japan" completed before he can turn to thoughts of school teachers and race track pilots. "Escape In Japan" starts photography on Oct. 1, in Japan.

Unusual People on Giveaways

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, July 7. BACK when I was a boy, if you wanted to dig up some real screwball characters, you took to the open road and the hobo camps or you prowled around Bowery saloons, or maybe the horse parks. Or you read Dickens. Now things are much easier. You want to meet some real unusual people, you just turn on a giveaway. In fact, if Dickens were still alive, he could save himself a lot of trouble. Instead of investigating the byways of London, as he loved to do, he could just turn on television.

Dickens might not have encountered Micawber on "Do You Trust Your Wife" (or the like) again he might have since that sort of get-rich-quick scheme could have appealed strongly to Micawber) but he would have run across Elmer "Elbows" Anderson and his wife "Moose." They earn their living as villains in a roller derby, a highly specialized occupation that didn't exist in Dickens's day. Come to think of it, it seems fairly preposterous that it should exist in our day. But it does and there they were on "Do You Trust Your Wife." Sooner or later the giveaways are going to dig 'em all up and then where do we go?

A PLAYWRIGHT or novelist could fill a script with the characters he pulls right off the TV screen. Just the other night — and for several weeks before that on "The $64,000 Question" — James Young, a railroad brakeman, wrestled with the mysteries of European history which could have afforded any writer plenty of time to wrestle with the secrets of Mr. Young. Bearded, taciturn, frozen-faced, Mr. Young—besides wallowing in European history — likes to play chess through the mail, is trying to learn how to play the organ and has an apartment full of toy trains. And he doesn't like girls. If that isn't enough for the budding Hemingways to get started on, they'll have to look at their own TV sets; I got problems enough.

Seems to me, though, that Young would make an excellent outline for one of those eccentric detectives who is a storehouse of useless information—the kind that S. S. Van Dine used to give us. Mr. Young, incidentally, is not quite a storehouse of all information. He went down swinging at the $16,000 question—"My center is giving way. My right is pushed back. Excellent! I'll attack"—which he ascribed to Napoleon instead of another Frenchman, Marshal Foch.

HAL MARCH . . . HE CAN GET AWAY WITH THEM.

Another character who has been possibly a little too well salted is Peter Freuchen who gamboled for weeks on the same show. Like Young, Freuchen—no stranger to television—is bearded; like Young he is a dead-pan artist; like Young his normal pursuits are decidedly unusual; but unlike Young he's not at all taciturn. When asked which of Magellan's five ships was the only one to get all the way around the world, he not only supplied that information but insisted on telling what happened to the other four.

Concerning an island that blew up in 1883 in the greatest explosion of modern times, he furnished five times as much history as he was asked. He wasn't asked anything at all about his experience in Greenland but he managed to interject that he foiled a band of wolves by singing to them in a voice so horrible they took to their heels. Of course, there is a school of thought that holds that Freuchen is already a literary creation, that he leaves nothing to the novelist's imagination, that it might be better to parboil him a little to get some of the salt out, to unwrite him rather than the other way around.

THAT CRITICISM might be leveled at a great many of the quiz contestants; they're just plain implausible. Hal March can get away with them—but could William Faulkner whose own characters are not exactly noted for their ordinariness? That 10-year-old boy on "The Big Surprise" who knew more about the Stock Market than experts who've worked down there for years: who is going to believe that?

The other night on "Do You Trust Your Wife," there was a guy who had spent 10 years building a marvelously intricate machine that doesn't do anything. Cogs turn. Flywheels fly. Sprockets sprock. Widgets widget. It's a hell of a thing to watch—but it has no purpose whatsoever. Except that it runs. Well, if I were a mystery writer in search of a psychopatic killer — and what whodunit writer isn't?—well there's this guy, see, who's building, year in and year out, this machine in the garage because he knows that the minute he stops or the machine stops, he'll kill somebody. And then one night it stops. . . . Take it from there, men.

One of my favorite Dickensian characters of the moment is 75-year-old Mabel Gertrude Morris who happens to be a towering authority on Dickens ("$64,000 Challenge"). Her particular distinction is not her knowledge of Dickens but the fact that she lives at the Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews and is having the time of her life there. Wouldn't live anywhere else.

Kantor Story

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—Paul Gregory will produce "On My Honor," based on the Mackinley Kantor novel, "God and My Country" as his second R.K.O. production. Gregory's initial for the studio under a five-picture contract signed recently will be "The Naked and the Dead." The adaptation of the Norman Mailer war novel has an early fall starting date.

William Dozier, production head of R.K.O., in announcing the project stated that negotiations were underway with Bing Crosby to play a civic-minded Boy Scout troop leader in a small midwestern city. Gwen Bagni and Irwin Gielgud have been signed to write the scenario.

A Worried Grandmother

Her Granddaughter Imposes on Mother

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I AM worried about my daughter's health. She has been a widow for years and reared several children by herself, thinking that when they grew up they would help her. Her daughter at 17 married a boy of 18 and in less than a year she became a mother. Her husband is in the Army and they were not married here. My daughter did not give her consent. The young mother brought her baby to my daughter's home and when my daughter comes home from work, tired and needing rest, she takes care of the child evenings and on weekends while her daughter goes out with her teen-age friends. My daughter's home seems to be a meeting place. She complains but it does no good. She knows she is imposed on but she feels sorry for the baby. When she says she is tired and would like to have some time for herself, her daughter says that is only an excuse. I know if this continues my daughter will have a nervous breakdown. The child's father has two more years in service. Martha, what is the solution to such a problem as this? WORRIED GRANDMOTHER.

The solution as I see it is for your daughter to have enough backbone to refuse to be imposed upon. She can merely state that she is too weary to baby-sit and that other arrangements will have to be made. She can say she is going out with friends of her own or inviting friends in but that she cannot be responsible for the baby. Granted, she doesn't want the infant to suffer, but by the same token why should she be made a slave or, rather, make a slave of herself? A few kind but firm refusals to be victimized by such thoughtlessness will make this young mother realize she'll have to take over the responsibility for her own child's welfare.

Dear Martha:

● MY HUSBAND'S YOUNGER SISTER is not a very attractive girl and hasn't many beaux. But in her work, she is invited to a number of parties to which she must bring an escort. She is always asking him to find one of his friends to take her and it embarrasses him because although he loves his sister he realizes that she's no Miss America and he hates to put his friends on the spot by asking them to date her. What do you think he should do? MARGE.

I agree that he shouldn't be asked to take advantage of his friends by inviting them to squire his sister except on very rare occasions when he especially wants to do something for her and can find a man who would be good company and would enjoy knowing her for good qualities other than beauty alone. I think he can be quite frank in saying that he just doesn't know many fellows who aren't married or engaged. She'll have to learn to stand on her own feet when it comes to snagging a beau.

Dear Martha:

● I AM 27 YEARS OLD and live at home with my parents. I have been dating for the past 10 years, but my mother is so critical of every boy I go with that finally I give him up in disgust. She criticizes such little things, their choice of clothes, the fact they aren't as tall as I, the kind of jobs they have, the amount of salary she thinks they might be making, the schools they went to, the neighborhoods they live in, the church they go to. What in the world can I do? If this keeps up, I'll be an old maid for sure, and a mean-tempered one at that. JANE.

We have enough mean-tempered folks in this world already without adding another to the list. So hang on and don't let it turn you into a bitter soul. Your mother can use some straight-from-the-shoulder talking about character and quality and reputation and ambition and gentleness and a few other attributes that mean a lot more than fancy clothes or wealthy neighborhoods. The next time you find someone you care about, make it plain to your mother that you are happy with your choice and will not welcome any foolish criticism. Just be careful not to choose too hastily or settle for less than the best in order to get away from her constant fault-finding.

Dear Martha:

● I AM A GIRL in my late teens. I ride the bus every day and I have noticed a certain young man rides the same bus. He is very attractive and well mannered. I am wondering how I can get introduced to him. Y.B.D.G.

How do you know he isn't married? How do you know he isn't engaged? And what do you know about his character? The fact that he is attractive and well mannered doesn't mean he's (1) available; (2) interested in meeting girls on the bus; (3) a gentleman. If you happen to have a mutual friend who can introduce you, well and good. Otherwise, stick to people you know something about and forget the strangers.

Dear Martha:

● I AM A GIRL almost 14 years old. I used to pal around with another girl who is going to be 15 and another who is about a month younger than I. A few months ago the older girl started going to parties which usually turned out to be a place to neck. I went to a party where she was and I heard some of the boys snickering about her. Because I didn't do as she did, she called me a square and also said some mean things about my mother. Now the younger girl is following in her footsteps. Do you have any comments on this matter? A SQUARE.

It's no fun to be called a square, but young people who have learned to stand up for what they believe is right—no matter what others say—are far happier than those who miserably follow along with the crowd because they're afraid to be different. You are right to disdain that kind of behavior and you now know what boys really think of girls who act as your friend did. If there is any way you can help her and the younger girl to see that such conduct isn't smart, do so. But if they insist on criticizing you and your mother, it's time you were finding other friends who know how to behave.

● IN ANSWER TO Perplexed: When a widow issues her invitations for her second wedding, she uses her first husband's name. She is Mrs. John Jones, not Mrs. Susan Jones. If she is quite young and her parents issue the invitations, they would read, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Doe request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Jane Marie King, to . . ." Her late husband's last name is used with her given names, although some prefer to use the clearer form, "Jane Doe King."

Martha Carr is glad to answer your questions. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. She cannot answer problems of a medical or legal nature.

A 'My Fair Lady' Theme for Fall, Winter

New York Fashion Showing Features Trend Toward Edwardian Elegance; Drapery Is Replacing the Sheath

By Sylvia Stiles
Post-Dispatch Fashion Writer

NEW YORK, July 7.

THE fair lady of the autumn will take her fashion cues from George Bernard Shaw as interpreted by Cecil Beaton. She will be wearing a 1956 version of the draped, high-waisted modes that were the rage of the Edwardian Era when the famous "Pygmalion" heroine was introduced. These were fashions designed for leisurely living, and called for such languid properties as violets, parasols, surreys with fringed tops, and escorts wearing high hats and frock coats. A slouch and a bored expression were other assets of the times.

In the same ingenious manner that a modern producer has brought Shaw's Eliza Doolittle up-to-date in a fantastic and fashionable musical entitled "My Fair Lady," so have the New York designers placed their 1956 label on the harem drapery, the enormous plumes, the lace tunics, the velvet sashes, and the pink silk roses that flourished 50 years ago. The play that is a current hit is credited with inspiring the style creators to give their latest themes a nostalgic emphasis.

THE extent of this revival will be seen this week as members of the Couture Group of the New York Dress Institute present their autumn and winter collections to several hundred fashion writers gathered here for the twenty-seventh national Press Week. More than 50 different shows have been scheduled during which $1,000,000 worth of clothes will be modeled. The news that Beaton, who did the costumes for "My Fair Lady," has designed some fall clothes for Samuel Winston that will be presented for the first time this week gives an added impetus to the "fair lady" trend for the coming season.

That drapery is replacing the severe simplicity characterized by the tight-fitting sheath is definite, from the early glimpses of the autumn modes. Some of this drapery has a vampish look. Harem skirts are numerous and variously handled. Floating panels that gained some popularity during the spring season are appearing in greater numbers. Sometimes they are the most distinctive feature of the silhouette of dinner and formal evening dresses. These after-dark fashions definitely stress the importance of ankle-length or floor-length skirts.

Return of the longer skirts for late day and evening is typical of the elegant trend that seems to dominate the season. This era of elegance is noted in the lush fabrics such as elaborate brocades and silk velvets, and also in the use of rich shades. There is an abundance of deep hues of burgundy red, and other vintage tones. Jewel colors are extensively used, too, as a general feeling of gayety prevails.

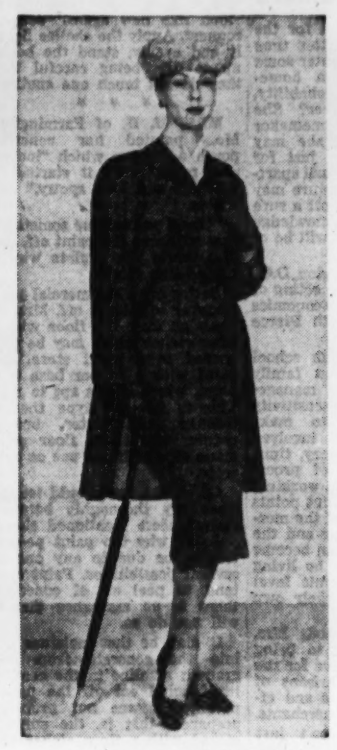

The vogue of the softer, draped lines has influenced the designing of tailored clothes as well as the more formal ones. Bloused bodices, for example, are typical of the very flattering, more feminine silhouettes. Some of the suit jackets also stress bloused tops. The bloused back has a tendency to give a slouched look to the wearer—another evidence of the Edwardian revival that is being heralded so generally. Sashes that are wrapped wide and permit the upper part of the bodice to blouse slightly also are utilized in the promotion of the slouched profile.

Decoration is contributing to the change in fashions. Fur trimmings are especially noteworthy. Collars of long-haired fur adorn many of the coats and some of the suit jackets. Frequently they are matched by extremely large muffs. The ensemble of matching hat and muff is featured. Luxurious trimmings of fur band strapless bodices and the slinking hemlines of floor-length evening dresses. Fringe and beading are other favorite decorations which change the appearance of fall clothes. Look for hoods, too, and for capes as old-fashioned items that are returning.

The era which the designers have selected as their inspiration has been termed the golden or the "gilded" era. The world was at peace and money was plentiful. The languid beauty was in vogue. Prettiness was synonymous with elaborate costuming. A "fair lady" was a fragile creature muffled in yards of handsome velvets and laces, smothered in furs, and weighted down with ostrich feathers. How the designers have adapted these themes to meet the requirements of today's modern, busy and practical woman should make the new fashion season an interesting one.

GATHERED CAMISOLE ABOVE A WIDE WAISTBAND GIVES AN EDWARDIAN LOOK TO NETTIE ROSENSTEIN'S GOLD BROCADED EVENING GOWN. HIGH-WAISTED BACK IS TRIMMED WITH ROSES.

THE 41-INCH TOPCOAT RETURNS FOR FALL TO WEAR WITH THE SHORT-JACKETED SUIT. COSTUME BY DAVIDOW HAS A DRESSMAKER EMPHASIS CHARACTERISTIC OF THE GENTEEL TREND.

BLACK CAPESKIN FORMS HINGED CUFFS ON A SHORT JACKET OF BLACK CHIFFON BROADCLOTH BY ANTHONY BLOTTA, AND ALSO IS USED TO CUFF THE HEMLINE OF THE DRESS.

A BLOUSED JACKET WITH AN ELASTIC WAISTBAND IS A FEATURE OF B. H. WRAGGE'S COSTUME OF WOOL AND LINEN PLAID. THE SKIRT IS FLARED WITH A FRONT PANEL OF UNPRESSED PLEATS.

On-the-Job Training in Homemaking

By Dorothy Brainerd

WITH school closed for the summer, what better time to give your daughter some on-the-job training in homemaking which, in all probability, will be her future career? She may be a full-time homemaker or a part-time one; she may care for a family, or just for herself and her own small apartment. Whatever the future may hold for her, it is almost a sure bet that a working knowledge of home management will be of real value to her.

Speaking in Washington, D.C., at the recent annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association, Mrs. Ruth Pierce Hughes asked:

"What can the high school youngster learn about family economics and home management? She can learn sensitivity of values; ability to make choices; relationships involved in expenditure of money, time, energy; importance of procedures people follow in working; appreciation of different points of view on the part of the merchant, the homemaker and the girl herself; and she can become aware that girls may be living on a different economic level after they establish their own homes."

Some of the methods Mrs. Hughes recommends to bring home management alive for the teen-agers are comparisons of brands, methods, costs and efficiency; and visits to merchants.

In other words, don't just send Sis to the store this summer for the items you have written down on a grocery list. Encourage her to help you make out the list, then go with her to the market, discuss with her the different brands of foods and household products, weighing their relative merits according to information given on the labels. Let her have a hand in making the decisions, making the family food budget, and preparing the meals.

It will keep her interested in something constructive during her holiday and, more important, it will give her practical knowledge that will be of help to her all of her life.

"A BRIDE" WRITES, "Recently I tasted some delicious BAKED hamburgers at a local tearoom. Could you please print the recipe for them."

I don't have the exact recipe for the hamburgers served at the restaurant you mention, but there really is no trick to preparing baked hamburgers. Just make your regular hamburger mixture, forming it into patties about one-half inch thick, then bake in a 350-degree oven to the desired degree of doneness.

MRS. C.B.H. of Iberia, Mo. wants to know what to do to restore the beauty of the covers and backs of some books.

It is difficult to advise you without seeing the books, Mrs. H., so as to know just what condition they are in; they may need repair work which could be done by a book bindery.

You failed to mention whether the covers were leather or cloth. If leather, use a leather preservative which may be purchased in book stores.

If buckram or cloth, a coat of clear shellac might help some, although I can't assure you that it will make them "look like new again," as you request. Apply the shellac lightly and evenly, stand the books up to dry, being careful that they do not touch one another.

MRS. M. H. of Farmington, Mo., painted her concrete porch a maroon which "looked real pretty until it started to peel off and look spotty," she writes.

"Could you tell me something that will take the paint off, and also would you explain why it peeled like this?"

Better use a commercial paint remover to take it off, Mrs. H. Then go over the floor with a floor etcher which may be purchased in a paint store. Repaint with a rubber base type paint, which is less apt to peel. This is not the type that is thinned with water, but a regular vinyl base floor paint made especially for use on concrete.

Of course you should let the floor dry thoroughly between each process mentioned above.

As to why the paint peeled, it may be due to any one of several possibilities. Paint does tend to peel off of concrete; there is no assurance that it will not do so.

It may be that moisture got into the concrete from the ground; alkaline in the cement itself could eat off the paint; perhaps it was not properly prepared—that is, the surface etched with a floor etcher before the paint was applied.

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions, or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

Susan Hayward Quits

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—Susan Hayward has withdrawn from the cast of the projected film version of John Steinbeck's novel, "The Wayward Bus," because 20th Century-Fox offered her one drink too many. The studio confirmed today that the actress has turned down the role of the bus driver's wife who has a fondness for the bottle. She felt that two drunk roles—she played an alcoholic in "I'll Cry Tomorrow"—was one binge too many.

Miss Hayward is understood to be negotiating with Nunnally Johnson, the writer-director-producer, for a role in his Fox production of "Three Faces of Eve."

Betsy Blair Role

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—In her first American movie since "Marty" Betsy Blair will co-star with Joseph Cotten and Viveca Lindfors in "The Halliday Brand," for Collier Young and associates. Miss Blair will play the sister of Cotten as a western girl who becomes romantically entangled with an Indian. She recently finished starring roles in two European films, "A Meeting in Paris," made in France and "The Main Street" in Spain. "The Halliday Brand" goes before the camera next Monday.

Big Money in 'Easterns'—Or, the Boys Can Dream

By Vernon G. Scott

HOLLYWOOD, July 7 (UP). — Armenian actor-comedian Ross Bagdasarian has formed a fictional movie company with Charlton Heston to make a series of Easterns—which will be remakes of famous Westerns for showing in the Near East.

Non-conformist Bagdasarian—who turned song-writer with William Saroyan to produce the Italian-dialect hit, "Come Onna My House"—says his tongue-in-cheek company could revolutionize the film industry.

"It might open an entire new career for me, too," he exclaimed. "All I needed was an open-minded producer, so I mentioned the idea to Heston. He suggested we incorporate with him as producer and me as star."

Bagdasarian currently has a role in Heston's new Paramount picture, "The Maverick." And between scenes the two actors are "planning" what films they'll make for their "Persian Pictures, Inc."

"The easiest part of our work is dreaming up the titles," Bagdasarian confided. "All we do is take a famous horse opera and change the name to make it sound like a camel cavalcade.

"For instance, 'The Covered Armenian' or 'They Died With Their Rugs On.' Get the idea? The combinations are endless."

Bagdasarian stood up and bowed low when Heston appeared in the Paramount commissary to join us for lunch.

"Meet my producer," he said grandly as Heston pulled up a chair.

Heston shot him a withering look and said, "First of all, it's going to be a series. Ross here will play the hero, a guy named Black Jack Aram.

"We will probably start out in the 'Shane' tradition with a simple title like 'Aram,' to be followed, as a result of popular demand by 'Son of Aram.'"

"Then we'll move on to such epics as 'Rug River,' 'The Armenian and the Lady,' 'Empty Carpets in the Old Oasis,' Ross cried.

"If the Easterns are successful," Heston went on, "we may move on to more modern things like 'Man in the Gray Flannel Rug' or 'Girl in the Red Velvet Rug.'"

"How about 'Man With the Golden Rug' or 'Francis Joins the Armenians?'" asked Ross.

"We don't want to go too far," Heston said, getting up to leave, "but we may even produce an all-time super-colossal like 'Gone With the Monsoon'."

Maureen O'Hara Role

HOLLYWOOD, July 7—Another top feminine role has been taken by Maureen O'Hara who will play John Wayne's wife in Metro's "The Wings of Eagles." Miss O'Hara has played opposite Wayne twice previously in "The Quiet Man" and "Rio Grande." John Ford, the director of "The Wings of Eagles" directed the actress in both of those films in addition to "How Green Was My Valley."

How to Become a Comic—Start at Something Else

NEW YORK, July 7 (INS).

YOU don't become a comic because mother always thought your jokes were funny.

Take the example of Orson Bean — age: 27, profession: comic, present place of employment: the Belasco theater where he romances Jayne Mansfield in George Axelrod's comedy hit, "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?"

"You've got to start at something else," Bean said. "Fred Allen started as a juggler, for instance, and almost every comedian started as something like that. The exception may be the comics who worked in burlesque.

"You have to learn something first and then work the comedy into it. You can't just get up one morning and say 'I'm a comedian'."

The Vermont-born Bean began his professional career as a magician and hypnotist.

"I was pretty lousy," he said in his Yankee accent. "I started being funny to weasel my way out of my failures. You start out with a few lines you find in a book, like '5000 Rib Ticklers.' You're lucky if you find one smile. Then you start ad libbing.

"Eventually I began to write my own material. I don't like to write at all, but I could never find anybody who could write anything for me.

"Lately, though, as I mature as a performer I find I can do other people's material. I even enjoy it more than my own because it kind of stretches me, it extends me."

Bean, who has toured the country on the night club circuit as well as playing television parts and Broadway roles, feels that the night club is the "last place left where a comedian can be bad."

"That's very important," he said seriously. "You've got to lay an egg sometime, and woe betide you if it's on television."

Bean said he has always wanted to be part of the entertainment world.

"I don't know why. I think there's a devious reason for everybody who's in this business. I don't know mine, but I'm sure it's lurking there. Show business is too harrowing to just drift into."

Light Shoes Blend With Summer Styles

THE pale and light shoe makes the perfect companion for the feminine fashions important this season. The Delman collection is typical of the trend. Ottoman-ribbed straws, garden printed imported silk faille, nubby silks, pastel calfskins, and thin summer suedes are as supple as fabric and are used for tapered lines.

Pale colors reminiscent of the elegance of the 1900s illustrate the popular shades. Yellow, pink, blue and cream are four shades that blend with the muted colorings and sheer fabrics that are so fashionable in summer ready-to-wear. The all-white shoe, a growing favorite for the past few summers, is expected to attain even greater popularity this summer. Various materials figure in the white revival.

The vogue of the spectator sports shoe is significant with black and white offering a sophisticated change from navy and brown. Fringed overlays, elaborate perforations on the vamp, and covered or layered heels are some of the modifications. Novelty decorations are seen, too, on many of the shoes. Miniature daisies decorate a slim, sculptured pump. Petit point embroidery appears on vamps and heels.

New Velvet Hats

Velvet hats have arrived in the stores unusually early this summer. One model by Walter Florell is made of red velvet that is swirled and draped in a new dome-cloche shape. The crown is oversize and emphasizes the popularity of the bloused silhouette. Another large cloche type with the bloused crown combines scarlet red velvet and emreald green rough straw that forms the brim.

Series of Gay Parties Is Scheduled for Young Women Making Debuts This Season; Most Events to Be in Christmas Holidays but Many Planned for Fall or Next June

By Karin Hayward

A NEW social season, with a list to date of 43 debutantes and exciting plans for balls, receptions and other parties, is under way. In fact seasons now overlap. In June, as the last parties were being given for girls of the past year, festivities were beginning for the debutantes of 1956-57. There is to be the usual July-August lull as the young women and their families join summer resort colonies, but the first three weeks of September, before most of the girls depart for college, are tightly scheduled with parties. Christmas vacation time is the highlight of the debutante's year, when a round of dinners and dances is provided each night and each day is filled with luncheons and teas. Again there is a lull until the college girls return in June and their year ends with a few more parties, climaxed by the Bachelor Club ball.

In the list that follows are one pair of twins, two sets of cousins and numerous girls whose mothers and grandmothers were debutantes of another day.

Arranged alphabetically, the list begins with MISS MARGERY ANNE ABBOTT, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Davis Abbott and sister of Robert A. Abbott. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. B. A. Abbott of Atlanta, Ga., and the late Rev. Dr. Abbott, for many years pastor of Union Avenue Christian Church, and of Mrs. Zihlsdorf Mitchell and the late Mr. Mitchell. Miss Abbott, who will be presented to her mother's friends at a tea Sept. 13 at the Abbott home, 46 Broadview drive, Clayton, will later in the month start her sophomore year at Washington University where her sorority is Alpha Chi Omega. She is an alumna of Mary Institute.

MISS HELENE BROWN BAKEWELL was the first of this year's debutantes to make her bow. The occasion was a reception June 15 given by her grandfather, Paul Bakewell Jr., at his home, 10 Portland place. Guests were friends of Mr. Bakewell and of the debutante's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude I. Bakewell, 5231 Westminster place. The night of Dec. 20 she will be guest of honor at a party for her contemporaries to be given at St. Louis Country Club by an uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bakewell III. A former student at Villa Duchesne and House in the Pines School, Norton, Mass., Miss Bakewell last year attended the Whitfield School. Namesake of her mother, the former Miss Helene Brown, a special maid of honor at the 1932 Veiled Prophet Ball, the debutante is a granddaughter of Mrs. Alanson C. Brown and the late Mr. Brown and of Mrs. Mary Fullerton Bakewell, Scituate, Mass.

Now in Douglas, Mich., with her family at their cottage, Elkhorn Lodge, is MISS JOAN MARIE BARDENHEIER, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Bardenheier Jr., 6350 Pershing avenue, University City. Plans for her coming-out party will be announced later. An alumna of Villa Duchesne, Miss Bardenheier attended Barry College, Miami, Fla., last year. She plans to enter Maryville College in the autumn. The debutante has one sister, Miss Ann Bardenheier, and one brother, Joseph A. Bardenheier III. Their grandparents are Joseph A. Bardenheier and the late Mrs. Bardenheier and Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse C. Leber.

Another of the new debutantes now in Michigan is MISS EUGENIA ELIZABETH BEAM (Genie Beth), daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Sim Fields Beam, 52 Middlesex drive, York Woods. She is a counselor at the younger girls' camp at Camp Miniwanca, Shelby, Mich., and may remain for the older girls' camp. She is the sister of Miss Carolyn Beam, a John Burroughs School student, and Kristin Beam, and granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. Marcus O. Shivers, Colorado Springs, Colo., (and through them distantly related to Gov. Shivers of Texas), and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sim Beam of Kansas City, Mo. Miss Beam will be introduced Sept. 14 at a tea at her home before returning to Swathmore (Pa.) College for her sophomore year. She was graduated from John Burroughs.

Three parties early in September already have been planned in honor of MISS WANDA LEA BICKEL, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. P. Gilbert Bickel II, 41 Briarcliff, Ladue. The debutante will make her bow Sept. 5 at a tea for her mother's friends; the next day Dr. and Mrs. Robert M. Courtney will give a luncheon and swimming party at their home in Chesterfield, and Sept. 12 Dr. and Mrs. Maurice A. Diehr have planned a barbecue at their home, 28 Dromara road, Ladue. A ball later in the season will serve to introduce Miss Bickel to her contemporaries. An alumna of Mary Institute, Miss Bickel spent last year at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, to which she will return late in September. She is a member of Sigma Iota Alpha sorority and the Haydn Choral Society, Boston. An accomplished equestrienne, she is a member of the Bridlespur Hunt. The debutante has one brother, F. Gilbert Bickel III, who attends St. Louis Country Day School.

Among this season's multiple debut parties will be a dinner dance Dec. 22 at the University Club at which MISS JUDITH CHARLINE BROWNLEE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. James Brownlee, 25 Fair Oaks, Ladue, will make her bow with Miss Sarah Jane Scott and Miss Susan Robinson. At that time Miss Brownlee will be home for Christmas from Bradford Junior College, where she will be a sophomore. She is a graduate of John Burroughs School. A granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Sutor and of Mrs. Thomas J. Brownlee and the late Mr. Brownlee, the debutante is the sister of Miss Kathryn Gordon Brownlee, who came out two seasons ago, and a half-sister of Tom Perkins.

Two coming-out parties at Christmas are being planned for MISS ANN BURFORD, who lives with her mother, Mrs. Carolyn Skelly Burford, at the Park Plaza Hotel. There will be one party, probably a dinner dance, at the Park Plaza Hotel, and another in Tulsa, Okla., to be given by the debutante's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Grove Skelly. Miss Burford, a graduate of Villa Duchesne, attends Briarcliff Junior College. Recently hostess to three of her Briarcliff classmates, she now is the guest of one of them, Miss Sally Welsh of Edgemar Farm near Kansas City, Mo. She will return here this week and soon will go East to see other friends. The debutante is the sister of Mrs. Patrick W. Brady of Houston, Tex., and of William Skelly Burford of Baltimore.

One set of twins, MISS DORCAS CARR and MISS LAURA LEE BURROUGHS, is being presented to society this season with a debut party scheduled for next spring. Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Perry Burroughs Jr., 6617 Pershing avenue, University City, they are granddaughters of Mrs. Oscar H. Vieths, oldest living Veiled Prophet Queen, and the late Mr. Vieths, and of Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer P. Burroughs, former St. Louisans now living in Palm Beach, Fla. Laura Lee, who is the namesake of her paternal grandmother, is called Lolly. The two debutantes were graduated from John Burroughs School and last autumn entered Pembroke College in Brown University, Providence, R.I. They will return to Pembroke for their sophomore year.

MISS RUTH HANNA CLIFFORD, of all the new debutantes is probably the farthest from home this summer. Miss Clifford, traveling with a group of nine young women, is in Greece studying art and architecture. Making Athens their headquarters, the girls are touring the country and visiting the islands off the coast including Rhodes and Crete. Miss Clifford, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Berthoud Clifford, 6154 Kingsbury avenue, is the sister of Miss Ann Katherine Clifford, who was presented in 1952, Susan Partridge Clifford and Nicholas Clifford. The debutante was graduated from House in the Pines, Norton, Mass. and from Stephens College, Columbia, Mo.

A sophomore in the fall at Maryville College, MISS LELIA CHOPIN CONWAY, will spend her weekends with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. Archer O'Reilly Jr., as her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Conway, 6154 Kingsbury avenue, plan to move soon to Cincinnati. Miss Conway was graduated from the Academy of the Sacred Heart. Member of a large family, she is the sister of W. Thomas III, Christopher, Frances, Matthew and Philip Conway. They are grandchildren of Mrs. William T. Conway and the late Dr. Conway and of Mrs. George F. Chopin and the late Dr. Chopin.

One of several debutantes attending Washington University, MISS DENISE MARTINEAU COYLE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Coyle, 6969 Amherst avenue, University City, will be introduced at a tea Nov. 23. She is a graduate of The Principia and at Washington has become a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. Miss Coyle is the sister of Michael M. Coyle and granddaughter of Mrs. Bernard O. Coyle.

Tomorrow MISS PATRICIA ANN HERRINGTON DICKMANN will begin a summer of volunteer work at the new Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital for Children. A graduate of Villa Duchesne, Miss Dickmann will return to Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans in September for her sophomore year. She is the daughter of St. Louis Postmaster Bernard F. Dickmann, a former mayor of the city, and Mrs. Dickmann, 6227 McPherson avenue, who are planning a party for her Sept. 10. Miss Dickmann has one sister, Mrs. Kenneth Crawford of Mount Olive, Miss.

MISS SALLY BAIRD DOBSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan C. Dobson, 41 West Brentmoor, Clayton, will spend July in St. Louis and then will go north to be with her parents and brother, Duncan Jr., at their summer home at Harbor Point, Mich. In the autumn she will return as a sophomore to Sweet Briar (Va.) College. She is a graduate of the Masters School, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. Plans for her debut party, still tentative, are for a reception Dec. 23 at home. Miss Dobson is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hillsman Taylor, former St. Louisans now living in Memphis, Tenn., and the Rev. Dr. Roy Calvin Dobson, for many years pastor of First Presbyterian Church, and the late Mrs. Dobson who was Miss Fanita Duncan.

The third of Mrs. Thomas Rosen's daughters, MISS CARYL CROXTON GREEN, will make her debut this year. She will be presented Sept. 4 at a tea at the Rosen home, 2 Overhills, Ladue, and will share honors at the party with a cousin, Miss Marian Green Shipley. Her sisters, Miss Marian and Miss Elizabeth Green, twins, were presented in 1954. They are daughters of the late John James Green and granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. William King and the late Mr. and Mrs. John Leigh Green. Miss Green, who has taught swimming at which she is extremely proficient, is a graduate of Community School and Mary Institute. She has completed one year of study at Bennett Junior College, Millbrook, N. Y., to which she will return.

Planning to enter Monticello College, Godfrey, Ill., this fall is MISS JULIE CARTER HENSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Norris Henson, 6453 Cecil avenue, Clayton. She will be introduced to society at an autumn tea for her mother's friends and Dec. 29 at a dinner dance for the debutante set

SUMMER BRIDE AND BRIDE-ELECT

MRS. CHARLES CHRISTIAN KILGEN III

Miss Yvonne Marie Beaudette Becomes Bride Of Charles C. Kilgen III at Morning Ceremony

IN a setting of white summer flowers Miss Yvonne Marie Beaudette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Lawrence Beaudette, 1731 Liggett drive, Webster Groves, became the bride of Charles Christian Kilgen III yesterday morning at Mary Queen of Peace Church, Glendale. The Rev. Joseph B. Eilers performed the ceremony which was followed by a reception at Le Chateau.

Mrs. James L. Lorenz, matron of honor, was gowned in pale blue ballet-length organdy with a wedgwood blue taffeta cummerbund with a back bow. The maid of honor, Miss Marilyn Vincel, wore a similar gown in pale yellow with a gold cummerbund. Both had matching picture hats and shoes and carried yellow daisies mixed with blue delphinium and ivy streamers.

Chantilly lace and tulle over satin was worn by the bride whose fingertip veil was secured to a pearl-embroidered lace cap framed in pleated tulle ruching. Her gown was designed with a mandarin collar trimmed in sequins, and an overskirt of lace which was gathered to panniers at the sides and swept to a short train. She carried white orchids and valley lilies.

Higgins - Thorne Chapel Wedding

OUR LADY'S CHAPEL on the campus of the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., was the scene yesterday of the marriage of Miss Kathleen Emily Thorne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Angus Thorne, of Maywood, Ill., to Philip Cornelius Higgins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius J. Higgins, 2 McKnight lane, Ladue. The Rev. Glen Boarman, C.S.C., of the university faculty, officiated at the candlelighted ceremony in a setting of white gladiolas, chrysanthemums and greenery.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore white chantilly lace combined with nylon tulle. The fitted bodice was styled with a sweetheart neckline and short sleeves; the voluminous nylon skirt was profusely trimmed with lace. A lace cap, with seed pearls, secured her short veil. The bride carried white rosebuds and ivy leaves.

The maid of honor, Miss Mary Louis Magers, Maywood, wore ice blue nylon net over taffeta, a ballerina dress with a bouffant skirt. A net and flower arrangement was worn in her hair. She carried yellow spring flowers.

Samuel Dugan was best man; Harold J. Ott Jr. and Brian Williams, were ushers. All are St. Louisans.

Both mothers wore blue lace and orchids. They received at a breakfast given by the bride's parents at Morris Inn on the campus. Later Mr. Higgins and his bride departed for a northern Wisconsin honeymoon. They will live in St. Louis where on July 21 Mr. and Mrs. Higgins will give a reception in their honor at Le Chateau.

Miss Woodman Is Married to E. T. Haase Jr.

MISS JANE ELIZABETH WOODMAN, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Glen Fuller Woodman, 3907 McDonald avenue, and Edward Theodore Haase Jr. were married yesterday noon at St. Clement's Church on Bopp road, St. Louis county, with the Rev. Robert P. Eike officiating. A reception was held afterward at Le Chateau.

The bride's attire was a white embroidered organdy gown with a wide square neckline, short sleeves and full skirt, over which cascaded her fingertip veil from a white organdy cap embroidered with roses. She carried stephanotis.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Jean Anthony Dargis (Mary Ruth Buschman), who was married Monday and at whose wedding the bride was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Virginia Lane Haase, the bridegroom's sister, and Miss Mary Ann Tracy, Cincinnati, O., cousin of the bride. All three wore ballerina white chiffon frocks with white pearl headpieces framing their hair. The honor attendant carried yellow daisies while the others' bouquets were yellow and white daisies mixed.

The bridegroom, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Theodore Haase, 34 Crestwood drive, Clayton, had Mark Otto Howard of New Orleans as best man and as ushers, William B. Paddock, Memphis, Tenn.; Fred Christian Heitz, James Guilfoy and Herbert E. Metz.

Organ music at the wedding was played by Mr. Dargis, who is organist and choir master at the Church of the Holy Childhood in St. Paul, Minn. Mrs. Woodman wore pink shantung and a matching hat while Mrs. Haase also wore pink. They had corsages of white stephanotis.

Mr. Haase and his bride will spend their honeymoon at Manchester, Vt., and make their home at 8665 Kingsbridge, Canterbury Gardens. She is a graduate of Loretto Academy and Washington University, where she was a member of Alpha Chi Omega. Mr. Haase was graduated from St. Louis Country Day School, spent a year at Mercersburg (Pa.) Academy, and was graduated last January from Washington University. As an undergraduate he was a member of Sigma Chi fraternity, of the varsity tennis team and assistant director of Student Life.

mer student at Villa Duchesne, Miss Smith was graduated from the Academy of the Sacred Heart. She, her parents and brother, will depart Tuesday for La Jolla, Calif., where they have taken a cottage.

Miss Swarts, who was president of her graduating class at Mary Institute, has just completed her freshman year at Vassar College. Miss Rita Riley Becomes Bride WHITE summer flowers adorned the altar of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Clayton, for the wedding yesterday of Miss Rita Riley and Ensign Robert Bernard Morgenthaler of the Coast Guard. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William J. Lyons, recently ordained to the priesthood, a close friend of the bridegroom.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her chantilly lace gown was worn over satin. A net crown embroidered with pearls secured her fingertip-length veil. She carried a white satin prayer book overlaid with white orchids.

Miss Mary Margaret Marsh was maid of honor, while Miss Patricia Bowman and Mrs. Gordon Roberts were bridesmaids. Their identical dresses of ballet blue chiffon, waltz length, were complemented by bandeaux and nosegays of blue and white blossoms.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Morgenthaler, 9006 Stonebridge drive, Richmond Heights, had his brother, Eugene A. Morgenthaler, as best man. Ushers were Lt. Don C. Riley, Air Force, brother of the bride; Bernard R. Winkeler, the bridegroom's cousin; John J. Ward, Edwin S. Gibson Jr. and Robert R. Tinker.

After the ceremony the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Riley, 7006 Lindell boulevard, University City, gave a breakfast at Le Chateau. Mr. and Mrs. Morgenthaler will honeymoon in the Adirondacks and will live in Massachusetts.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Walsh of Indianapolis, uncle and aunt of the bride were out-of-town guests.

The wedding took place in the Clinton Methodist Church and was followed by a reception at the Jennings home.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a pale blue lace frock and a matching sequins hat from which fell a short veil. Her bouquet was made of white rosebuds.

Mrs. David Dornfeld of St. Louis served as matron of honor in a polished cotton frock of the same blue shade with a matching hat, and carried a bouquet of white daisies.

Mr. Dornfeld was best man for the bridegroom, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nitkiewicz of South Hadley Falls, Mass. Ushers were John Caldwell, Ulrich, Mo.; William T. Kratzer Jr., Rolla, Mo., and Wesley Hase, Malden, Mo.

Following their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Nitkiewicz spent a week here while he completed his assignment in the historic building, part of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial. They are now spending their honeymoon in New England, including visits with relatives in South Hadley Falls, Bar Harbor, Me., and New York.

Plan 100 Women Asked For

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER

Ask a hundred thoughtful women from all parts of the country what they would like to have in a house, and what do you get? This plan, Design HW-8A gives you a good idea.

The chief preferences of 103 housewives, who attended the Women's Congress on Housing in Washington, are featured in this plan. The ideas, expressed in three days of discussions, were summarized by the office of Albert M. Cole, Housing and Home Finance Administrator. Cole sponsored the conference to determine the types of homes most people want.

The women voted virtually unanimously for three bedrooms, one and a half bathrooms, a spacious family room off the kitchen and removed from the more formal living room, a separate dining room, a basement, mud room and adequate closet space—in a one-story home covering less than 1500 square feet.

All of that and more are included in this plan. Rudolph A. Matern, a national authority on popular home design, planned HW-8A to incorporate as many as possible of the details considered to be most desirable by the greatest number of the women.

Bombshell to Architects.

"Some items, which they were willing to sacrifice as not absolutely essential, have also been included in this plan," the architect says, "in the interest of good design for efficient and comfortable living."

The women planted a bombshell in architectural circles by saying, in effect, that most male architects don't know how to plan a house for sensible family living. Their criticism seem certain to have far reaching effects on the future of architecture.

Nearly all of them wanted the kitchen on the rear with a window facing the backyard. They wanted windows a child could look out of—windows easy to remove and clean—but picture windows only when they had a desirable view.

They did not want extremes in architectural design.

Most wanted garages, but when faced with costs, they were willing to eliminate a garage for the time being and add it later. Basements were favored only for their added storage space in view of their economy of construction.

Bathroom Oversize.

Design HW-8A is a highly livable house as a result of this distaff guidance. The house is divided into three distinct areas—formal living room and dining room for entertaining, informal zone for family relaxation, and quiet sleeping wing.

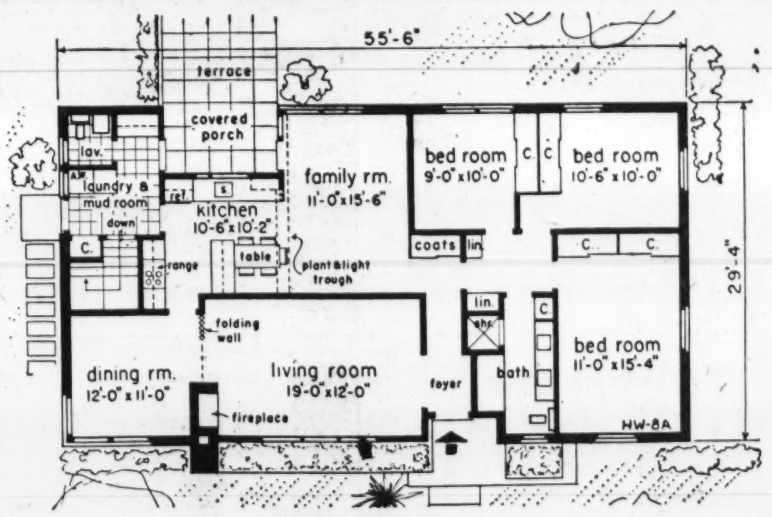

To meet the women's request, the bathroom is oversize with two lavatories in a vanity counter and a shower bath separated from the bathtub.

Children's needs are paramount in this plan. Youngsters can run in from the backyard to the lavatory off the laundry-mudroom adjoining the kitchen. They can step out from the family room to porch, terrace and backyard. They can be taken to bed from the family room with-

How family room will appear from the dining room to the kitchen, showing possibilities for wood paneling, the use of peg board and plant shelves. Kitchen cabinets are at the left, coat closet at extreme right.

Floor plan shows how family room, kitchen and "mud room" are segregated from formal living-dining area and quiet sleeping rooms. Three backyard entrances let children run in and out without disturbing house.

Architects Open Display of Ideas At Art Museum

An exhibition of architectural readings, photographs, and scale models, sponsored by the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, opened in the City Art Museum last Friday night.

About 250 architects, their wives, civic, religious, business and professional leaders attended.

Rex L. Becker, A.I.A. chapter president, said, "Nowhere is the new 'Spirit of St. Louis' illustrated more profoundly than on the drawing boards of St. Louis architects.

"The architect's board is the birthplace of ideas," Becker added, "ideas to be manifested in steel and concrete, stone, brick and wood, glass and plaster—ideas that will be the St. Louis of tomorrow."

The exhibit consists of about 100 sketches of actual or proposed schools, hospitals, office buildings, university buildings, manufacturing plants, hotels, homes, and other structures. Several scale models and photographs are also on display.

The display, entitled "St. Louis Architecture—1956," is to run through July 30.

FHA Insured Mortgages Totaling $57,311,000 In This Area Last Year

The Federal Housing Administration insured 5395 home mortgages totaling $58,311,000 last year in the St. Louis metropolitan area, according to Alan T. Smith, FHA director for this area.

The average new home in this area financed with an FHA-insured mortgage in 1955 was appraised by the FHA at $13,908. It had an area of 951 square feet, exclusive of garage and finished attic spaces, and contained 5.2 rooms, including 2.7 bedrooms. About 73.4 per cent of the properties had garage facilities of some kind.

Smith explained that the averages cited applied to newly built owner-occupied homes financed with mortgages insured by the FHA under the provisions of Section 203 of the National Housing Act.

The average owner, whose monthly income was $529.75, obtained a mortgage loan of $10,823 repayable in monthly installments over a term averaging 25.5 years. The monthly mortgage payment to principal, interest, taxes and insurance averaged $77.90.

This amount, plus estimated maintenance costs and regular operating expenses such as water, gas, electricity and fuel, brought the owner's total prospective housing expense to $101.25, or 19.1 per cent of his monthly income.

There is a complete lawn and garden lighting system, and a formal fountain in the garden. This is the home, built by N. V. Byssmann on a three-acre tract, with three bedrooms, two baths and lavette, birch-paneled den, complete "inter-com" system for voice, radio and "hi-fi" throughout the house; push-button kitchen with oven, separate range top units, refrigerator, freezer and appliance panel all built in. There are two air-conditioning units and an attic fan, two furnace units for zoned control of the 135-foot-long building. Recent Frequent Rains Give Trees a Lift, but Attention Still Needed

By ELEANOR B. McCLURE
Post-Dispatch Garden Writer.

Wonderful summer rains have surely been appreciated by those long-suffering drouth victims—the shade trees. Abundant surface moisture has brought a remarkable growth of dense new leaves. Although oak wilt and the mortal elm diseases are still all too prevalent, the total picture is more encouraging than at any time in recent years.

There's no doubt at all that many of the tree fatalities in this area can be attributed as much to prolonged drouth as to tree diseases. It takes an expert (aided in some instances by laboratory tests) to tell whether a trees was killed by lack of water or by a specific disease. Moreover, the hungry and thirsty drouth victims had such low resistance that they were easy prey to both insects and fungus or virus diseases.

For the time being, at least, most of our shade trees have an adequate water supply. Although the subsoil moisture has not been replenished as yet, most trees have a remarkable network of feeder roots within the top two or three feet of the soil surface. Moreover, appreciable quantities of moisture are absorbed by the leaf surfaces, too.

In spite of these favorable conditions, many dead trees may be seen throughout this area. Dead elms should be removed as soon as possible, and the wood should be burned, to check the insects that spread Dutch elm disease and Phloem necrosis.

Unfortunately, there is no tried and tested cure for these diseases. At present, the best protection for shade trees is to keep them growing as vigorously as possible. First of all, that means abundant moisture (with irrigation during periods of drouth) and plenty of food. Dormant and foliage sprays that protect trees from debilitating attacks of insects and diseases are helpful, and some arborists also recommend spe-

Kroger's Acquires 63 Acres

Purchase by The Kroger Co. of a 63-acre tract on Highway 66 in Hazelwood for a new multi-million-dollar warehouse and office building, was announced yesterday by Robert A. Hughes, manager of the Kroger St. Louis branch which operates stores in this area.

The tract, purchased from the Wabash Motor Transit Co., is just north of the St. Louis Municipal Airport and adjacent to the Lincoln- Mercury plant.

Building plans are not completed, Hughes said, but the new structure will be one of the large and most complete food distribution centers in the state. When finished, it will serve 118 Kroger retail stores within a 75-mile radius of St. Louis, replacing the company's existing facilities at 1311 South 39th street.

Latest Devices.

The new "food distribution center" will utilize virtually every available device for efficient and economical food handling and every section of the building will be planned for a specific job. Several different types of storage rooms will be provided to meet the varied requirements of modern food warehousing.

Included in the building will be large, high-ceilinged areas for storage of so-called "dry" groceries; below-zero freezers for frozen foods; an air-conditioned section for produce, special "wet" and "dry" refrigerated rooms for fresh fruits and vegetables, and warm, moist banana ripening rooms.

Special Dock Areas.

Dock areas for railroad cars and motor tractor-trailers will be entirely enclosed for protection from the weather, and temperature-controlled during the winter months. Tracks of the Wabash Railroad will run directly into the building.

Modern office space located at one corner of the building, will be air-conditioned, soundproofed and lighted with "soft-tone" fluorescent lighting.

Kroger has been established in St. Louis for the past 44 years with its warehouse and office building on South 39th street. The present main warehouse was added to the original building in 1924.

County Outing

The St. Louis County Real Estate Board's annual summer outing is to take place Tuesday afternoon and evening at the Norwood Country Club, Jean Mason, chairman of the entertainment committee, reports.

Golf, cards and other entertainment such as horseshoe pitching and corkball are scheduled for those who can attend beginning with a luncheon at 11:30 a.m. and, at 7 there will be a terrace dinner, with dancing to 11.

Major Program.

Rehabilitation of blighted neighborhoods is a major national program of the Build America Better Committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Industrial Sites Much In Demand

The demand for quality industrial space intensified during the first part of 1956, and increased use of mechanical equipment in materials handling has accelerated the market for one-story buildings, according to Leroy D. Owen, Los Angeles, president of the Society of Industrial Realtors.

This was one of the findings noted in a nation-wide study based on data supplied by more than 100 industrial real property experts, and by a panel of members of the mortgage study committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The summary showed that vacant land appropriated for warehouse or industrial use has become increasingly scarce, and good unimproved sites are at a premium around many cities. Such sites are more costly than a year ago, according to 83 per cent of those reporting.

Nearer Replacement Costs.

Higher prices than those prevalent a year ago were reported also for sites in well-designed industrial areas which are being used to shift plants from city areas and to attract new industry, Owen reported.

Dollar volume of sales of both improved and unimproved sites was higher this year than last, according to three-fourths of the respondents.

Because of the continued trend toward single-story buildings, those with services and adequate parking facilities are readily sold when available, and values often are nearer to replacement costs than in the past. Despite the volume of new construction, which has added substantially to space offered, single-story vacancies are few, according to the survey.

Half the group reporting said prices of manufacturing plants of less than 50,000 square feet have increased 5 to 10 per cent over a year ago. Forty-nine per cent said prices were unchanged. Prices for facilities of 50,000 square feet or more were the same as last year, 58 per cent noted, while 40 per cent said they were higher.

Continuance Expected.

On warehouse structures, 55 per cent agreed prices were primarily the same as a year ago, while 34 per cent listed a rise.

Increased demands for single-story structures have caused a marked influence on the marketability and value of multi-story buildings. Older properties now are often hard to move at any price, and buyers are few, Owen said.

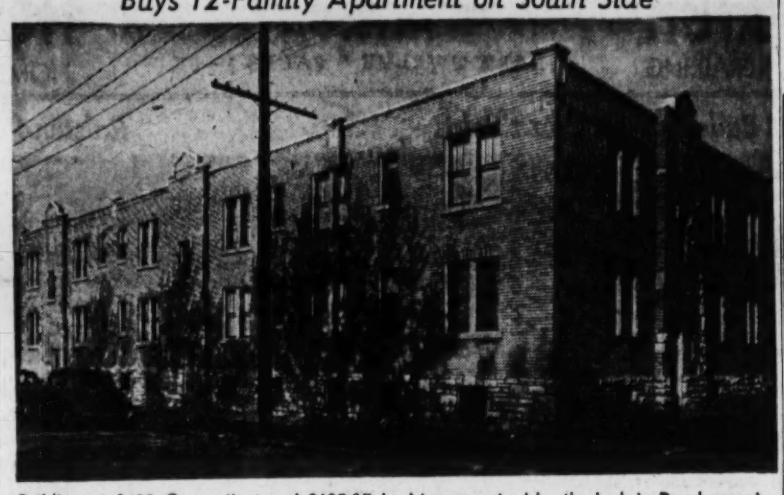

Most members participaing in the survey expect the current strong market to continue, and many of them look forward to a rise in both prices and dollar volume during the second half of 1956. In particular, the demand for sites is expected to continue, brinjging a further rise in land values, he added.

In mortgage loans, the survey pointed out that financing on warehouse and industrial structures costs more than it did a year ago and is somewhat less available.

Increased investor selectivity has influenced terms and conditions, and loans viewed less confidently from both the standpoint of security and credit standing are being accepted on a case by case basis.

Loans were negotiated at interest charges below 5 per cent less frequently than a year ago.

Miss Cecilia Tombridge, associated with Giraldin Bros. Real Estate Co., was appointed education chairman. Miss Ruthie Schaeffer, who is to be married soon, resigned as chairman.

Doctors Lease East Side Space

Leasing of the first floor of the west wing of the new Shop City Medical Building at 4601 State street, East St. Louis, Ill., has been completed, according to Maurice J. Frankel, president of Shop City, Inc.

Tenants of the west wing are Dr. Francis E. Bihss, Dr. Philip A. Azar, Clinical Laboratories; Dr. F. J. Campos, Dr. Norman R. Shippey and Dr. James A. Crilly.

The building, designed by Shapiro & Tisdale, architects, was erected by Ferd Ganschinietz, general contractor. Schwartz, Schwartz & Landsman, attorneys, represented the owner in the lease negotiations.

Opens Second Store

Jacob Hawkins, a painting contractor since 1924, has opened his second store, the Hawkins Decorators Center, at 11006 Manchester road, Kirkwood.

The new store is in a 40-year-old residence which was extensively remodeled and enlarged for Hawkins, who handles products of the Mautz Paint & Varish Co.

In addition to the new location, which is at the southwest corner of Manchester and Harrison, the company has a store at 3166 Oak Hill in South St. Louis.

LIGHTER STILL.

Sometimes, when you take off the old finish from a piece of furniture with paint-and-varnish-remover, the wood is still dark from the original stain. If you wish the wood to be lighter still—so it will harmonize with newly-bought light wood pieces—you can use a bleach, obtainable from a paint dealer.

Quality Not Quantity.
Housing experts of the United States Savings and Loan League forecast that the next few years will see increasingly intensive competition in the home building field. They feel that the postwar housing shortage is over, and that the emphasis should now be on "quality" and not "quantity" in home production.

More Home Ownership.
Home ownership is on the increase, according to the Bureau of Census. Approximately 60 per cent of American families now own their own homes, a rise of 5 per cent in five years. The north central part of the United States, with 66.4 per cent, showed the highest rate of home-ownership; the northeast with 52.1 per cent was lowest.

New Recreational Area Opened in Southwest County

Sketch of swimming pool opened last Wednesday off Larkin William road, a mile south of U. S. Highway 66. The pool, designed and constructed by the Midwest Pool and Court Co. of St. Louis, is in a 20-acre recreational area called Greenacres.

Conference Called

CHICAGO—The second annual Educators Conference, the only meeting of its kind held anywhere, will convene at the University of Colorado in Boulder July 16 and 17, sponsored by the Educational and Research Trust Fund of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. It will be attended by deans of schools of business administration and commerce in colleges and universities and is an effort on the part of the Trust Fund to better acquaint these educators with the functions and operations of the mortgage banking industry, with a view of securing a better appreciation of this field in schools of higher learning. An added objective is to interest more younger people in mortgage banking as a career. The first such Conference was held last year at the University of Michigan.

Recreation Area Opens

Greenacres, a 20-acre recreational area featuring a large fan-shaped swimming pool, was opened last Wednesday off Larkin William road, a mile south of U. S. Highway 66.

The pool was designed and constructed by the Midwest Pool and Court Co. of St. Louis for Bud Wallach and Tom J. Grace. It is constructed of pneumatically applied concrete, heavily reinforced with steel bars.

There are 6000 square feet of concrete sun deck area with non-skid surface around the pool, which is 100 feet long, 65 feet wide at the shallow end and 35 feet at the deep end.

The filter system is sand pressure type and recirculates the pool's 190,000 gallons of water every seven hours. Chlorine is ejected into the water through a gaseous type chlorinator.

Design of the pool includes four steps in each corner and placement of diving boards for maximum safety for divers and swimmers.

A bath house of concrete block construction provides dressing, checking and sanitary facilities.

Banker Honored For 50 Years Of Service

Alfred V. Mayer, treasurer of the Manufacturers Bank & Trust Co., was honored at a ceremony in the bank's lobby last week commemorating 50 years of service in banking.

Congratulating Mayer on his Golden anniversary, P. A. Thias, president, said: "Those of us who have worked with you through the years are richer because of a fast and lasting friendship which has developed between us. In the performance of your duties, you have been efficient and capable, and no man could be more conscientious."

Gus E. Nischwitz, head teller, oldest employe in years of service, with a check representing presented Mayer, the bank's contributions by fellow employes.

Mayer, who is 66, his wife and daughter, reside at 433 Carrswold drive, Clayton.

Opening New Subdivision

Ben Goldberg & Co., Harold Kessler, Ben Goldberg and Fred Lipnick, has prepared a preview today and formal opening next Sunday of the new Ladue Estates Subdivision, a 90-acre development of air-conditioned, full-basement brick and stone homes on Ladue road west of Lindbergh.

Previews Today for New Homes

A preview today has been arranged, preceding a formal opening presentation next Sunday of the new subdivision called Ladue Estates, a 90-acre development of Goldberg & Co. on the south side of Ladue road between Graeser and Mosley roads.

The subdivision, in the Ladue School District, is to have contemporary-styled brick and stone homes with ranch and colonial overtones in the styling.

There are three new streets being built into the subdivision running south from Ladue road and one of them already has been paved for some distance, past initially-built display houses. The streets are to be called Ladue Estates Drive, East Ladue Estates Drive and West Ladue Estates Drive.

A gas main to supply heating fuel for the homes was built from Spoede road to the new subdivision even when it wasn't known gas could be had soon from the utility mains, so that the installation wouldn't have to be made later, on an "afterthought" basis. Complete systems of stormwater and sanitary sewers, with disposal equipment, also were installed.

All homes in the subdivision are to be large, luxuriously designed in the typical Goldberg manner, but will range from two through four-bedroom arrangements.

A Goldberg plan always includes a rumpus room, considered one of the mist important adjuncts to daily living in a home.

Check Trees Now For Bagworms and Get Them Sprayed

County Agricultural Extension Agent Paul M. Bernard advises residents of city and suburban areas (no less than rural areas) to check now for the presence of bagworms in shade trees and, if they're present, do or have something done about them.

Bagworms infest many types of trees, but especially like such things as walnuts and mulberries, which have thick succulent leaves for the worms to feed upon. They also infest many types of evergreens and even red buds.

Agent Bernard points out that many types of control recommended by the Agricultural Extension Service require the use of expensive and highly intricate machinery to get full and proper coverage with spray materials . . . especially in dealing with taller trees. But, he said, the St. Louis area is fortunate to have a good organization of arborists striving to perform adequate services at as low cost as possible and an association has been formed to pass on to the public improved practices and policies of tree preservation along with latest findings in applied sciences for tree work.

If the hiring of an arborist to spray bagworms isn't feasible, then next best thing is for the householder to cut off infected areas, holding the brush firmly in order not to shake worms out on the ground (keep the infected material in a cardboard box, for instance) and arrange to burn it.

Old-timers used to set fire to the stub of an old broom and hold it under the webs of worms, but this is a poor procedure, since some worms inevitably fall free.

In addition to bagworms other things currently requiring checking are presence of elm-leaf beetle, and the presence of poison ivy, poison oak and ragweed.

Ragweed should be kill-sprayed, cut or pulled now, since it soon will head up and fill the air in late August with irritating pollen.

Ivy can be killed by use of sprays especially designed for it.

Names of commercial arborists can be obtained from the county extension office in Clayton.

Rains Help Trees Here

cial sprays to protect elms from the insects that spread elm diseases.

Valued shade trees should be fed biennially with fertilizer put deep into the ground over the area covered by the spread of the branches. Although this may be done more easily (and probably more safely) by an arborist, the home owner may follow directions given in a Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin by August Beilmann, superintendent of the Gray Summit, Mo., Arboretum.

Irritate or Irrigate?

Arborist Beilmann also recommends application of an organic mulch which supplies some nourishment, and at the same time conserves moisture, and insulates the roots. Large areas of mulch, which may look unsightly, can be concealed by a carpet of green ground cover. Such plants as myrtle, ivy, pachysandra, or even violets look quite at home beneath a tree, and they won't interfere when it is necessary to renew the mulch.

Supplying the proper quantity of water is more difficult than it sounds. So many beginning gardeners are apt to follow the too-often-and-too-little system. That means a surface sprinkling (properly termed "irritation," instead of "irrigation"), which does more harm than good. The next day, when the soil still looks dry, another shallow application is made, and so it goes. The water never has a chance to penetrate into the soil, where it is really needed.

On the other extreme are the gardeners who quite literally kill their trees with kindness—and in this instance, drown them with an excess of water. Overwatering is a real hazard in some areas of St. Louis county, where the soil is so tight that there is practically no sub-surface drainage. When a plant was removed from one Webster Groves garden recently, water actually welled up into the hole.

Unfortunately, when a tree starts to "drown" (or suffocate from lack of air, as a result of too much water in the soil) the leaves wilt, and it may look as though it is still suffering from lack of water. The anxious gardener may pour on more water, which just hastens the death of the tree.

Test Soil Occasionally.

Properly, water should be applied in one spot until it has a chance to penetrate from 6 to 12 inches deep. A check can actually be made by digging into the soil. Then water should be withheld for a week or so, depending on the weather and also on the texture and condition of the soil. In a soil of good texture, air is pulled into the soil as the water drains away. An inexperienced gardener should test the soil from time to time, to see how dry it is both on the surface and in the layer just beneath.

Home owners who must contend with tough clay hardpans found in some areas of St. Louis county must exercise extra precautions. Over-watering is more hazardous for newly planted trees and shrubs than for those that have had time to become established. Frequent victims are magnolias, dogwoods, rhododendrons and other plants that have a reputation for liking abundant water.

However, this "drowning" of trees can also be the result of prolonged rainy spells. For that reason it may be wise to check the soil about new plantings if the rains continue.

In extreme instances it may be necessary to drain off the water with a line of four-inch drain tile. The tiles should be installed at about the depth of the bottom of the tree ball (from two to three feet, depending on the size of the tree). If possible, they should actually carry the water away to some sort of surface drain.

EXTERIOR TRIM PAINT

When buying white paint for the exterior trim of a house, be sure to tell the dealer what material was used in the construction of the body of the house. The self-cleansing type of exterior white paint can be used on the trim of a house only when the body is also painted white. Where a house is of unpainted masonry—or of a color different than the trim—use a non-chalking house paint or one that has only a limited degree of chalking.

BLOCK'S MOISTURE.

One of the advantages of the highly water impervious latex paint film is the use as a vapor barrier.

House Plan

out traipsing through the living room.

The noisy family room and kitchen area is separate from the quiet living room-dining section. There is no cross traffic.

The house does provide room for a family. There is eating space for five in the kitchen. The women wanted five feet of closet hanger space per person. The closets here provide a total of 37 linear feet of hanger space.

Garage at Option.

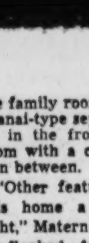

The architect points out that there are three optional locations for a future garage: (1) on the utility room side with a breezeway between house and garage; (2) in the rear, opposite the family room and porch with a lanai-type separation between; (3) in the front of the dining room with a court-type separation between.

"Other features which make this home a housewife's delight," Matern says, "are a planter-flanked front entrance, a weather protected front door, a large front foyer, bathroom, located to serve as a powder room, two linen closets and one towel closet, basement entrance in mud room adjacent to service door, a log burning fireplace, and excellent location of rear porch and exits for future expansion of outdoor living facilities."

A study plan for this home (HW-8A) may be be had for 35c by addressing the building editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Room 602, 1111 Olive street, St. Louis 1, Mo. You can take this study plan to your mortgage lender or builder to get rough estimates of construction costs, after which working blueprints and specification sheets may be had direct from the architect if you decide to use the plan for your home.

Subdivision Opening Set For Today

Formal opening has been planned today for a new subdivision in University City called Hawthorne Manor. It is named after the Hawthorne school, being right across Carleton avenue from it at the Hanley road intersection. It also is across Carleton from one of University City's parks.

Hawthorne Manor is a project of Builder Samuel Ladd, who was an architect before he was a builder and who designs the houses he builds.

The site formerly was a nursery, with greenhouses, etc., and constitutes one of few remaining larger tracts in University City available to be subdivided. One new street is to be extended through the tract, from Hanley road, but all houses so far started face Carleton avenue, a street that has been complete and paved for many years.

Ladd has a house of unique style, with full basement, an attached carport and a specially designed utility and "mud room" (as a farmer's wife would call it) just off the carport and leading into kitchen and basement areas. Housewives, as a rule, think a room in this position, where family members may come in from bad weather outside and shed dirt and wet garments before entering the main part of the house, is one of the most valuable assets a home can have. It saves housework.

All of Ladd's homes, ranchers in brick, will have three bedrooms, two baths and space has been saved by use of sliding doors.

The display house is at 7500 Carleton.

Few Shortages.
Production holdups, because of labor or materials shortages, are reported in only a relatively small number of areas.

Little Change In Business Rents, Prices

Rents and prices of retail business and office buildings of good quality are at the same or slightly higher levels compared with a year ago, and vacancy rates are low for the majority of the country, Clarence M. Turley, St. Louis, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, reports.

Turley's summary of the current commercial property situation is based on a semi-annual survey of the association's division of research in 220 market areas throughout the country.

Looking to the second half of this year, 92 per cent of the market reporters expect adequately maintained detail business structures in neighborhoods untouched by blight to stay at current price levels or rise.

For modern office buildings, the forecast is for a rise in values in 28 per cent of the market areas and stable prices in two-thirds of the nation.

Retail business rental space in better locations was reported to be in more active demand and bringing higher rents than a year ago, but deteriorated shops or those in neglected areas are difficult to rent even at lower prices in many cities, Turley said.

Few Vacancies.
In general, unoccupied retail business units represented a small share of the total supply. Half of the areas included in the survey said that vacancies were 1 per cent or less, while 24 per cent of the communities listed them at 2 per cent. Rents are said to be the same in 60 per cent of the cities and higher in 31 per cent, compared with a year ago.

Prices of retail business structures in the downtown area are generally the same as they were a year ago, 67 per cent of the communities reported, while 24 per cent found them to be higher. Many of the repsondents credited concerted steps to attract shoppers to the central city area, such as parking lots, with this price situation. Two thirds of the returns said that transfers were holding their own with a year ago.

In retail business properties in outlying areas, 47 per cent of the market areas found the rate of transfers to be higher than a year ago, and 42 per cent listed them at the same level. Prices similar to those of a year ago or higher accompanied the active market, Turley said.

Despite a sustained volume of construction that has added millions of square feet of office space, the demand for such space of a quality character has continued and has strengthened the market for new and well maintained office buildings, he added. Occupancy ratios and rental income from older and less desirable quarters have been forced downward and deficient units have been demolished in many cities.

No Tenant Shortage.
In the average community, there is no tenant shortage for prime properties, Turley said. For 72 per cent of the nation, office building vacancies were said to be 2 per cent or less and rents were reported to be the same or higher in nine of 10 areas.

In one third of the areas reporting, the value of office buildings in outlying areas has gone up in the past year, while in 60 per cent of the country it has continued at 1955 levels. The number of transfers increased in a third of the communities, and remained the same in 55 per cent.

Downtown office buildings are selling at prices similar to those of a year ago in two thirds of the country, but rises were listed for 24 per cent of the reporting areas. Transfers continued at the same rate in two thirds of areas, and gained in 17 per cent.

Peat Gains Acceptance

In this age of surburban living, the use of peat in gardening has gained acceptance for uses not generally known a few years ago.

Peat is decayed vegetation obtained from deposits of partly decomposed plant life. Peat is organic matter. As it decays it releases beneficial bacteria and increases the capacity of soil to retain moisture. When mixed into soil, peat gives it the physical structure for plant growth.

4,000,000 Cars Became Scrap in '55

By FRANK SNYDER

DETROIT (INS)—For every two cars produced last year an old worn-out car went to the scrap yard.

The industry turned out approximately 8,000,000 cars in 1955 while during the same period, according to the Bureau of Public Roads, nearly 4,000,000 used cars reached the end of their life span.

The net increase in the nation's automobile, truck and bus population last year was 7.2 per cent over that of 1954. Registrations in 1955 totaled 62,760,395 vehicles, compared with 1954's 58,563,250 units.

Planning on taking your car abroad with you this summer? If you are, first invest about $100 for the installation of export pistons and head gasket in the car's engine.

This recommendation comes from E. J. Krause, special service manager of the Buick division of General Motors.

The reason for making the engine revisions is due to the low octane value of gasoline in most European countries.

Krause said that the high compression ratio of American cars equipped with automatic transmissions required a minimum octane fuel of 96.

"In Spain and Portugal," Krause explained, "the only gasoline available is 79 octane. Most other European countries, including England, have fuel with a high octane of 89. That's too low for the domestic compression ratio in effect today."

Gasoline of low octane value causes a motor to ping on grades. The ping is caused by the detonation of the fuel and if prolonged, according to Krause, it can cause serious damage to the motor.

"So the best thing to do before taking your car overseas," he said, "is to have the compression ratio reduced to 8.4 to 1 by the installation of export pistons and head gasket. Naturally, this will cut down slightly on the engine performance, but it'll leave plenty of power."

A Detroit Plymouth dealer has been offering "the first reflective automobiles" (cars that glow in the dark) as an aid in preventing night-time accidents.

The cars are made to "glow" from a reflective over-coating like that used on highway markers. The over-coating is applied to the lower part of the car as one tone of a two- or three-tone finish. It is available in green, blue, brown and magenta red.

The manufacturer says a reflectorized car is visible under the oncoming headlights of another car for a distance of a quarter of a mile.

The Jeep is being built for the first time in Turkey under an arrangement between Willys Motors, Inc., and its distributor in that country.

The Jeeps are being assembled in a new $2,100,000 Turkish-American plant near Istanbul which has an annual capacity of 5000 units. It employs 500 Turks.

A Ford Motor Co. executive says that in relation to the size of the average weekly pay check, cars cost less today than in 1941.

R. J. Eggert, Ford division marketing research director, said that "in 1941, it took the average worker 31 weeks of his pay to buy a Ford, while in 1956 only 26 weeks' pay is needed."

Liquor Men Meet

Distributors and company executives representing Seagram-Distillers Company, Calvert Distillers Company, and Four Roses Distillers Company, all of "The House of Seagram," hold their first combined sales meetings at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, during the week of July 8. This meeting gathers the largest aggregation of liquor industry executives ever to attend any company meeting. Among St. Louisans planning to attend were James V. Martin, Robert E. Tully, Charles Jetty, C. A. Noland, Harry Hendin, Erwin Harms, John Lavin, Russell Hermann, James Steffan, O. J. Cloughly, Jules Gerson, Rudy Brand, Jack Gordon and Joseph Rothberg.

New Source Of Mortgage Money Sought

By ROBERT F. MORISON

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UP)—Attention of home builders and lenders is focusing more sharply on fast-growing pension funds as a possible source of mortgage money.

Pension funds have become more attractive as regular mortgage investors, like insurance companies, acquire just about as many mortgages as they want.

The tightness of the money market is at the bottom of the search for new sources of funds. But a basic change in American life is contributing to the interest in pension funds as the possible answer.

Before World War II Americans largely provided for their retirement and old age by saving their money and putting it in banks, savings and loan associations and other depositories. These in turn invested the savings to a large extent in mortgages.

After World War II, privately administered pensions rapidly assumed large proportions. By 1950 their total assets were about $6,400,000,000.

At the end of 1954 these assets had risen to $11,300,000,000 and are increasing by more than $1,500,000,000 a year. The funds are increasingly being invested in corporate bonds and common stock and only to a small extent in mortgages.

The reason for this preference, Government experts say, is that buying stocks and bonds involves no detailed investigation of properties. Nor does it mean keeping complicated books to record monthly payments.

Builders and lenders, hopeful that pension funds may eventually be tapped on a large scale to relieve the strain on existing mortgage investment funds, generally feel the main task is to "sell" pension funds on the value of putting their money in mortgages.

Most do not think this will be an easy job but are willing to try.

Two solutions have been advanced. One, started by Washington, D.C., housing expert Miles L. Colean and known as Investors' Central Management Corp., New York City, got under way the first of the year. So far it has confined its efforts to organizing and staffing its office and contacting pension funds. It plans to locate good home mortgages, sell them to pension funds and handle the monthly servicing of the mortgages as well as the initial investigation.

Home Builders' Plan.

The other plan, suggested some time ago by the National Association of Home Builders, calls for a corporation to buy up mortgages and sell stocks or bonds in itself to pension funds. The corporation would pay dividends and interest according to earnings on the mortgages. This, too, would relieve pension funds of the need for handling paper work connected with such investments.

Government experts do not believe the first plan is the answer since the cost of servicing mortgages would be passed along to the investing pension funds. This would mean that the rate of earnings would drop to reflect this cost.

The second plan has more merit, but still a "middle man" is inserted who must be compensated for his work. That, too, would cut down earnings.

However, Colean and others feel that over a long period earnings on mortgages "stack up well" with those of corporate stocks and bonds.

Rolling Them Out

The 1956 edition of Ward's Automotive Year Book points out that in the 11 post war years the industry has turned out almost 51,000,000 new cars.

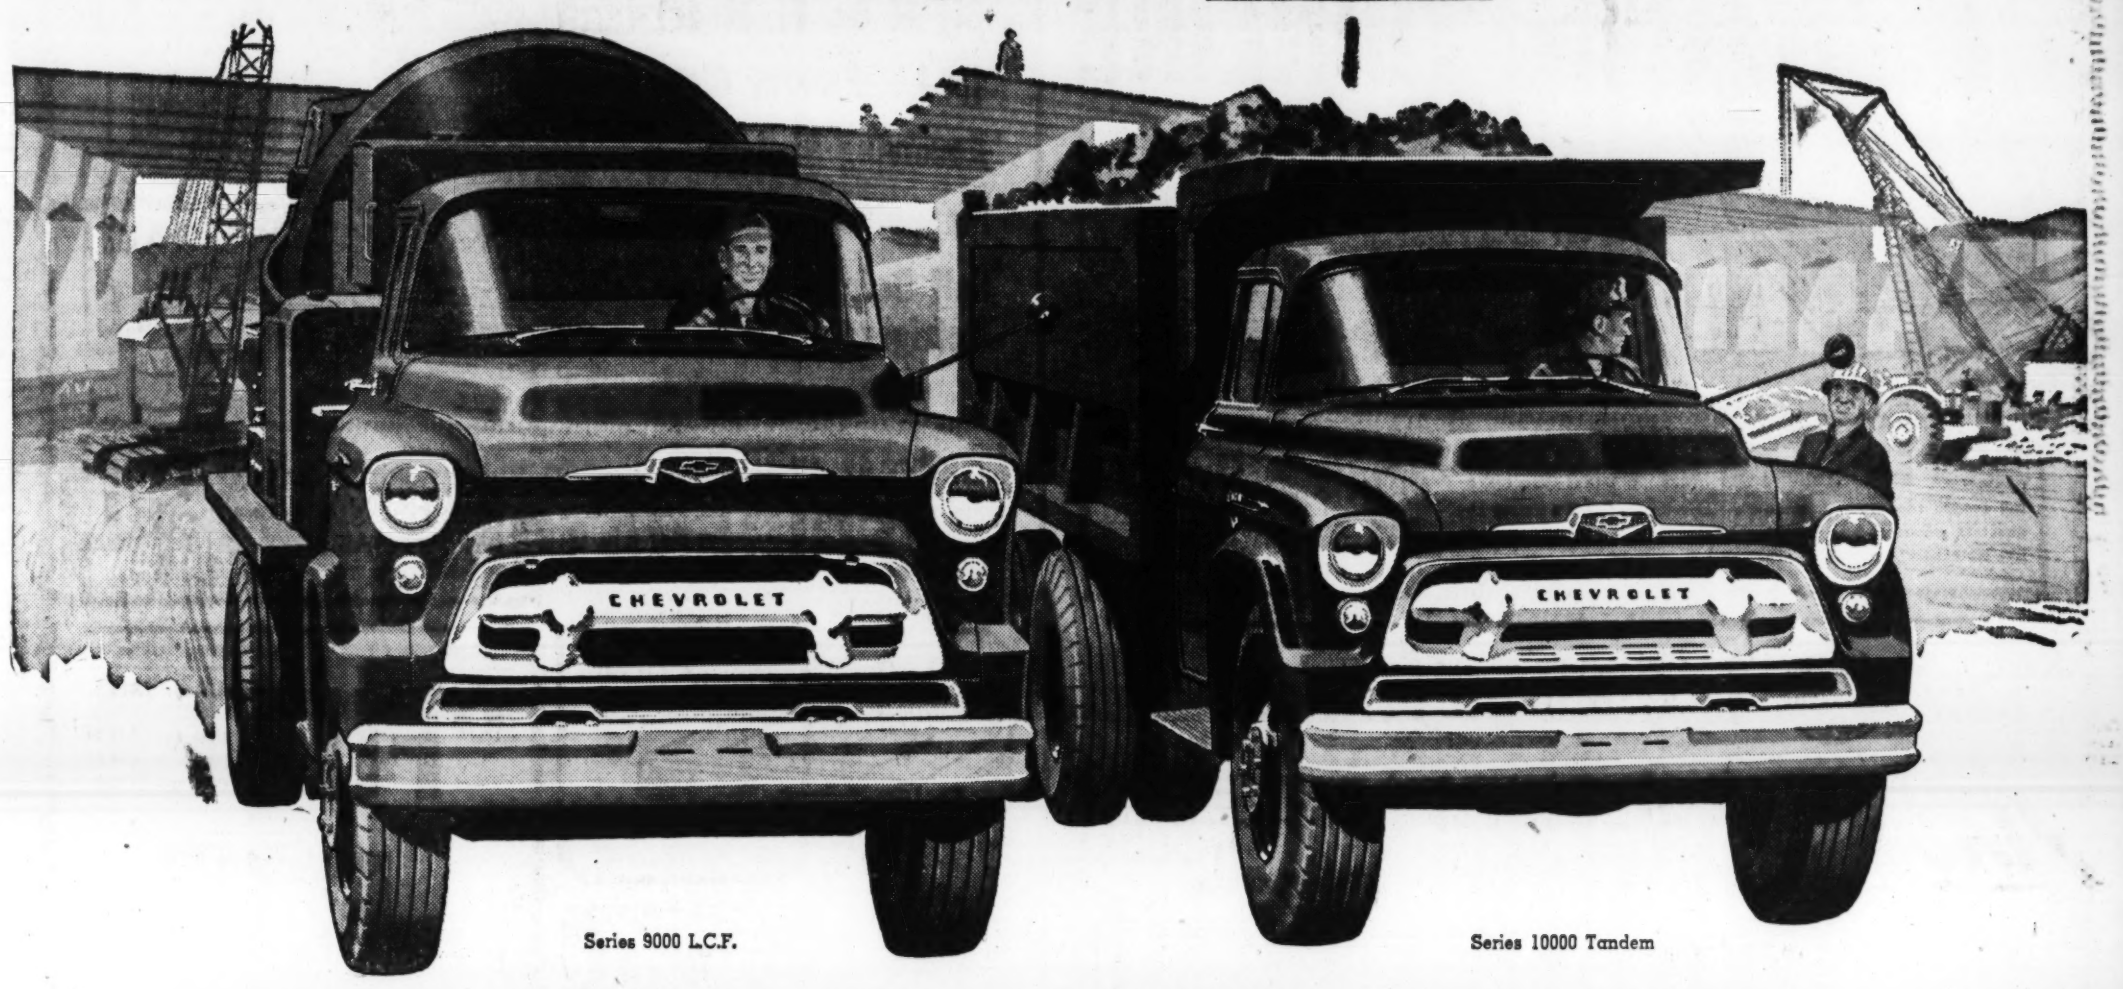

This compares with the 73,000,000 built from 1900 through 1941.

While the five-million-cars-a-year figure never was reached in the pre-war era, domestic car manufacturers have produced more than 5,000,000 cars a year in six of the past 11 years.

The number of automobiles visiting United States national parks has doubled since 1946.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH PICTURES

The Urbino Bible

Reproductions Acquired by Vatican Film Library At St. Louis University Published for First Time

Enlargement of third medallion shows the extraordinary detail achieved by the artist, who even added tiny portraits in plaiting that frames the larger picture. The representation of earth reveals the fifteenth century concept of Europe, Asia and Africa before Columbus' discoveries. In actual size, medallion is two inches in diameter.

First page of Genesis is the most lavishly decorated in the Urbino Bible. It is shown approximately half its actual size (17⅞ by 23½ inches); artist left little margin. Dominating the page is large initial "I" which contains seven medallions, each portraying God and an episode of creation. From top down, they represent God creating heaven, making the earth, creating land and seas, placing the earth in the heavens, creating animal life, blessing the first man, resting after creation. The initial is first letter of word "In"; the "n" appears at the top of dark shading on right edge of the initial. Genesis starts with words "In principio" (In the beginning). The ornate border includes seven medallions illustrating incidents from Genesis: God forms Eve (top left); Adam and Eve are tempted (top right); they are banished from Eden (middle left); Eve and her children watch Adam till soil (middle right); Cain and Abel make offerings to God (bottom left); Cain kills Abel (bottom middle); Cain hunting with son sees face in bush (bottom right). Book's title appears in middle of border at top.

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

THE URBINO BIBLE, one of the world's most beautiful books, has been seen by relatively few persons since it was completed in 1478. A masterpiece of Italian Renaissance art, it was held by the Urbino family until presented to the Vatican Library in 1658, where it remained hidden away for almost three centuries. Even after it was placed on exhibit in the Vatican museum, visitors could see only two pages of the opened book in its glass display case.

It was there that the Reverend L. J. Daly, S.J., of St. Louis University saw the elegantly illuminated, handwritten Bible. He was in Rome to direct microfilming of the Vatican's priceless manuscript collection for the Knights of Columbus Vatican Film Library at St. Louis University. Struck by the rich colors of the Bible's fine miniature paintings, he regretted the unavoidable loss of the book's splendor in black-and-white microfilms. So he asked and received permission to photograph its embellishments in color. A few of the 700 slides he had made are shown here and on Page Four—the first color reproductions ever published of the Urbino Bible's gorgeous decorations.

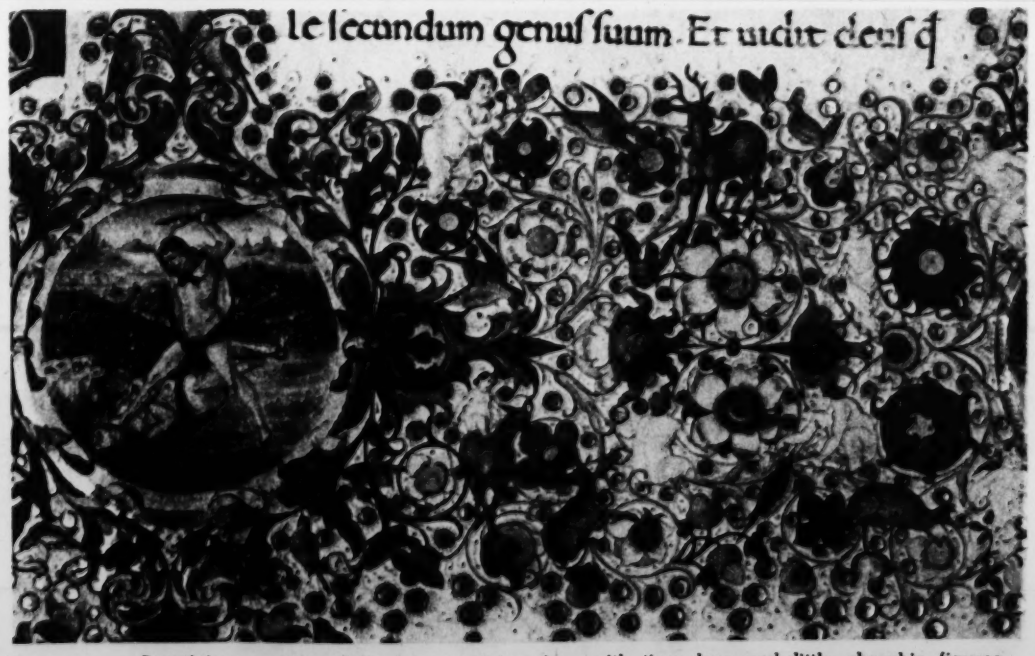

The illuminated manuscript was commissioned by Duke Federico di Montefeltro, wealthy ruler of the small province of Urbino in what is now northern Italy. The nobleman instructed Vespasiano da Bisticci, noted Florentine bookseller, to have made a codex of the Holy Writ that would surpass in magnificence any previous manuscript. How well Vespasiano executed the commission is evident in the two-volume work.

The text was written on exceedingly white vellum (sheep or calfskin) in fine Renaissance script by a professional scribe named Ugo Comminelli. Only the title pages of the 45 books of the Old Testament and the 27 books of the New Testament are ornamented. Except for decorative initials here and there, the rest of the manuscript's 1108 pages are simply filled with text, set down in two columns in a neat hand that imitates earlier Carolingian script. Unknown artists painted the brilliant ornamentation, but the styles of two famous fifteenth century Italian miniaturists, Attavante and Francesco d'Antonio, are recognizable.

St. Louis University plans to make duplicates of the slides available to other schools for use as teaching aids. They will be ready sometime next fall, Father Daly said.

Title is written in letters of gold and blue on scroll borne by two angels amid foliated branch work that forms main element of border. Birds are perched here and there in the vine, and flitting among the flowers are bees and butterflies. Delicate gold filigree that fills the initial can be seen in letter's top right portion (lower left in photo). The "n" of the first word also is visible. This reproduction of detail is about actual size.

Detail from portion of border containing illustration of Cain slaying his brother Abel is also reproduced about actual size. Besides birds, bees and butterflies, this section of the flowering vine is populated with tiny deer and little cherubic figures called putti; one of them is riding a deer. As with picture puzzles of former years, the longer the viewer looks at the decoration the more he is likely to see hidden in it.

Visitors to Trade Fair at Poznan Witness Brief, Bloody Mutiny

Angry demonstrators raise a blood-stained flag during the height of the Poznan rioting. The marchers carried old Polish flags, tore down Soviet flags when they found them displayed. An estimated 30,000 persons, men, women and children, were reported to have taken part.

Pedestrians hurry across square near the Poznan town hall during the uprising. Unofficial Polish sources said the rioting stemmed from a misunderstanding between teams of workers and management at the Stalin Steel Works over living conditions and wages.

Strikers surround one of the tanks rushed by Polish Red troops into the heart of the city to help crush the rioting. Army tanks rolled throughout Poznan, blocking traffic arteries, guarding government buildings and important business houses. Marchers captured two tanks that were parked near a bank.

POZNAN, THE FOURTH largest city of Poland, was playing host to thousands of visitors to its annual trade fair. These included Western business men, present for the first time since World War II, following the West's relaxation of controls over trade with the East. To their surprise, they became witnesses of the bloodiest revolt behind Russia's Iron Curtain since the uprising of East Germans in June, 1953.

The fair was drawing to a close when workers gathered outside the struck Stalin Steel Works for an apparently peaceful demonstration. They began a parade toward the center of the city, with local Communist authorities looking on tolerantly. According to some Western eyewitnesses, soldiers mingled with the strikers. These accounts said the workers marched into the main city square chanting "Bread, bread, bread," became angered when a marcher was felled by one of several shots fired by government troops.

For hours, the strikers ranged the city. They stormed Communist party headquarters, freed inmates of the city prison and set it afire. After capturing a radio station used to jam Western broadcasts, they hurled its equipment into the street. Gunfire sounded throughout the night. Rebellious workers were reported holding out two days later.

Radio Warsaw reported the death toll at 48, with nearly 300 persons wounded. Travelers returning to Western Germany regarded these figures as low. Some of them said a government purge was in progress throughout the large industrial city of 365,000 population. Poland's Red government blamed "imperialist agents" and "underground reactionaries" for the outbreak. The United States, meanwhile, offered to ship thousands of tons of free food into Poland.

Poznan (see map) is 180 miles west of Poland's capital, Warsaw, and 150 miles east of Berlin, Germany. When it was in Prussian hands before World War I, the original spelling was Germanized to Posen. Poznan has long been a flourishing commercial center on both sides of the Warta River. Most of its industries are connected with agriculture, but it is also an important manufacturer of machinery and locomotives.

Associated Press Photos except as noted

Two men walk past public buildings shrouded in smoke from heaps of paper left burning by the rioters. Marchers scrawled the words "We Want Bread" on scraps of paper that were handed among crowds.

AIR-CONDITIONED BUS

St. Louisans Greet Cooled Conveyance With Obvious Enthusiasm

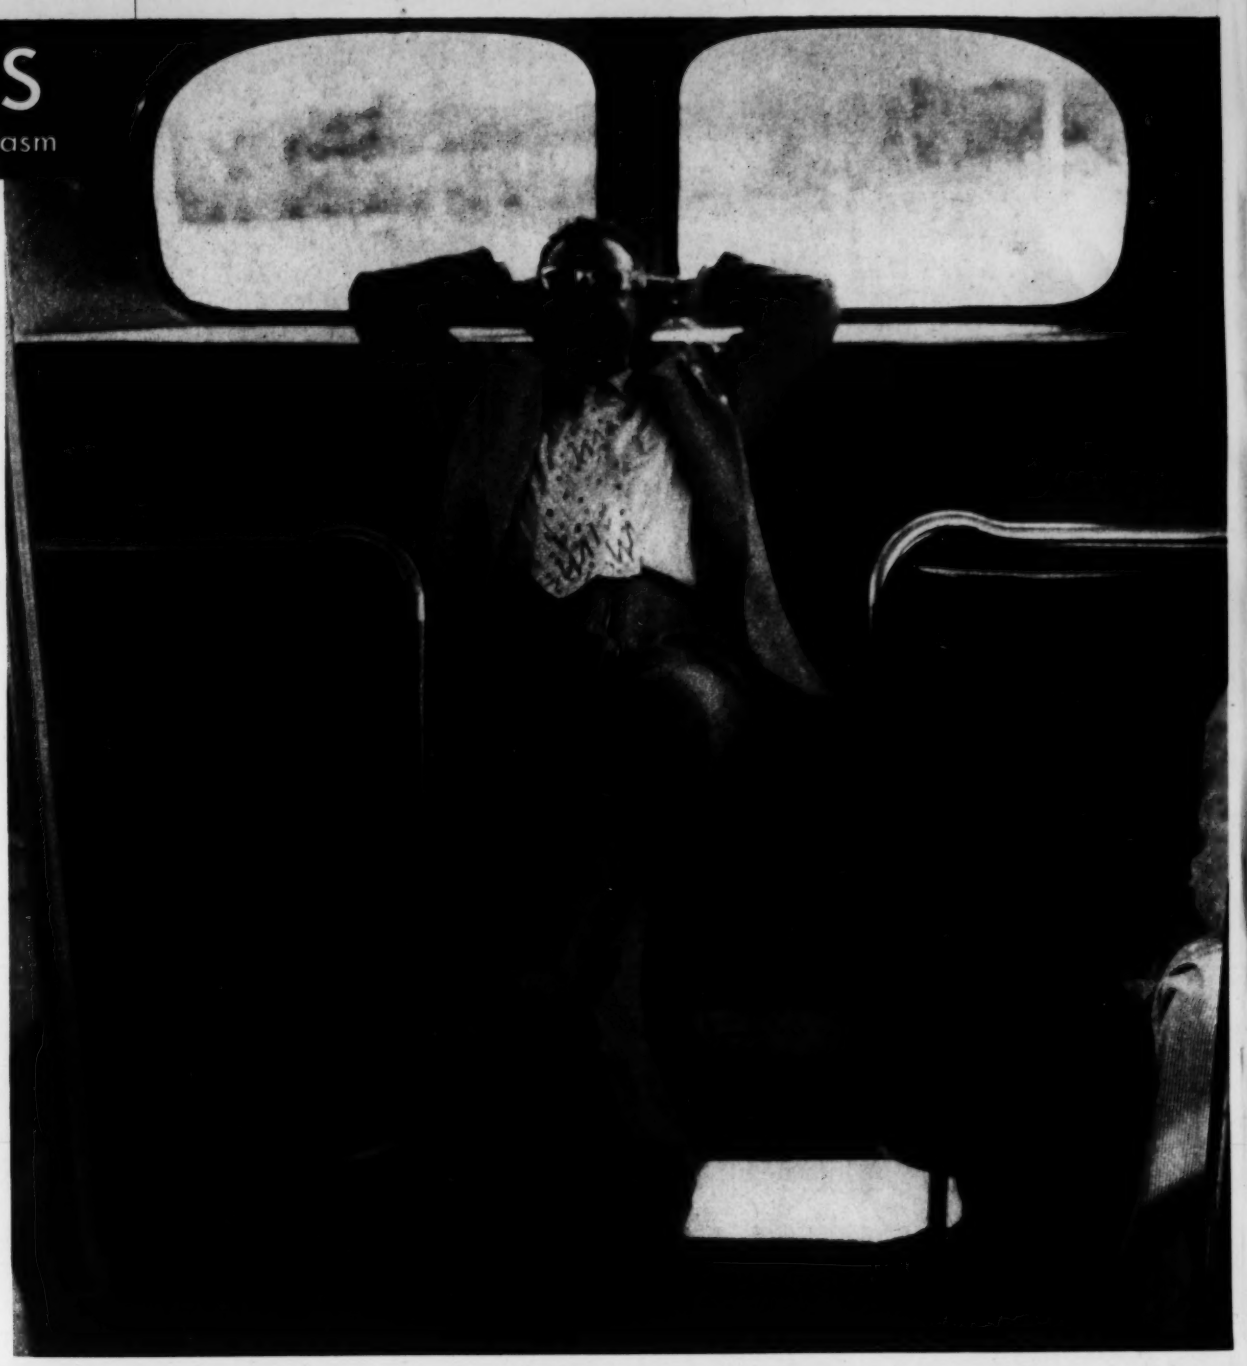

At a Page boulevard express stop, passengers leave the 91-degree heat of the street for 74-degree temperature inside bus, which has signs to advertise its rolling air conditioner. A thermostat controls temperature by causing unit to compensate for door openings and body heat of passengers.

Cooling unit is mounted on roof of bus at rear. Cool air enters bus through three ceiling grilles. Air also is dehumidified.

Nick Eckerle, a Public Service Company maintenance superintendent, rides the experimental bus with thermometers and a hygrometer, constantly checks changes in temperature and moisture content of air. He also logs number of passengers, number of times doors are opened.

Smiling contentedly, passenger with rear seat to himself enjoys the pleasantly cool air.

Supervisor William Doyle, in uniform, hands out questionnaires and explains that the bus may not make the same run next day.

ON RECENT summer mornings and afternoons, some Public Service Company riders have enthusiastically taken part in an experiment. Stepping off the sun-baked sidewalk, they have climbed into the cool comfort of St. Louis' first air-conditioned bus in commuter operation. Their exclamations of pleased surprise have proclaimed the innovation a success, at least from the customer's point of view. One commented, on a questionnaire given to each cooled rider, that she hadn't seen so many smiling faces on a bus since childhood picnics.

Air conditioning was installed on the 40-passenger experimental bus in the company's shop at cost of about $2500. The bus is being tried on express lines, which permit longer running periods between door openings. It is being switched from one run to another to test passenger reaction and to work out operational "bugs."

The bus is equipped with a five-ton cooling unit, a capacity that would be adequate for a large house. Before it was installed, the bus roof was removed and insulation material put in. Heat-resistant glass was installed in windows which were sealed shut. A 50-passenger bus is being air conditioned to join the original one on express runs for additional tests throughout the summer.

Girls look over cards handed to each rider of the bus, discuss answers to queries.

A woman comments on marvel of modern air temperature control, as another passenger thanks Driver Mike Mee in leaving.

With an exaggerated brow-mopping gesture, man on curb expresses good-natured envy of passengers in their comfortable surroundings.

Woman dons light coat in the cooled bus. Temperature averages 10 to 15 degrees below that of the outside.

Bible's Exquisite Miniature Art

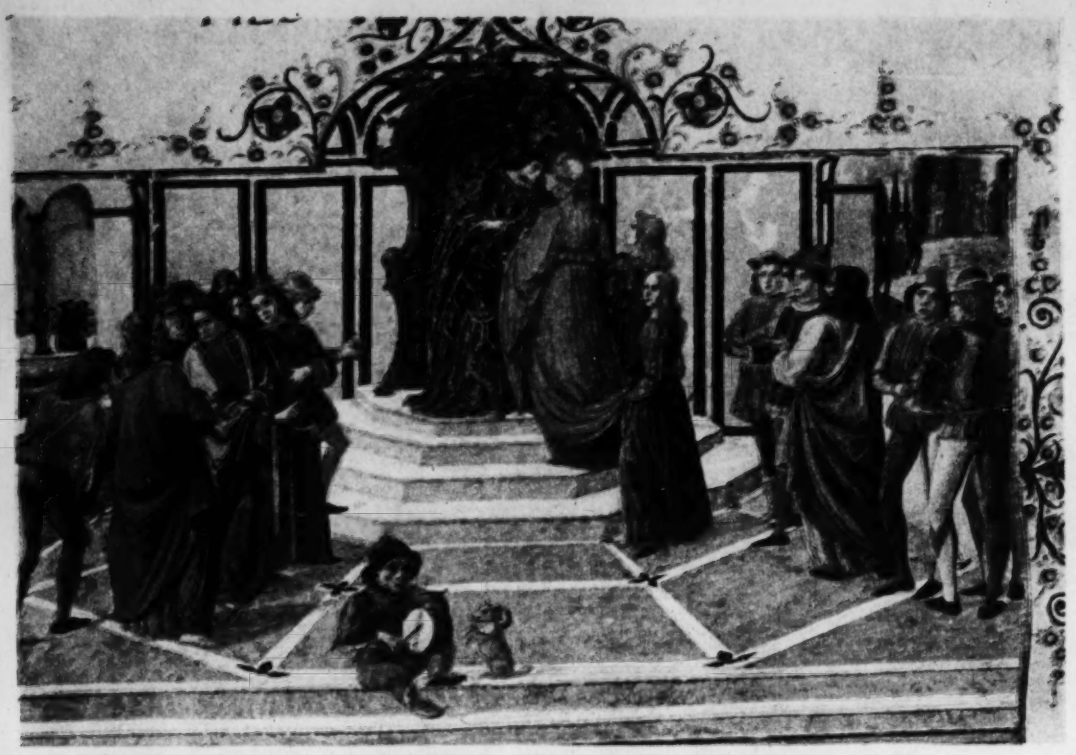

Illustration on title page of Book of Esther in the Urbino Bible depicts court scene in which Queen Esther is greeted by King Assuerus in the presence of court nobles. Dwarf jester sits on step, beating drum and playing flute for performing dog. In distance at left and right, tiny figures move about in separate scenes. The illustration, which is 10 inches wide, is reproduced here about three-fourths its actual size.

Detail from Esther court scene shows exquisite details in portrayal of nobles at left of throne. Smaller in size than a thumbnail, each face is well modeled and possesses a distinctive expression. Despite the minuteness of his work, artist put an intricate collar on one man's cloak; even the eyes of men in rear, barely discernible in over-all scene, have expression. Figures are three times larger than in the original.

Likeness of St. Jerome, who translated Bible into Latin from Hebrew and Greek around 400 A.D., appears in initial letter "S" in Bible's prologue. Ornament is reproduced actual size.

Center portion of illustration from Book of Esdras portrays King Cyrus returning vessels to Solomon's temple. Detailed landscape, visible through rear window, is Renaissance painter's device to give illusion of depth before discovery of perspective.

Vacation Tour of Missouri By Air

100 Persons, in 40-Plane Caravan, Spend Three Days in Circuit of the Ozarks

The Edward Evers and Burton Duenkes board the Duenke twin-motor, four-place plane at Rolla for take-off.

TO PUBLICIZE THE STATE as an attraction for flying vacations and weekend flights, the Missouri Division of Resources and Development promoted what was described as the first vacation Missouri Air Tour. Some 100 persons participated in the venture, traveling in about 40 small planes. The three-day trip — including about eight hours in the air — began at Mexico, with stops, in order, at Camdenton, Branson, Van Buren, Bismarck, Rolla and Linn Creek. Landing fields were of the sod type which is not used by commercial planes. Instead of formation flying, the planes took off at their own discretion. Bull Shoals Lake, Lake Taneycomo and Lake of the Ozarks were among landmarks that contributed to ever-changing scenery for air viewing. There were side trips by motor to Ozark springs and caves. Only discomfort experienced by participants was minor sunburn, which plays no favorites in the air or on the ground.

At the Bismarck airport, multi-colored planes line edge of field as a late arrival taxis in. Planes that appear blue are really shining aluminum catching reflection of the color in the sky.

Light plane makes pass over Grand Glaize Bridge, which spans the Lake of the Ozarks. Boats churn the water far below. Resorts are spotted on cleared areas of lake front.

An air tourist packs her traveling bag before take-off. Group lived out of suitcases. Busses transported members of tour to hotels and cabins en route, took them on sight-seeing junkets.

Machines That Analyze

MAKING CHART OF MOTIONS

Jay Goldman, assistant professor of industrial engineering at Washington University, marks tape coming out of UNOPAR's recording oscillograph. The tape provides a complete record of the motion under study.

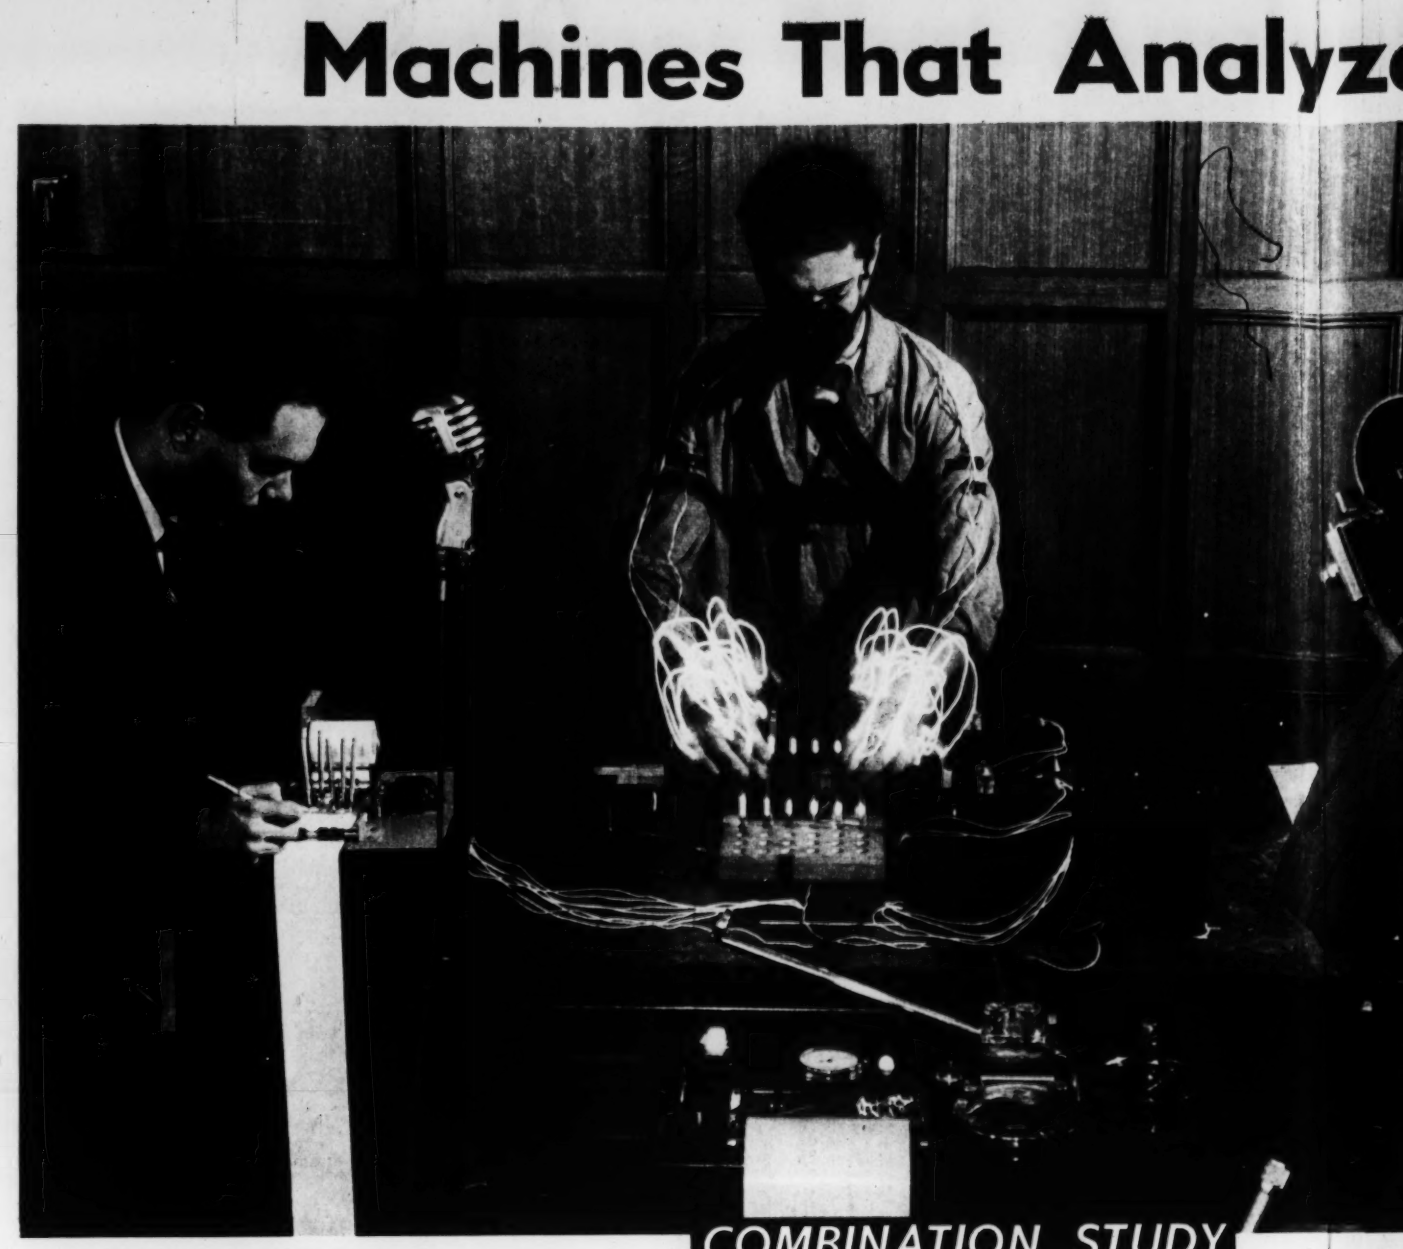

RECORD OF A HAND MOVEMENT

This UNOPAR record charts motion in one plane of subject's hand being slid along a straight horizontal bar. It reads from left to right; the straight line indicates hand at rest. Hand started to move at point A, picked up speed rapidly, then slowed slightly (downward curve) before hand struck barrier at end of bar and motion stopped abruptly at point B. Slight rebounds of hand after hitting stop are indicated by irregular waves at point C. Each space between vertical lines on tape represents time interval of .000665 of a minute; thus, time between points A and B can be computed at .0089775 of a minute, or about a half-second. Other charts, made simultaneously, show movements in other planes.

SOUND GENERATOR

Technician checks UNOPAR's electronic heart which generates the high-frequency sound emitted by speaker. This unit also amplifies the sound waves picked up by microphones, converts them to usable voltage and electronically differentiates and integrates the velocity to measure acceleration and distance.

COMBINATION STUDY

In a demonstration research experiment for motion and time study, utilizing a variety of devices and techniques, a subject performs a simple hand operation, moving pegs from one board to another. He wears an oxygen mask for measuring oxygen consumption with Metabulator (foreground); lights on middle finger of each hand trace pattern of motion. Sound from UNOPAR speaker on his wrist is picked up by microphone and carried to recorder. Electrodes on inside of arms lead to electrocardiograph for measurement of heart action. Movement of hands breaks light beams between two photoelectric cells to give another record. Goldman (left) reads chart of kymograph, an interval timing device, and cameraman (right) makes motion picture of operation for permanent film record.

SOUND DEVICE, ATTACHED TO WRIST

Student-subject Ed Linde operates a drill press in UNOPAR test chamber. Motion of hand in the simple industrial operation is traced by sound, emanating from speaker on wrist, that is picked up by microphone.

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

IN TODAY'S COMPLICATED TECHNOLOGICAL society, analyzing motion as an index to job performance is becoming increasingly important to employers and employes. Information about work done by men and women performing labor, and the work that could be expected of them, is necessary in determining production schedules and controls, amount of equipment to be used, distribution of work, and cost controls. It also is essential in dealing with problems of fatigue and boredom, as well as in setting fair wage rates.

Human beings are complex creatures, and scientific analysis of their work is extremely difficult. Devices and techniques used by industrial engineers in trying to analyze work through motion and time studies just about run the gamut of gadgetry. They include slow motion movies, photoelectric cells, body contact switches, oxygen consumption and heart-beat measurements, time-exposure photographs with light patterns, time-interval recordings, stop watches and ordinary observation. But all these still do not provide a yardstick that is complete or accurate enough.

Trying another tack, Washington University's industrial engineering department has developed a new research tool, called the Universal Operator Performance Analyzer and Recorder, or UNOPAR for short. It is an electronic device that utilizes inaudible high-frequency sound waves and the Doppler principle to measure the components of motion—velocity, acceleration, deceleration and distance.

The Doppler principle concerns the increase of a sound's pitch as the sound source approaches, and its falling off as the source moves away from the hearer. It is commonly observed in the sound of a locomotive whistle as a train approaches and goes away from the listener.

The device operates with a small speaker attached to the body member whose motions are under study. At present, only hand motions in a simple operation are being analyzed. Beyond the range of human hearing, sound waves emitted by the speaker are picked up by three microphones in the immediate area, each oriented in a different plane to obtain three-dimensional information. As the hand and speaker move toward or away from a microphone, the difference in sound frequency is converted into an electrical impulse which is recorded on moving tape or graph paper. This gives a "picture" of the motion being investigated.

Professor Gerald Nadler, head of the university's industrial engineering department and developer of UNOPAR, recently was awarded a $12,800 contract by the Office of Naval Research for a special motion and time study in which the new device will play an important role. Purpose of the project is to determine learning, training and fatigue effects on a person performing different types of motions. Data gathered in the study will be of value, it is hoped, in establishing tests for selecting persons for certain jobs and in training personnel faster and more efficiently.

While UNOPAR presently is limited to research, it eventually will be perfected for industrial use. That it might have unusual applications outside the industrial engineering field is indicated by two inquiries received by Nadler. One asked about using it in a study of an infantryman's motions as he charges across a simulated battlefield, the other inquired about its use in studying the motions of a pilot flying a supersonic jet plane.

alyze Human Work

Newest One, Called UNOPAR, Undergoes Tests in Lab at Washington University—It Makes Time and Motion Studies by Sound

LIGHT PATTERN CAMERA

PATTERNS OF A SIMPLE TASK

CHART ANALYSIS

Electrocardiograms are examined by Nadler in studying effect of certain motion on heart. By co-ordinating them with UNOPAR graphs, a general relationship between hand movements and heart rate is made.

HEART DURING REST

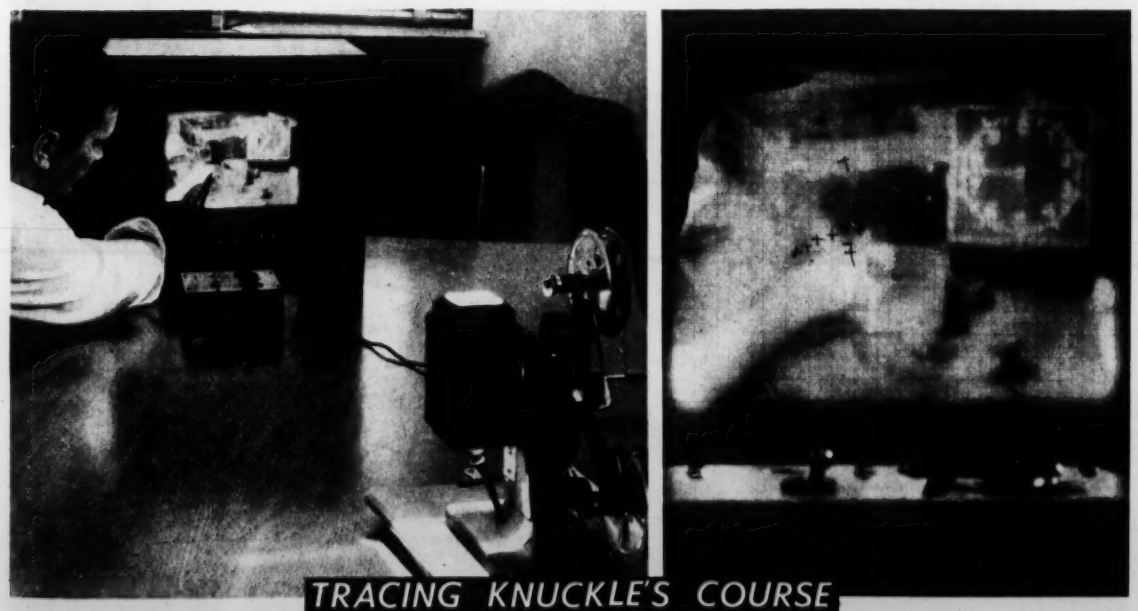

Electrocardiograph charts show normal heart action (above) of 71 beats per minute with body at rest and rapid action of heart (below), 90 beats per minute, with hands performing intricate task.

HEART DURING WORK

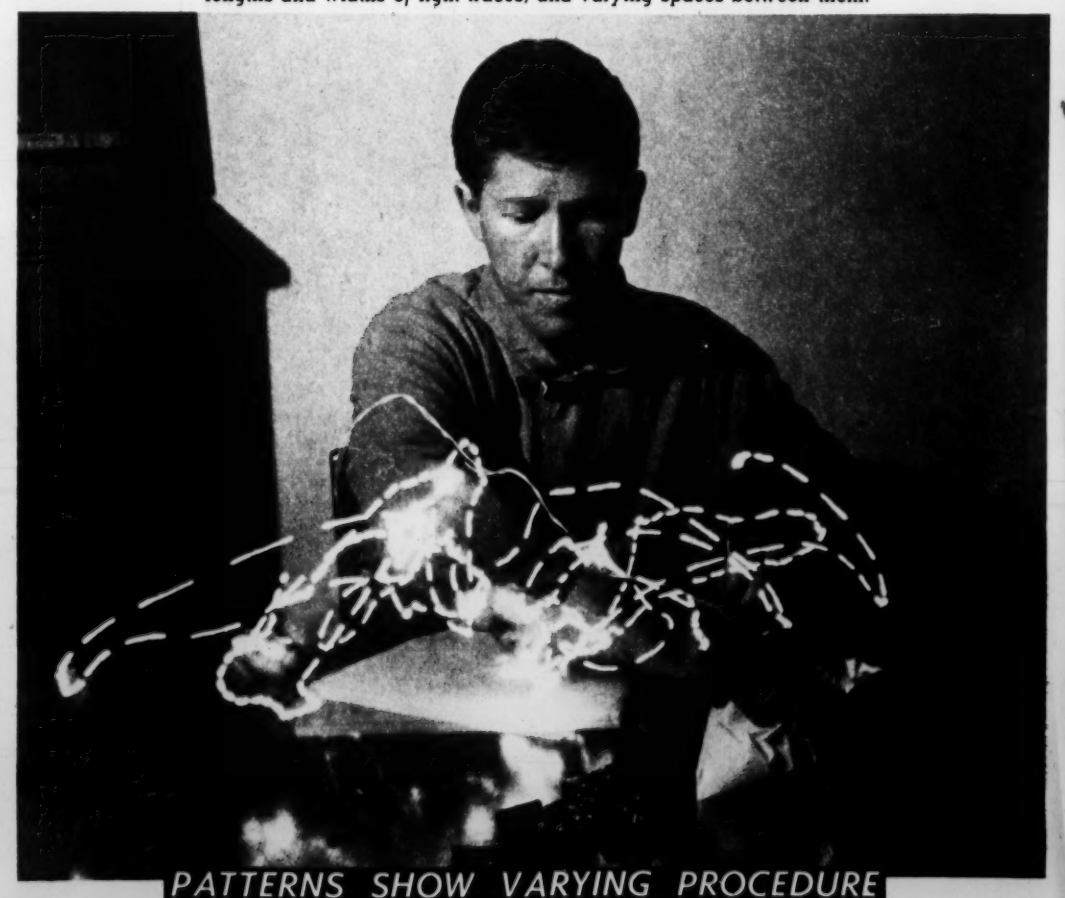

PATTERNS OF INTRICATE TASK

This is how more intricate hand motions, used in assembling a three-part microswitch and wrapping the finished product, look in a chronocyclegraph photo. Direction of motion is indicated by different lengths and widths of light traces, and varying spaces between them.

TRACING KNUCKLE'S COURSE

Movement of worker's hands on assembly job is analyzed through slow-motion movie which is projected one frame at a time. By projecting photo on graph paper in shadow box (photo, left) and marking point on paper coinciding with selected spot on hand, such as a knuckle or fingertip, motion of the hand can be plotted in one plane as it performs a task, as shown in close-up (photo, right). Clock device is included in movie for motion and time study purposes. This type of equipment provides only a two-dimensional representation of a three-dimensional motion, with the result that it is difficult to analyze and interpret the motion.

PATTERNS SHOW VARYING PROCEDURE

Repetitive operation is seldom performed in exactly the same way, as shown in another light pattern photo, even though worker may think he is following same procedure. This type of record, however, provides no information as to velocity, acceleration and distance of the various hand movements in three planes.

Graham Cracker Pancakes, Scout Style

1. Scoutmaster Hopper crushes graham crackers into a large mixing bowl. A campfire is started over which the pancakes will be fried on a griddle.

2. Eggs are added to milk, beating thoroughly. Then salt, vanilla and raisins are stirred in.

3. Milk mixture is poured over the crushed graham crackers, stirring until batter is thick and smooth.

By MERNA LAZIER

A SIMPLE egg-milk mixture containing a generous amount of raisins is added to crushed graham crackers to make an unusual pancake batter which has an especial appeal to young, hearty appetites. Ed Hopper, a St. Louis furrier and scoutmaster of Clayton Troop 21, originated the recipe for these cakes, which he embellishes with bananas for the troop's special Sunday treats.

The scouts have named the nourishing pancakes "Hopper Specials," and the troop often plays host to neighboring troops with this repast.

Hopper crushes the graham crackers to hasten the absorption of the egg-milk mixture which he flavors with vanilla, salt and raisins. Batter is poured onto a well-greased griddle and immediately slices of banana are placed on top of each cake. When browned underneath, the cakes are turned to brown on the other side. To serve, they are turned banana side up and are sprinkled generously with powdered sugar. With a little adeptness the griddle can be kept filled for a continuous supply of pancakes. They may be kept warm, but are also quite tasty when eaten cold. A small amount of baking powder may be added to the batter for a lighter cake, if desired, but it has a tendency to reduce the sweetness.

These amounts make from 14 to 16 cakes.

INGREDIENTS

- Ten graham crackers
- One cup white raisins
- One-half teaspoon vanilla
- Four eggs
- One-eighth teaspoon salt
- Two cups milk
- One-half to one teaspoon baking powder (optional)
- Three bananas

Actress Weds Playwright

Marriage of Marilyn Monroe, Arthur Miller Gets a Hectic Start

In a gay mood, Miss Monroe and Miller hold a New York press conference on their plans to wed.

International News Photos except as noted

Reporters keep watch outside Miller's summer home at Roxbury, Connecticut, waiting for Miller and Marilyn to appear. The news vigil was reminiscent of one kept in Beverly Hills during the break-up of Miss Monroe's marriage to DiMaggio.

THE MARRIAGE OF Film Actress Marilyn Monroe and Playwright Arthur Miller followed a courtship that got more turbulent as it went along. Following a more or less secret engagement of several months, and a week together at Miller's Roxbury, Massachusetts, home, they slipped away from a throng of newsmen, were quietly married at White Plains, New York, by a city judge. Two days later, a second ceremony was performed by a rabbi. The reporters' vigil at Roxbury, and the engaged couple's efforts to gain some privacy, culminated tragically. A woman French magazine correspondent, pursuing them in an automobile, was killed when her car hit a tree.

At the time he was introduced to Miss Monroe, who was divorced from former New York Yankee slugger Joe DiMaggio last year, Miller and his first wife, his college sweetheart, were drifting apart. Their 17-year marriage ended in divorce last month. Miller, whose plays include "The Crucible," "A View From the Bridge," and Pulitzer prize-winning "Death of a Salesman," announced his intention to wed Miss Monroe during a recess at a House Un-American Activities Committee hearing in Washington. He was being questioned about Communist-front associations that he admitted maintaining in the late 1940s.

Newsmen follow Miss Monroe as she hastens to Miller's home following accident in which Mara Sherbatoff, reporter for the French picture magazine Match, was killed.

The actress, playwright and Miller's basset hound, Hugo. Miller, 41 years old, has two children by his first wife. Miss Monroe, 30, has been married twice previously.

World Record-Breakers At Olympic Tryouts

STRIVING FOR COVETED PLACES on the country's Olympic track and field team, American athletes set three world records during final tryouts for the team at the Los Angeles Coliseum last weekend.

One of the new records made the long-sought seven-foot high jump mark a reality when Charley Dumas of Compton Junior College, Los Angeles, cleared seven feet, five-eighths inch. The astonishing performance of the 19-year-old freshman (photo above) in becoming the first man to leap seven feet compares with the breaking of the four-minute-mile barrier in running. The old record, set in 1953, was six feet 11½ inches.

Lou Jones of the Army clipped two-tenths of a second off his own world record in the 400 meters when he ran the distance in 45.2 seconds. He is shown in photo at left breaking the tape ahead of Jim Lea (partly hidden) and J. W. Mashburn. In the 400 meter hurdles, Glenn Davis of Ohio State and Eddie Southern of Texas match strides at the last barrier (photo at right); Davis won by an eyelash in the world record time of 49.5 seconds, nine-tenths of a second faster than previous mark set by Russia's Yuri Lituyev in 1953.

Ernie and Edie

Combined Talents Run Pay Into Six Figures

By Virginia Irwin

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, July 7.

ERNIE KOVACS and his co-star wife, singer Edie Adams, whose new comedy variety show moved into the "Caesar's Hour" time spot (KSD-TV, 7 p.m. Monday) this past week, turn a pretty penny with their combined talents. Last year they wound up with a six-figure income through their various chores in television, radio and assorted other entertainment endeavors, including a supper-club stint for Edie at New York's swank Persian Room. This year, on the wave of their fast-rising popularity, they stand to do even better.

Interviewed over a hefty breakfast, off-beat humorist Ernie and singer-comedienne Edie told how their separate careers crossed and in 1954 resulted in both marriage and a show-business partnership.

EDIE SAYS HER husband's encouragement is responsible for the blossoming of her comic talent, which will get full play on their new evening show with Edie doing such bits as her hilarious impression of Eva Gabor reading Shakespeare in a heavy Hungarian accent and Marilyn Monroe singing Schubert lieder. The new show also will feature top guest stars and continue with the Kovacs's "Kultured Kharacters" such as Poet Percy Dovetonsils; Howard, the world's strongest ant; Wolfgang von Sauerbraten, the German disc jockey, and the bon vivant, Pierre Ragout.

Of Hungarian descent, Ernie was born in Trenton, N.J., "some 35 years ago" and was something of a standout in high school operettas. As a result of his singing of the role of the pirate king in "Pirates of Penzance," he received seven scholarships to acting and singing institutions.

A FEW YEARS LATER Ernie was singing leads in stock companies on Long Island and then formed his own company, writing, directing, playing leads and designing scenery. Eventually he turned to radio and did announcing, served as a disc jockey, and later became a newscaster on various stations in Trenton, New York and Philadelphia. He also wrote a humorous daily newspaper column in Trenton for five years, turned out gags for nightclub comics, did voices for a movie cartoon outfit, wrote and did character voices and narration for commercial TV cartoons, and created several quiz shows.

In Philadelphia, Ernie has his own TV show where he established such grand old institutions as EEFMS (Early Eyeball Fraternal Marching Society) and first introduced the Kovacs gallery of Kultured Kharacters who have since been standard features on his morning show (KSD-TV, 9:30 a.m. weekdays).

Since Ernie moved his comic wares to

All St. Louis TV stations are now on Central Daylight Saving time. Listings of nearby cities are Central Standard Time except for KHQA-TV, WGEM, WTVP and WCIA-TV.

Ernie Kovacs as seen in roles of "kultured kharacters" he introduces on his comedy show on KSD-TV at 7 Monday nights.

New York, he has been busy doing radio and TV, sometimes working two or three programs at once. Besides his television activities, he continues to do a three-hour daily radio program on ABC.

IT WAS WHILE he was doing TV in Philadelphia that Edie Adams was brought to his attention. The director of Ernie's program saw Edie on an Arthur Godfrey "Talent Scouts" program and suggested that Ernie give her a job.

"I didn't win the Talent Scouts program," says Edie, "but I did eventually, win a husband."

Born Edith Enke in Kingston, Pa., Edie, as she prefers to be called, attended Juilliard School of Music in New York and the Columbia School of Dramatic Arts. She was dead set on an operatic career. When she began to doubt that she would ever make the grade, she turned to pop singing and got her first break singing with a combo in a Toronto, Canada, nightclub.

After a stint with Ernie on Philadelphia TV, Edie got her Broadway baptism—and rave reviews—in "Wonderful Town." George Abbott, the producer who cast her as "Eileen" in the smash Broadway musical, described her as "a beautiful girl with a wonderful voice. But her assets are her sincerity and versatility as a performer."

Married now for almost two years, Edie and Ernie live, not quietly but happily, in a "17 rooms, 7 baths and 4 terraces" apartment overlooking Central Park. With them are Ernie's two daughters by a previous marriage, Betty, 9, and Kippy, 7, who show every sign of growing up to be chips off the old Kovacs' comic bloc.

The Television Letter Box

Letters Intended For This Column Should Be Addressed To Television Editor, TV Magazine, Post-Dispatch, St. Louis 1, Mo.

THE PROGRAM listed for noon Sunday, June 24, on KSD-TV was not telecast at that time. Instead there was an uninteresting program about some fellow with a little girl. Please stay with your schedule. VIEWER.

(Sometimes program changes are made after TV Magazine goes to press. A box published on the Sunday Post-Dispatch radio page calls attention to these changes.—Editor).

Thanks to KSD-TV for televising the Governors' Conference from Atlantic City. The discussion on state aid versus federal aid for schools was most enlightening for the public.
MARGARET ELIZABETH HUGHES.

I don't agree with the Letter Box letter from Mrs. M.C. criticizing Elvis Presley. What's wrong with him? I think he is the best new singer we have had in a long time. He puts himself into his song. I hope you have him on a hundred more times.
GAYLE

Will "Soldiers of Fortune" return to television? Our whole family enjoyed it.
MRS. SHAWN CRAWFORD

Thanks to KWK-TV for showing "The Unlighted Road" starring the late James Dean. Many of us hope to see more of his pictures on television.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

AT THIS YEAR'S "Blessing of the Animals" in New York's Greenwich Village, Miss Lee — still a pet lover — holds three of her Siamese cats while Father Anthony Philippe gives the blessing.

THE AUTHOR, aged 8 (l.) and her sister, June Havoc, 6, pose during their vaudeville days.

I'll always remember . . .

One day in Omaha

by GYPSY ROSE LEE

My sister June and I spent our childhood trouping in vaudeville. Animals weren't easy to troupe, but Mother believed in children having pets, especially show children. At one time or another we trouped a lamb, a goose, a piglet, a monkey, dogs, chameleons, white mice, rabbits, turtles and guinea pigs. These last were the easiest to smuggle on trains. When they died Mother quickly replaced them, and we were told the old ones had gone to Heaven.

Our pets shared our lives with us. They ate in the same restaurants, slept in the same hotels. When we were invited by the theater manager's wife in Omaha, Neb., to attend Sunday School with her children, we dressed carefully for the occasion. There might have been a bit of makeup behind our ears and our fingernails weren't very clean, but our guinea pigs wore their best striped sweaters.

June and I assumed, of course, that the guinea pigs had been included in the invitation. But the theater owner and his wife took one look and said absolutely no.

I still remember how puzzling this was to me as a child. If our guinea pigs were welcome in Heaven, why not in Sunday School?

Years later I was invited by Alice Manchester, head of New York's Greenwich Village Humane League, to attend their annual "Blessing of the Animals" in Greenwich Village. I didn't know Alice then, nor the wonderful work she was doing in finding homes for stray animals. I'm not even sure why I accepted the invitation, but I'm glad I did. I watched the priest bless the scrubbed, beribboned alley cats, dogs, turtles and hamsters; I saw the proud, happy faces of their little owners. And I heard the words that would have reassured me on that day in Omaha: ". . . so God formed every kind of living creature and He blessed them . . ."

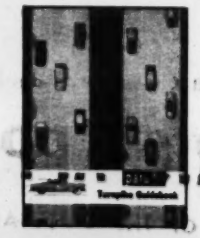

The little boy standing next to me smiled down on his pink-eyed white rat. "See, Pinkie," he murmured. "What did I tell you?" ■

WALLY POST:

Homers but no headlines

by JOHN DEVANEY

POWER in Post's swing comes from his wrists, as this picture shows. He needs lots of wrist

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

He hit 40 home runs last year, outsocking such famous sluggers as Mickey Mantle, Stan Musial, Roy Campanella, Ted Williams, Larry Doby and Yogi Berra. This season he's been making baseballs disappear over fences at a steady rate, is a good bet to be the home-run king of the National League.

Traditionally, such feats would make Redleg right fielder Wally Post one of the best-known men in America. From Babe Ruth to Mantle, the home-run hitter has been a national idol. He's showered with glory (home-run hitters, for example, will dominate the line-ups for the All-Star Game in Washington this Tuesday); he's paid a salary that may hit $100,000 a year. Ex-homer king Ralph Kiner summed it up best: "Players who hit homers travel in Cadillacs; players who hit singles ride in Fords."

But despite having banged a homer every 18 times up during 1954 and '55 (a rate only slightly behind Mantle's), the 6', 200-lb. Post has neither an astronomical salary nor national fame. He makes about $18,000 a year and his handsome, high-cheekboned face (see front cover) is just a featureless oval to most fans. Moreover, no press agents measure the length of his blows; no sports-writers dub him with nicknames; no TV shows bid for his presence; no sick boys in hospitals ask him to "hit one for me."

The reason? Explains Post, thoughtfully: "I guess it's because in baseball most of the publicity is about one guy on a club. With us, that's Klu [first baseman Ted Kluszewski]; he's the one the fans come out to see. And that's the way it should be, since he's been around longer than I and hits more home runs [47 last season]."

His lack of fame doesn't bother Post at all. "I've never given it much thought," he says. "To tell you the truth, I'm just awfully glad to be up here."

He almost didn't make it. Post was signed to a Redleg contract while still in a St. Henry, Ohio, high school — but as a pitcher. A week after graduating in June, 1947, he was on the mound for Muncie, Ind., a Redleg farm team. He racked up an imposing 17-7 record, was promoted in '48 to Columbia, S.C., where he won 8 games — but lost 11, plus one hurling arm. (A pulled tendon in his right shoulder finished the arm for pitching.)

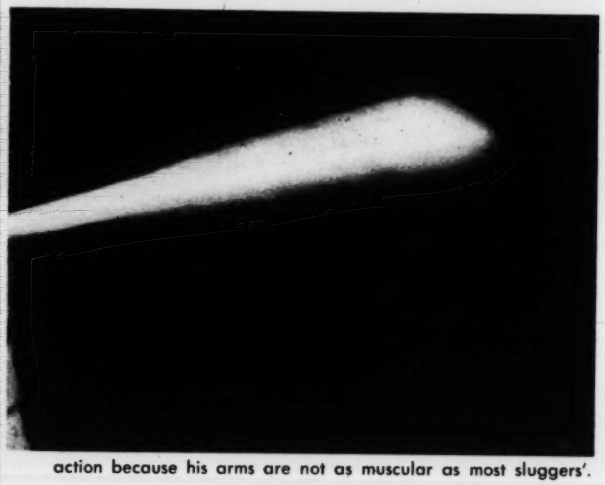

The Redlegs made him an outfielder and for four years he bounced around the minors with only mixed success, getting three shots with Cincinnati but always being sent back down. In 1953 he turned up at Indianapolis, then managed by Birdie Tebbetts.

"He gave me what I needed," says a grateful Post. "I'd been shipped out so much I was beginning to doubt I'd ever make the majors. But Birdie told me I had a chance to be good; he made me believe in myself."

Post promptly made everyone else believe too by cracking 33 homers for Indianapolis, driving in 120 runs. Up with the Redlegs in 1954, he started off badly; but Tebbetts (brought up also as Redleg manager) stuck with him, and Post finally came around, whacking 18 homers for the season. Last year was his best — a .309 average and 109 runs-batted-in to go with his 40 homers.

He nevertheless seems surprised and embarrassed to be considered a star, even flushes during interviews when his homers are mentioned. "He's a plain, All-American kind of guy," says Tebbetts, "who goes out and does the job, but does it so quietly that people don't notice him."

During the off-season, Post (he'll be 27 tomorrow) lives with his wife Patsy and their four children in a rambling ranch house near St. Henry, works as a sales representative for his father-in-law's cannery. Though shy and reticent on most subjects, he can talk a blue streak on his favorite pastime — hitting — and has some definite ideas on the subject. Items:

- "Best way to hit homers is to try to hit singles. You don't have to swing for the fences; just meet the ball well and it will go. Four or five times a year I'll aim for a homer — but I've succeeded only once in my life. The score was 5-3 against us in the ninth in a 1954 game with the Cubs and we had two men on. I swung for the homer that would win and got it. Surprised? I almost fell down."
- "Toughest ball parks for me are Milwaukee's County Stadium and the Polo Grounds in New York. There it's almost impossible to hit homers except along the foul lines and I get most of my homers to center and left center."
- "Too many homers in baseball? I think most fans would rather see a free-scoring 10-9 game than a dull 1-0 pitching duel."
- "I never think about breaking Ruth's record of 60 in a season. The guy in this league who's got the best chance to break it is the Giants' Willie Mays. Though he's right-handed like myself, he's got the power to hit homers to right field; I hit only about three to right in a season."
- "A pitcher will throw close to a home-run hitter to keep you from getting too good a foothold. But you can't blame him — he's trying to make a living, too."

And on himself: "I like everything about baseball. There's nothing else I'd rather be doing — with or without the headlines." ■

Don't let your child get lead poisoning

Parents: For your own peace of mind, heed this warning from an expert

by DR. J. EDMUND BRADLEY Professor and Head of the Department of Pediatrics, University of Maryland School of Medicine

BALTIMORE.

ELLEN WAS 4, a lovely miniature of her mother: golden hair, blue eyes, fair skin. Her fair skin, in fact, is one reason she was brought several months ago to our Children's Clinic at University Hospital here.

Ellen was just a little too pale. She was listless, irritable, far more tired than a little girl has a right to be. Her stomach ached. Her mother wanted to know why.

As soon as we learned her home address — a run-down building in an old part of town — we had a working clue. And when we completed our series of medical tests, the diagnosis was positive: "Lead poisoning."

Ellen's mother was thunder-struck. Who wouldn't be? Who, after all, hears of lead poisoning in a child? Yet lead poisoning among the nation's youngsters is arousing increasing concern in physicians and public-health authorities throughout the country. Indeed, there is evidence that lead poisoning is far more widespread than is generally believed. Far too often the result is severe injury — even death.

Statistics on the subject are not too reliable. The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare reports 231 deaths from accidental poisoning by lead and lead compounds from 1951 through 1954 (latest figures available). But lead poisoning is not an officially reportable disease; most communities maintain no records on it.

Significantly, however, 176 of the 231 deaths just mentioned were children under 5. And here in Baltimore alone, the Department of Health reports 461 cases of lead poisoning among children from 1931 through 1954. Of these, 104 died.

Besides killing them, what does lead poisoning do to children? Sometimes the victim gets the dread, often fatal encephalitis (brain inflammation). In other cases he remains emotionally and mentally crippled for life. Doctors feel that one-third of all children who are poisoned by lead will carry the after-effects with them forever. In fact, in one long-term study of 20 very young children who contracted lead poisoning, 19 showed signs of mental slowness or deficiency when researchers tested them three to nine years later.

At our Children's Clinic we have established a procedure under which every patient who is treated for any reason is also tested for lead. In one sampling of 350 children, we found an excessive lead concentration in 44.4 per cent — more than four out of 10. Although these youngsters had not yet shown any symptoms of poisoning, the basis already existed for serious trouble.

How does lead enter the body of a child? There are many possible sources, among them lead toys, lead foil, drinking water from lead pipes, fumes from fires in which old storage-battery casings are burned. But the most widespread single source is lead paint. And lead paint is part of the inescapable surroundings of millions of this country's youngsters. It covers walls, woodwork, window sills, porches, fences and, sometimes, toys and furniture.

It is true that builders and reputable manufacturers now avoid using lead paint wherever children can come in contact with it. Furthermore, lead paint now costs more than other kinds; this gives builders a reason for using it only on outside work, for its weathering qualities. But millions of American families live in older apartments or houses. On the walls of many such homes there are heavy coats of lead paint under the more recent, non-lead paint. When these walls peel, the fragments contain at least some of the old lead paint from underneath.

Even this wide distribution of lead would hold no perils were children not so curious. Children are natural explorers, and the very young child explores with its mouth. It sucks and chews on thumbs and toys. So, too, with paint peelings and leaded plaster fragments.

This is how we reconstructed Ellen's case. First she nibbled on paint curls. Then she tried her teeth on the window sill. Her mother never noticed the chewed paint peelings. When asked why she hadn't stopped her daughter from gnawing on the sill, she gave us a familiar answer:

"What for? A little dirt never hurt anyone."

The New York City Department of Health had a similar experience when it surveyed the parents of 80 children who suffered lead poisoning. In all 80 cases the parents "saw nothing wrong" with paint-nibbling.

There is an additional element of danger in the current "do-it-yourself" practice, which finds Father taking advantage of the balmy weather to spruce up the back fence and use the left-over paint on the crib or playpen. Perhaps he "does" the porch and then makes Junior a present of a bright, new coat of paint for his pull-wagon — and, with it, the possibility of a severe case of lead poisoning.

Because most victims we see come from old, poor homes, we were startled when a little girl whose family had just moved into a new, expensive private house was brought in with lead poisoning. Obviously, the problem was not one of peeling paint. How, then, could the child gain access to so much lead in such a short time?

Her father racked his brains. And finally he remembered: "There's the picket fence in the back yard, of course. I bought a small can of paint and laid on a thick coat a few days ago."

It wasn't peeling at all. Actually, it was something much worse. The father, being an unskilled painter, had sloshed the paint on liberally. The drippings had hardened into the "candles" characteristic of amateur work. The little girl had broken them off and popped them into her mouth, swallowing a fresh, almost pure dose of lead.

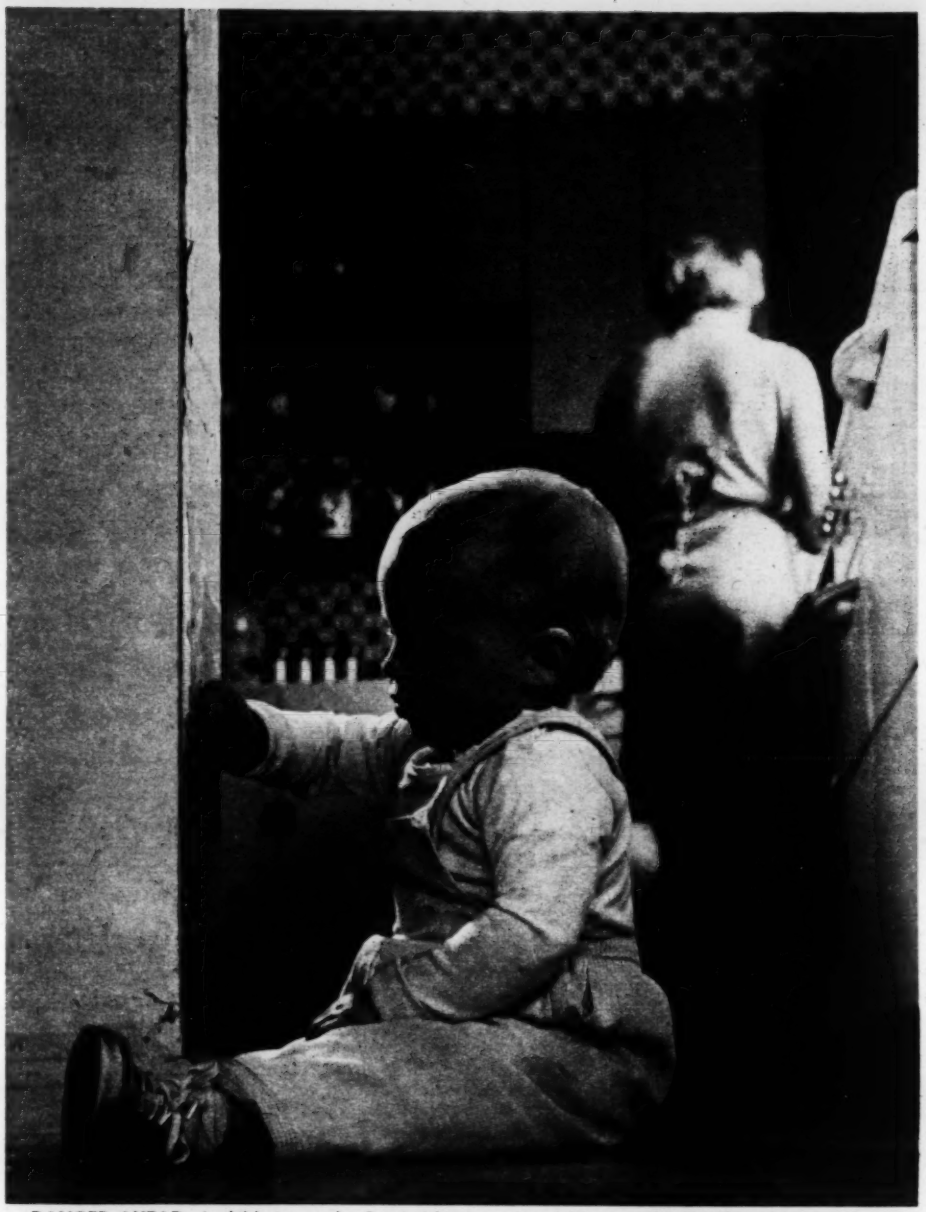

Once the lead enters the body, it finds its way to that body substance with which it has the greatest affinity, the calcium of the bones. If the dose is small, and not repeated, there may never be any real harm. The body will slowly get rid of the accumulated lead, approximately half of the remaining lead leaving in each five-month period.

But it is very rare for a child to content itself with

About the author...

Dr. Bradley and his staff are known throughout the U.S. as pioneers in the effort to stamp out lead poisoning, an ailment still not fully understood even by doctors.

DANGER AHEAD: A child sits on the floor picking flakes of old wall paint. Lead poisoning most often hits children aged 1-2½. There appear to be more serious cases in summer than at other seasons.

a single dose, and so the poison begins to accumulate. Slowly the lead concentration builds up. The potential is created for disaster.

Sometimes the explosion is spontaneous. More often, it is triggered by an infection of some sort, which disturbs the body metabolism. In Ellen's case, it was a simple cold, such as any child might have. But Ellen was harboring lead in her system.

Released by the effects of the cold, the lead flowed from her bones into her blood stream and then to her brain and nervous system. If allowed to go far enough, it would have caused encephalitis, convulsions — ultimately, death. As it was, before Ellen's mother brought her to the Clinic, the little girl's normally cheerful disposition had changed drastically. She found it difficult to keep food down. Her head and stomach ached. These symptoms, coupled with Ellen's unnatural pallor and general weakness, had driven her mother to seek medical advice.

Once the physician starts to look for it, the diagnosis of lead poisoning is fairly standard. X-ray examination may reveal a characteristically greater density at the growing ends of long bones and the growing margins of flat bones, where lead generally concentrates. Blood and urine are tested for excessive lead. The blood is examined microscopically for a red-cell condition known as "basophilic stippling." Spinal taps may provide corroborative evidence, and sometimes scrutiny of the gums reveals the so-called "lead line" close to the base of the teeth.

Until fairly recently, there was no really safe, effective method for removing lead from the human system. One of the better known forms of medication has been BAL (British Anti-Lewisite), a substance which was developed as a means of removing the arsenic which Lewisite war gas tends to deposit in the bones. BAL draws the lead from the bones into the blood stream. But the compound it forms is apparently unstable, tending to break down easily, with the result that lead may actually be sped on its way to the brain and other parts of the body.

Now, however, we have something new, effective and safe. This is calcium disodium EDTA (ethylene diamine tetra-acetic acid), a chemical which, interestingly, was first used as a remover of scale in boilers.

Working under a grant from the Playtex Park Research Institute of Dover, Del., a foundation which has sponsored extremely valuable research in child health, a member of our Medical School staff, Dr. Samuel P. Bessman, Associate Professor of Pediatrics, introduced the use of this substance for the de-leading of humans.

In its first phase, calcium disodium EDTA works in much the same way as BAL. It removes the lead from the bones and passes it into the blood stream. But at this point there is an important difference. EDTA combines with lead in an extremely stable compound and grips it firmly until the kidneys can expel it.

The drug comes in the form of a white powder which, mixed with a salt solution, is injected three times a day for three to five days. (In some cases of mild poisoning, oral dosage may be used instead.) Three to five days of rest then are followed by an additional three to five days of treatment. This was the schedule followed with Ellen. Fortunately, she was treated in time and cured.

The fight against lead poisoning is being waged on several fronts. One is the development of EDTA. Another is through law and the cooperation of progressive paint manufacturers. Few communities, however, have taken effective legislative action. One exception is New York City, which now enforces an ordinance providing for the labeling of all paints sold with lead concentrations in excess of 1 per cent.

Other Cities Please Note

Another is Baltimore, where the use of lead-based paints in interior work is strictly forbidden. Since 1951, moreover, there has been on the books a statute providing that in any apartment where a child develops lead poisoning from eating paint chips, the owner must remove all the old lead paint from the walls and repaint with less toxic material.

Of course, the basic solution lies with the parents. Keeping the child away from lead is the first, most important consideration. Sometimes this is not enough.

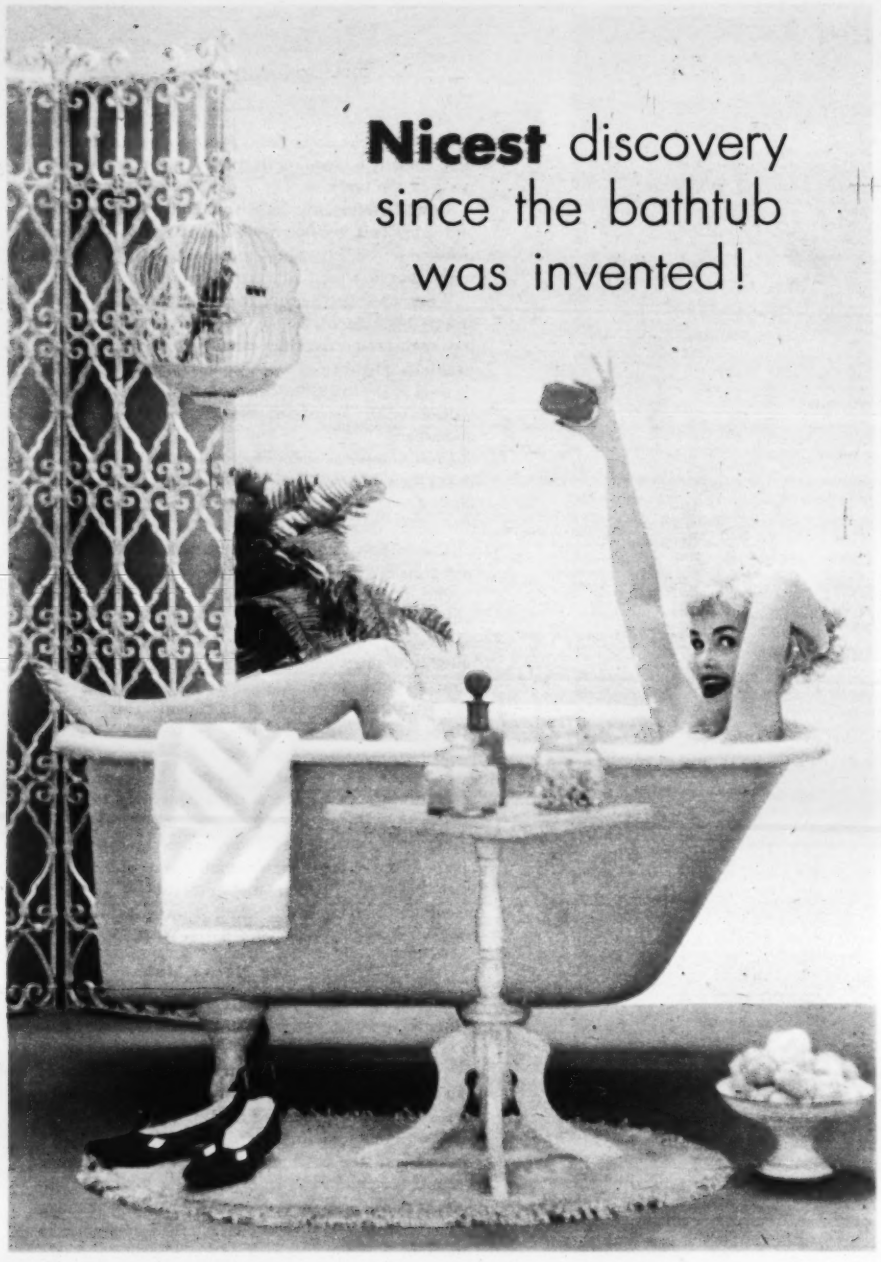

The mother who detects characteristic symptoms in the child — pallor, loss of appetite, colic — should consult a physician. These symptoms are by no means specific to lead poisoning, but they always signify some sort of trouble and should be checked immediately. If, even without noting symptoms in her child, a mother sees tooth marks on the window sills or finds bits of chewed paint or fragments of plaster, she should lose no time in consulting her doctor.

The mother who has not until now realized the danger which lead paint possesses for her child may take rueful comfort in a case which was treated at our Clinic fairly recently. The victim was a little boy with the characteristic signs of lead poisoning. Laboratory tests confirmed our opinion that he had taken a very large dose of lead. As usual, we asked the parents whether they had seen the child chewing or sucking on any painted surface.

"Yes," the father said, "he's been chewing on the crib. I repainted it just a few weeks ago."

Like many another parent, he had neglected to check the sort of paint he was using.

And he was a physician. ■

Brainy blonde from Baton Rouge

Actress Cleo Moore has big ambitions

by LLOYD SHEARER PARADE WEST COAST CORRESPONDENT

HOLLYWOOD.

"In 1960," says Cleo Moore, "I'm going to run for Governor of Louisiana. I was married to Huey Long's son for six weeks, and while that doesn't make me an authority on politics, I know a lot about Louisiana. Matter of fact, I'm related to 50 per cent of the people down there. I'm sure I stand a good chance of getting elected."

From most actresses, such talk would sound either headline-happy or badly in need of an asylum. Not from Cleo. At 27, this canary blonde of spectacular charms (38½-22-36) is recognized out here as one of the sharpest characters around, one who makes outlandish statements come true.

Ten years ago, for example, when Cleo and her family first arrived in Hollywood, she turned to her worried father. "Daddy," she told him, "don't you fret none. One day your Cleo's going to own this town, and she's going to be a movie star, too."

Murphy O'Moore recalls: "I thought the child was a little tetched in the head. But by gum, she's seen it through."

Today Cleo is not only a full-fledged movie star with 18 pictures to her credit (Bait, Turmoil, Women's Prison, Over-Exposed); she is also a real-estate tycoon. In addition to her own $100,000 estate, she heads an investment corporation which holds property valued at $250,000 and currently is embarking on a million-dollar sports center in the San Fernando Valley. Meanwhile Cleo has wiggled her way out of a contract with Columbia Pictures so that she can freelance for more money.

"I've always had a good business head," she explains calmly. "When I was 13 I did all the buying and bookkeeping for our store in Baton Rouge. Heck, I wasn't even 15 when I was graduated from Gonzales High. That's when I ran off with Palmer, Huey Long's boy, and got married. We went out West on a honeymoon for six weeks. And that's exactly how long the marriage lasted. When we got back I talked Daddy into selling the store and coming out to Hollywood with Mother and my three sisters. Ever since I'd been a kid, I wanted to be a movie star.

"The $2,000 Daddy got for the store was our whole bankroll. When we arrived here, it was right after the war and there was a housing shortage, so I went to a real-estate agent. He had some land for sale with a house on it for $16,000. I asked him real nice if he'd take $2,000 down. He agreed, so I put Daddy to work — he's a wonderful carpenter — fixing the house. The rest of us put in a lawn and painted and did everything. Less than two months later I sold the house for $18,000. Then I divided the rest of the land into six lots and sold them off at $6,500 each."

Before long, Cleo was not only supporting the whole family but spending well over $100 a week for dramatics and dancing lessons. She got rid of her Southern accent after two years' hard work, then landed a bit part with Robert Ryan and Ida Lupino in On Dangerous Ground at RKO. From then on she was "in." Soon Columbia signed her.

She's Been Getting Around

A year ago, because she has the equipment to fascinate photographers and editors, Columbia sent Cleo on the road to exploit her pictures. She didn't mind. "But," she says firmly, "when they had me traveling all over selling Jimmy Stewart in The Man from Laramie, a picture I wasn't even in, and then wouldn't give me any good parts of my own, I rebelled.

"I'm tired of being treated like a dumb blonde. I want parts like Kim Novak gets. I'm sure I can handle them.

"That's one of the reasons why I want to go back to Louisiana and run for Governor. I hope to go back in 1958 and re-establish my residence. Then in 1959 and 1960 I plan to stump the state and campaign."

What will her platform be?

For a moment Cleo's blue eyes grow meditative, then they sparkle. "I'm going to promise the people of Louisiana," she announces, "more of everything, more of the finer things in life. My campaign slogan is going to be 'More with Moore' or 'What Louisiana Needs Is a Blonde in Baton Rouge.'"

Having watched her parlay $2,000 into a fortune and two curves into screen stardom, Hollywood at this point is not selling Cleo Moore's political ambitions short. ■

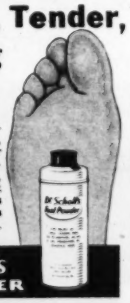

ON-SCREEN, Cleo has her first solo starring role in Columbia's Over-Exposed. The actor above is Richard Crenna.

DOUBLE-DECKERS

6 slices whole wheat bread
6 slices white bread
Chicken and Ham fillings
Lightly butter bread slices if desired. Use 3 bread slices and 2 fillings for each sandwich. Cut each sandwich in half diagonally. For 2 of the sandwiches, start with brown bread ending with brown. For remaining 2, reverse procedure. Place halves together to make a brown and white topped sandwich.

Chicken Filling:
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon hot-pepper sauce
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 cup ground cooked chicken
½ cup finely diced celery
½ teaspoon monosodium glutamate
Add lemon juice, salt and pepper sauce to mayonnaise; mix well. Put chicken and celery in mixing bowl; sprinkle with monosodium glutamate. Add mayonnaise mixture and toss lightly.

Ham Filling:
2 cans (4½ oz. each) ham (or tongue) spread
1 pkg. (3 oz.) cream cheese
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
2 tablespoons finely diced pickle
Combine all ingredients; beat until blended.

PRALINE APPLE-CHIP CAKE

1 package instant apple-chip cake mix
Praline Topping

While cake is still hot, spread evenly with Praline Topping. Return to oven for about 5 minutes, or until topping is bubbly and golden brown. Cool; cut in pan.

Praline Topping:
Combine ½ cup firmly packaged brown sugar, 2 tablespoons cake flour, ¼ cup melted butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons water, ½ cup finely chopped nuts. Mix well.

A new approach to faith

Teenagers now go out to recruit other teenagers for God

by KARL KOHRS

PRACTICING in South Norwalk church, Mission team hands girl playing role of "prospect" a recruitment card, on which she indicates her wish to join movement.

SOUTH NORWALK, CONN.

"We'd like to talk to you about religion."

This greeting has surprised a number of teenagers who have answered the doorbell here recently. At the door, they find two young people — usually a boy and a girl. Asked in, the visitors courteously explain that they are members of the Christian Witness Mission, a project of the Methodist Youth Fellowship. The purpose of their call, they say, is to interest other young people of their own age in thinking seriously about spiritual matters.

It soon becomes apparent that the visitors are not starry-eyed "salesmen" of any particular brand of religion. They are part of a novel and exciting youth movement that can give a new and more profound meaning to personal faith. The photos on these pages show a typical Christian Witness Mission in action, centered at the First Methodist Church here.

The young people shown were among 45 who gathered at the church for a Week-end Mission. First they were briefed on what is called "Evangelical Visitation." This involves the proper approach to a prospect — a teen-age boy or girl who, so far as local church leaders know, has no religious affiliation. Experienced Mission teams demonstrated visitation techniques by playing the roles of the visitors and those visited.

Fourfold Effort

Then the teams started out, two by two, and visited an average of five prospects each. Their objective was fourfold: 1) To find the unchurched youth; 2) To enroll youth in the Methodist Youth Fellowships; 3) To lead young people in commitment to Christ; 4) To help them witness as Christians.

But leaders stress that recruiting as such is secondary. The main reason for talking to the teenagers is to start them thinking about religion. The teams are advised to keep their conversations "Christ-centered."

In South Norwalk — as is generally true wherever the Missions operate — the teams are cordially received. But the job isn't a pushover, by any means. It takes courage to face up to cynicism, indifference or even rudeness. The father of one teenager, for example, interrupted the talk to say he took a dim view of religion and didn't want to see any child of his "mixed up in this sort of thing."

Another father termed all preachers "parasites who exploit young people and make them waste other people's time." In this case, the boy of the Mission team quietly asked permission to explain his own viewpoint, and that led to a two-hour discussion. The next Sunday, the father, his wife and his teen-age daughter attended church for the first time. Before the good work thus begun was over, the father himself had become an active church worker.

As for the teen-age prospects, the teams report, the usual reaction is: "It looks all right to me. I'd like to enroll and find out more about it."

This kind of response reflects the current resurgence of interest in religion among the youth of America. As leaders of all faiths point out, the part played in church activities by young people today is one of the things that is making religion an increasingly potent force in community life. One reason is that so many young people share in exerting this force.

The total membership of the six major faiths in America is around 93½ million. Of this number — and only a rough estimate is possible — upwards of 15 million are teenagers. Many more may well be participating in church-directed activities, even though they are not members.

In the nation's 300,000 churches of PROSPECT Dick Gilbert (center) shows interest as Judy Edwards, Norman Marland explain Fellowship Movement.

Main job lies ahead for Mission teams all faiths, these youngsters channel their activities into thousands of local and national organizations — study groups, hobby clubs, athletic clubs, fellowship leagues. These bear such diverse names as Youth Honor Group, Holy Name Society, Christian Youth Council, National Young Judaea, Westminster Fellowship, St. Aloysius Society and so on.

Everywhere there is evidence that more and more young people are participating in church life. Adults are giving them more responsibility, naming them as official representatives of the church or appointing them to committees.

One important development, leaders report, is that young people do not regard their church-centered activities as merely recreational. There is an increasing emphasis on religious thinking. Young people are seriously studying the meaning of their faith.

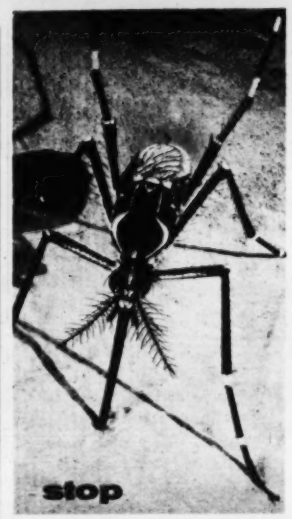

This spiritual awareness is largely responsible, Methodists say, for the fact that the Mission movement, now in its sixth year, is gaining new momentum. Of the 107 Methodist Conferences (regional groups) in the U.S. and Hawaii, about 100 now have Missions.

The teams are not likely to run out of prospects. Churchmen point out that there are still millions of young people in America without religious affiliations. It is those to whom these dedicated teenagers want to say, "Let's talk about religion." ■

SONGFEST climaxes day of visiting as teams gather in church social room during the annual visitation effort.

⅛ cup less 1 tablespoon Spry
1 tablespoon boiling water
2 tablespoons buttermilk
1½ teaspoons honey
1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons chopped blanched salted peanuts

Put Spry in mixing bowl. Add boiling water, buttermilk and honey and whip with fork until all liquid is absorbed and a thick, smooth mixture is formed. Sift flour and salt together onto Spry-whip and stir quickly into a dough. Pick up and work into a smooth dough; shape into a flat round. Roll between two 12" squares of waxed paper into a circle ⅛" thick and about size of paper. Peel off top paper, sprinkle 2 tablespoons chopped peanuts over pastry, leaving about a 1" border plain. Re-cover with paper and gently roll peanuts into dough. Turn pastry and paper over and repeat process, rolling in remaining 2 tablespoons peanuts. Peel off top paper, place pastry in 9" pie pan, pastry next to pan. Remove paper, fit pastry into pan, trim ½" beyond pan, turn back even with edge of pan, flute rim. Prick shell all over with fork. Bake in very hot oven (450°F.) 10-14 min. Cool at room temperature. For a luscious ice cream pie, chill in refrigerator.

At serving time, fill shell with vanilla ice cream (1 qt. for 9" shell). Drizzle butterscotch sauce over ice cream, serve immediately.

Teen-age Topics

Here are some boy and girl problems from my current mail.

Q. I am 17 and have been going steady with a boy of 19 for six months. He calls faithfully every day, but rarely takes me anywhere. I know he likes me; and I like him. Should I tell him I want to go out on our dates, or start accepting invitations from other boys? — S.I., South Charleston, W. Va.

A. There can be many reasons for your boy friend's avoidance of social activity. If it isn't a matter of money, perhaps he is a serious student who, during the school year, has all he can do to keep up with his studies and athletic activities and must necessarily limit his dating. I think you need to examine this situation thoroughly. It may be that you have been going out too much and at too early an age.

Still, it is natural for a girl your age to go out socially. You can always suggest that he take you to parties or join with others of your group in activities, either at your own home or elsewhere, within reason. Don't let him take you out of circulation.

Q. I am 12 and have 6-year-old twin brothers. At 7:30 my mother has us go to bed. I don't think that is fair. What is the correct time for a 12-year-old, who is a straight-A student, to go to bed? — D.J., Waukegan, Ill.

A. A 7:30 bedtime for a 12-year-old does seem early. Perhaps behind your mother's insistence on this hour is her need for a quiet time of her own with your father. If it's possible, compromise with her; agree to follow some quiet activity, such as reading, until say 8:30 or even 9, with lights out promptly then.

Q. A boy who likes me has asked me to go to his birthday party. It is during the summer and I told him I would be away. But he wants to postpone the party until I come back. If I don't like him, how can I refuse the invitation and yet not hurt his feelings? — C.D., Glen Rock, N.J.

A. Tell him you feel he should have his party on his birthday because you cannot tell now what your plans will be in the fall. Say that you cannot accept an invitation for so far in advance. If he still insists on postponing his party, you can refuse in the fall.

A lady need never accept an invitation she does not wish to accept. And she does not have to give any reason for her refusal, although she always should be polite about it.

Q. I have been taking accordion lessons for five years. Last year my accordion teacher moved to another state. Since then, I haven't found a teacher I like. Now I am in the seventh grade and find it difficult to practice my lessons and engage in school activities. My parents insist that I begin taking lessons again. What is your opinion? — M.S., Youngstown, Ohio.

A. I think you would be foolish not to go on when you have devoted so many years to the instrument. When you get to high school, you undoubtedly will be welcomed in the band and find that your accordion will help you toward popularity. With that to look forward to, surely you can find the time for lessons — and practicing, too.

All-Bran, you know, helps avoid irregularity due to lack of dietary bulk. And so often on a trip we eat differently and don't get the bulk we need (the gentle roughage that helps keep us regular).

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Our Story: GARM KNEELS BESIDE THE BROOK AND HOLDS PRINCE ARN WITHIN THE FOLDS OF HIS CLOAK. ALREADY HIS YOUNG MASTER IS DANGEROUSLY CHILLED, AND THE ICY FINGERS OF FEAR CLUTCH HIS STOUT HEART.

UNLACING HIS JERKIN HE HOLDS THE BOY AGAINST HIS OWN WARM BODY AND WRINGS OUT HIS GARMENTS AS DRY AS POSSIBLE.

GARM GOES AHEAD, LEANING AGAINST THE BITING WIND AND TRAMPING A PATH THROUGH THE DEEPENING SNOW. SOON EVEN THEIR STONE MARKERS ARE BURIED.

ARN STRUGGLES BRAVELY ON. EACH TIME HE STUMBLES HE RISES MORE AND MORE SLOWLY. EVEN AT THE BRINK OF EXHAUSTION GARM DOES NOT HELP HIM, FOR WELL HE KNOWS THAT ONLY HIS DESPERATE EFFORTS ARE KEEPING HIM FROM FREEZING!

ARN IS DIMLY AWARE THAT THEY ARE NO LONGER CLIMBING. THE GROUND SEEMS LEVEL. HAVE THEY AT LEAST REACHED THE PASS? THEN, THROUGH THE SWIRLING SNOW, HE SEES GARM'S RIGHT ARM DRAW BACK. THE HEAVY SPEAR FLASHES ON ITS WAY INTO THE MURK!

HE STAGGERS FORWARD AND COMES UPON GARM DEFTLY CUTTING OPEN A DEER. HE REMOVES THE ENTRAILS....

.....AND INTO THE HOT BODY CAVITY HE PLACES ARN. THEN HE WRAPS BOTH IN HIS CLOAK AND COVERS THEM WITH SNOW TO RETAIN THE HEAT. FAINTLY, AT A DISTANCE, GARM SEES A GROVE OF TREES THAT MAY OFFER SHELTER.

NEXT WEEK:—Survival.

VEL*

MAKES DISHES SHINE

WITHOUT WASHING OR WIPING!

"VEL SOAKS DISHES CLEAN—saves you all the hard work!"

Don't Wash—JUST SOAK
Dishes soak grease-free in seconds! No washing is needed. If food clings, a touch of the dishcloth gets it off. No greasy dishwater with Vel.

Don't Wipe—JUST RINSE
Just soak and rinse. Dishes dry without wiping! Even grease in pots and pans is so completely dissolved no hard scouring is needed.

Package for package—VEL CUTS GREASE BETTER

* Better than liquid detergents * Better than soap
* Better than the leading washday detergent

—and yet NO 'DETERGENT BURN' to hands!

PROVE IT YOURSELF!
"Hand-Heat Test" shows why:

Dip hands in water. Then put a tablespoonful of any leading washday detergent in one hand — put a tablespoonful of VEL in the other.

FEEL THE HEAT from washday detergents, indicating irritating alkalis and harsh chemicals that cause "Detergent Burn"!

FEEL NO HEAT with Vel because Vel contains no irritating alkalis or harsh washtub chemicals to cause "Detergent Burn"!

Vel is a miracle of mildness! Vel helps you avoid rough, red hands—causes no "Detergent Burn"!

MarVELous for dishes and finest fabrics.

*Vel is the trade-mark of the Colgate-Palmolive Company.

EARLY WYNN shows you how to throw his famous "knuckler" ...and how to get quick shaves... easy, clean shaves with comfort!

• "MY BIG PITCH really isn't a knuckler," says Early Wynn of the Cleveland Indians. "I get the butterfly effect of a knuckler with a regular overhand delivery and wrist snap, but I hold the ball with my fingertips as you see in the picture, because I get better control that way."

1. Wash your face (who doesn't!). Soap removes oil and softens beard. Apply a good shaving cream.

2. Then, with the Gillette Razor that's made for your beard, shave with diagonal strokes.

FOR MY DOUGH— THE ONLY WAY TO GET A DECENT SHAVE IS WITH A GILLETTE BLADE IN A GILLETTE RAZOR!
